AN AWFUL EXPERIENCE IN THE OHIO'S ICY WATER FIGHTING TO REACH SHORE

To Avoid Being Carried to Pittsburg W. S. Allen Took a Leap That Might Have Cost His Life.

Struggling in the icy waters of the Ohio, W. S. Allen, a young man well known in the city, had an awful experience and a narrow escape from death yesterday morning at the foot of Market street. That he was not carried to a watery grave is due to the slowness of the current at that point and his expert ability as a swimmer.

Allen is an employe of the Pilgrim Coal company and was on the float anchored a short distance above the wharf boat when the Clipper, a pool towboat of Pittsburg, landed for a supply of fuel. After the boat's crew had placed a sufficient amount in the fire boxes the boat pulled out from the float and dropped down to Market street, where she had left her tow of empty barges which had been gathered up near Bellaire.

Allen accepted the chance for a free ride and boarded the boat for the short trip. In less time than he had anticipated the crew had the boat attached to the fleet and while he was slowly enjoying himself inspecting her machinery in the engine room he was much surprised and somewhat taken back upon feeling the boat in motion. He realized that she had cut loose from short and had started up the river.

Knowing that the boat would make no more landings before arriving at Pittsburg and not wishing to visit the Smoky City, Allen determined upon a plan to reach shore which undoubtedly might have cost him his life. Without any apparent study over the situation and after the boat had reached a point some distance from the shore, he daringly leaped into the air and fell with a big splash into the cold water. His clothing and heavy shoes being a handrance he had an undesirable proposition ahead of his in his endeavor to reach shore and safety.

Like a Trojan he battled with the angry waves and being an excellent swimmer finally touched shore. And although nearly exhausted after his strenuous efforts he quickly made for home and got a change of clothing, took some stimulating medicine and in a few hours was little the worse for his experience.

Local Liquor Dealer Admits Having Made a Mistake, But Says Reports Were Exaggerated.

The sensational story purported to have come from East Liverpool and published in the Cincinnati Enquirer Saturday, concerning the firm of G. W. The article in question was evidently fixed up for the purpose of creating a stir, but the entire canard has been exploded in the light of the true version, which is given out by interested parties here.

The regular East Liverpool correspondent of the Enquirer did not send the article, and it is the general belief among those best posted on matters of this kind that the article was written in Cincinnati by Cincinnati parties.

G. W. Meredith was seen this morning and is inclined to laugh at the attempt to make a sensation of the affair. He said:

"The regulations governing the revenue department are very strict, not more so perhaps than they should be, but rules must be observed and in this case our firm has been thrown liable. I do not deny this, but am constrained to say that under the same circumstances other firms would and doubtless have made the same mistake.

In the haste to accommodate our customers certain clerical work was neglected, and this is the way we got into it. There is a penalty for the offense, and this we will undoubtedly have to pay.

"The revenue officers have been in East Liverpool no oftener recently than upon other occasions, as it has been the custom of the collectors to make our establishment their headquarters. Our relations have been of the most cordial always. They are not different at this time."

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

Arriving Passenger Could Not Believe That He Was in East Liverpool.

EVERYTHING WAS CHANGED

And the Surprised Man Said It All Reminded Him of a Fairy Tale — A Peculiar Man's Peculiar Experience in the Crockery City.

Wearing a plug hat, a necktie emblematic of the grand old stars and stripes, President Roosevelt's likeness over his heart and other conspicuous decorations, Frederick Vogel alighted at the depot yesterday morning from the west bound train. His makeup with peculiar actions at once made him the cynosure of all eyes.

For a moment he stood as if spellbound, gazing in an absent-minded way into space. Spectators were reminded of the cartoonist's picture of a rural man's first visit to New York city, looking with awe at some sky scraper. Officer McDermott was in the crowd and he at once decided that the man was laboring under the stress of insanity. Up to the stranger walked the officer and abruptly blurted:

"What are you looking for, old man?"

"What am I looking for? I am looking for Liverpool."

The officer was then more convinced that the man was demented when he continued.

"The conductor on that train told me that this was East Liverpool. I believed him because I thought he knew his business. And maybe he does, but there is one thing certain

HOMELESS GIRL HAS FALLEN ILL

Case of Scarlet Fever in a Broading House Develops Complications.

THE PATIENT'S REMOVAL

Is Desired By the Proprietress And the Township Trustees Have Been Consulted—Sad Plight of a Colored Domestic from Coraopolis.

Miss Genevieve Daniels, a young colored girl of Coraopolis, is in the city in a plight to be envied by none. She is seriously ill of scarlet fever and without friends or relatives here. She is 17 years of age and came to this city several weeks ago in search of employment. She was hired by a family as a domestic and was doing well and enjoying herself until the latter part of last week.

She began feeling indisposed on Friday and went to the home of Mrs. Hattie Minnis, Third street, and asked if she might lie down on a cot, stating that she felt sick. Mrs. Minnis allowed her to do so and when evening came she was so sick that she pleaded for further rest.

Mrs. Minnis through pity granted the request and yesterday a physician was called. He pronounced the girl sick with scarlet fever and ordered the house quarantined. Sanitary Policeman Burgess carried out the order and then objections on the part of Mrs. Minnis arose. She keeps boarders, and upon learning that the house was under quarantine, they decamped. She has no one but herself to depend upon for a livelihood, and in consideration of big rent, losing her boarders and other inconveniences she notified the health officer that she would not care for the sick girl and wanted her removed.

The township trustees were notified of the case and called upon Mrs. Minnis, assuring her that they would pay her for caring for the girl, but Mrs. Minnis feels that even if they do pay her that she will be greatly the loser and states that she will not accept the patient as hers. Some mutual agreement will likely be made this evening, but what it will be the officers are as yet not able to state.

BEGGING A CHEW CAUSED A FIGHT

Man Who Was Hungry For Tobacco Was Landed Behind Jail Bars.

STORY OF THE OTHER MAN

Differs From His In Several Particulars—Each Charges the Other With Having Provoked the Quarrel, Which Was a Spirited One.

Blood was spurting from an ugly cut on his upper lip, a black and blue mark was under his right eye and his general appearance led one at first sight to believe that he had been in a regular Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight, when J. G. Kauffman appeared at central station last evening and told a tale that resulted in a short time in the arrest of George Wolfe by Officers McDermott and Dawson.

Wolfe was not placed in jail, he furnishing $10 for his appearance before the mayor this morning. When arraigned he pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault and battery and the mayor set the date of trial for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Kauffman was present when Wolfe was arraigned and both men were given an opportunity to tell the story of the affair. Kauffman said:

"I had been at Wellsville and got off a street car at the Diamond and started up Sixth street toward my home. I was accosted by Wolfe, who asked me for a chew of tobacco. I told him that I did not have any and that I did not know why he should ask me for tobacco when he did not know me. I then started on my way and Wolfe, after beckoning for a partner, intercepted me before I got to Washington streets. Wolfe then without provocation struck me in the face."

Wolfe said: "I was standing on Sixth street talking to a friend when Kauffman came along. I thought he was a man that I know whose given name is Ed and I said: 'Hello, Ed! give me a chew.' Kauffman stopped and came up to me and said that I had insulted him. I told him that I did not think the simple asking for a chew was an insult. He got mad and called me 'one of the smart set' and several other names. I did not want any trouble and started up street. When I got near the Arcade restaurant I motioned for a friend to come over. Before he got to me Kauffman approached and when my friend did arrive Kauffman shoved him away, telling him not to mix up in the trouble. I did not know there was any trouble brewing and was surprised when Kauffman slapped me in the face. He struck me twice and then in self-defense I struck him."

Witnesses will be subpoenaed for both parties and the trial will be awaited with interest, inasmuch as both are well known in the city.

ROBBED BY GIRLS WHO CARESSED HIM

THE UNFORTUNATE EXPERIENCE OF A WELLSVILLE MAN.

Two Colored Damsels of This City Said to Have Relieved Him of $50.

While one woman was fondly caressing him, patting his cheeks in a loving manner and calling him sweet names, Peter Carsey, a laborer of Wellsville, was robbed of a pocketbook containing $50 in bills early Saturday evening by another woman, an accomplice of the first.

After being victimized by the clever pickpockets Carsey, between his loud outbursts of sobbing, told the story of his experience, disastrous from a pecuniary standpoint, to the police at central station. He is about 50 years of age and is employed at a mill in Wellsville, receiving $1.35 per day for his services, considering which fact he was certainly not able to lose the amount stolen. Saturday afternoon he came up from the neighboring city and after making a few purchases of necessaries thought he would make a friendly call on a friend at a saloon on Second street. To the friend he conversed pleasantly for a few minutes and in the meantime dank a glass or two of beer. He is not accustomed to drinking, and although he imbibed scantily his head was a little light, and when he started home by way of the rear exit he fell easy prey to the women who were in waiting for him. They are both colored and have bad reputations.

Warrants have been issued for their arrest, according to a statement made by Chief Thompson yesterday, and the entire police force have been detailed on a hunt for them. One of them is known as Mrs. Lee and the other as Mrs. Saunders. The latter was arrested several weeks ago by Officer McDermott and taken before the mayor as a suspicious person. She was accused of stealing $30 from a rather prominent man of the city. It is said that before she came to the city she had served several terms for similar offenses, and it was the intention of the mayor upon her arraignment to order her committed to the workhouse, but when she promised to correct her ways and live a respectable life the mayor had compassion and released her.

It is one of the finest hosteiries in the world and all local men will be its guests. REDISTRICTING

A Problem In Which the Courts May Yet Have to Take a Hand.

At the meeting of the re-districting committee of council held late in the week, nothing was accomplished. The members of the committee will have difficulty in getting together upon the question, and it is just possible the common pleas court will be called upon to do the work.

There have been but two definite plans submitted in a complete form to the present, Dr. Marshall's and that of O. D. Nice. Of the two, the idea of Dr. Marshall is the more favored by the people at least, and they are parties who must be suited. It is probable Dr. Marshall's plan will be taken as a basis upon which to work.

Lisbon Potters' Social.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—The first annual social session of the Lisbon branch of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters will be held Wednesday evening in the K. G. E. hall. The program includes an entertainment at 7 o'clock, luncheon at 8 o'clock and dancing from 9 to 12.

FIRST PACKET SINCE AUGUST

Keystone State Reaches Here From Cincinnati With an Excellent Trip.

OTHER BOATS ARE RUNNING

Several Having Big Lists of Passengers For This Point—The River Likely to Remain Stationary For Some Days Now.

The first packet to reach this port from Cincinnati since the suspension of navigation last August was the Keystone State, of the Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet line. She touched the wharf last night at 8 o'clock with one of the best trips she ever carried, both as to freight and passengers. Most of her freight was for Pittsburg but 27 from her passenger list disembarked here. Captain Knox was in command, Dayton Randolph and William Anderson are her pilots, George Berridge, her stewar, Will Kimball, purser, and Eugene Morris, chief mate.

The Kanawha arrived from Charleston last evening at 7 o'clock with a big passenger and freight trip. Twenty-five of her passengers were for this point. She left here a consignment of 20,000 hoops.

The Ben Hur reached here at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon from down the river points with a big passenger list for this point. She was at the wharf at 4 o'clock this afternoon on her down trip.

The Keystone State is due at the wharf at 8 o'clock this evening bound for Cincinnati.

The three boats yesetrday all had a big passenger list for this point, the total aggregating 75.

Seven "movings" were received at the wharfboat yesterday from the different boats.

The rise in the Allegheny river will keep the river stationary for three or four days even if there is no more rain or snow. There was a drop of a few inches here since Saturday but it is stationary again today.

PROBATE COURT DIVORCES

Not Legal According to Judge Swing —This County Not Affected.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—A recent decision of Circuit Judge Swing, at Hamilton, decrees that persons who have secured divorces in probate court are not legally separated, holding that the law giving probate courts concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas courts is not constitutional.

Judge Hole says Columbiana county is not affected by this decision, the law never having been operated here.

AN AWFUL EXPERIENCE IN THE OHIO'S ICY WATER FIGHTING TO REACH SHORE

Struggling in the icy waters of the Ohio, W. S. Allen, a young man well known in the city, had an awful experience and a narrow escape from death yesterday morning at the foot of Market street. 19TH YEAR. NO. 283. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., MONDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1902—TWELVE PAGES. TWO CENTS.

AN AWFUL EXPERIENCE IN THE OHIO'S ICY WATER FIGHTING TO REACH SHORE

To Avoid Being Carried to Pittsburg W. S. Allen Took a Leap That Might Have Cost His Life.

Struggling in the icy waters of the Ohio, W. S. Allen, a young man well known in the city, had an awful experience and a narrow escape from death yesterday morning at the foot of Market street. That he was not carried to a watery grave is due to the slowness of the current at that point and his expert ability as a swimmer.

Allen is an employe of the Pilgrim Coal company and was on the float anchored a short distance above the wharf boat when the Clipper, a pool towboat of Pittsburg, landed for a supply of fuel. After the boat's crew had placed a sufficient amount in the fire boxes the boat pulled out from the float and dropped down to Market street, where she had left her tow of empty barges which had been gathered up near Bellaire.

Allen accepted the chance for a free ride and boarded the boat for the short trip. In less time than he had anticipated the crew had the boat attached to the fleet and while he was slowly enjoying himself inspecting her machinery in the engine room he was much surprised and somewhat taken back upon feeling the boat in motion. He realized that she had cut loose from short and had started up the river.

Knowing that the boat would make no more landings before arriving at Pittsburg and not wishing to visit the Smoky City, Allen determined upon a plan to reach shore which undoubtedly might have cost him his life. Without any apparent study over the situation and after the boat had reached a point some distance from the shore, he daringly leaped into the air and fell with a big splash into the cold water. His clothing and heavy shoes being a handrance he had an undesirable proposition ahead of his in his endeavor to reach shore and safety.

Like a Trojan he battled with the angry waves and being an excellent swimmer finally touched shore. And although nearly exhausted after his strenuous efforts he quickly made for home and got a change of clothing, took some stimulating medicine and in a few hours was little the worse for his experience.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AT HIS DESK.

This picture, which was made from a photograph, shows the chief magistrate of the nation hard at work at his desk. The writing and revision of a message to congress is not an easy task, but Mr. Roosevelt, who was a literary man before he was a president, is well equipped for the work.

MUCH MORE SENSATION THAN FACT IN THE STORY ABOUT MEREDITH & CO.

Local Liquor Dealer Admits Having Made a Mistake, But Says Reports Were Exaggerated.

The sensational story purported to have come from East Liverpool and published in the Cincinnati Enquirer Saturday, concerning the firm of G. W. Meredith & Co., has created no end of comment in this city where the facts are well known. The article in question was evidently fixed up for the purpose of creating a stir, but the entire canard has been exploded in the light of the true version, which is given out by interested parties here.

The regular East Liverpool correspondent of the Enquirer did not send the article, and it is the general belief among those best posted on matters of this kind that the article was written in Cincinnati by Cincinnati parties.

G. W. Meredith was seen this morning and is inclined to laugh at the attempt to make a sensation of the affair. He said:

"The regulations governing the revenue department are very strict, not more so perhaps than they should be, but rules must be observed and in this case our firm has been thrown liable. I do not deny this, but am constrained to say that under the same circumstances other firms would and doubtless have made the same mistake.

"We had a large consignment of whisky which was delayed in transit. Many of our customers had been without these goods for some time, and it was our sole object to supply them as soon as possible after their receipt. The law requires that an accurate record be kept, and every detail noted upon blanks supplied for that purpose, before any of the goods are sent out. In the haste to accommodate our customers certain clerical work was neglected, and this is the way we got into it. There is a penalty for the offense, and this we will undoubtedly have to pay.

"The revenue officers have been in East Liverpool no oftener recently than upon other occasions, as it has been the custom of the collectors to make our establishment their headquarters. Our relations have been of the most cordial always. They are not different at this time."

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

Arriving Passenger Could Not Believe That He Was in East Liverpool.

EVERYTHING WAS CHANGED

And the Surprised Man Said It All Reminded Him of a Fairy Tale — A Peculiar Man's Peculiar Experience in the Crockery City.

Wearing a plug hat, a necktie emblematic of the grand old stars and stripes, President Roosevelt's likeness over his heart and other conspicuous decorations, Frederick Vogel alighted at the depot yesterday morning from the west bound train. His makeup with peculiar actions at once made him the cynosure of all eyes.

For a moment he stood as if spellbound, gazing in an absent-minded way into space. Spectators were reminded of the cartoonist's picture of a rural man's first visit to New York city, looking with awe at some sky scraper. Officer McDermott was in the crowd and he at once decided that the man was laboring under the stress of insanity. Up to the stranger walked the officer and abruptly blurted:

"What are you looking for, old man?"

"What am I looking for? I am looking for Liverpool."

The officer was then more convinced that the man was demented when he continued.

"The conductor on that train told me that this was East Liverpool. I believed him because I thought he knew his business. And maybe he does, but there is one thing certain

HOMELESS GIRL HAS FALLEN ILL

Case of Scarlet Fever in a Broading House Develops Complications.

THE PATIENT'S REMOVAL

Is Desired By the Proprietress And the Township Trustees Have Been Consulted—Sad Plight of a Colored Domestic from Coraopolis.

Miss Genevieve Daniels, a young colored girl of Coraopolis, is in the city in a plight to be envied by none. She is seriously ill of scarlet fever and without friends or relatives here. She is 17 years of age and came to this city several weeks ago in search of employment. She was hired by a family as a domestic and was doing well and enjoying herself until the latter part of last week.

She began feeling indisposed on Friday and went to the home of Mrs. Hattie Minnis, Third street, and asked if she might lie down on a cot, stating that she felt sick. Mrs. Minnis allowed her to do so and when evening came she was so sick that she pleaded for further rest.

Mrs. Minnis through pity granted the request and yesterday a physician was called. He pronounced the girl sick with scarlet fever and ordered the house quarantined. Sanitary Policeman Burgess carried out the order and then objections on the part of Mrs. Minnis arose. She keeps boarders, and upon learning that the house was under quarantine, they decamped. She has no one but herself to depend upon for a livelihood, and in consideration of big rent, losing her boarders and other inconveniences she notified the health officer that she would not care for the sick girl and wanted her removed.

The township trustees were notified of the case and called upon Mrs. Minnis, assuring her that they would pay her for caring for the girl, but Mrs. Minnis feels that even if they do pay her that she will be greatly the loser and states that she will not accept the patient as hers. Some mutual agreement will likely be made this evening, but what it will be the officers are as yet not able to state.

BEGGING A CHEW CAUSED A FIGHT

Man Who Was Hungry For Tobacco Was Landed Behind Jail Bars.

STORY OF THE OTHER MAN

Differs From His In Several Particulars—Each Charges the Other With Having Provoked the Quarrel, Which Was a Spirited One.

Blood was spurting from an ugly cut on his upper lip, a black and blue mark was under his right eye and his general appearance led one at first sight to believe that he had been in a regular Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight, when J. G. Kauffman appeared at central station last evening and told a tale that resulted in a short time in the arrest of George Wolfe by Officers McDermott and Dawson.

Wolfe was not placed in jail, he furnishing $10 for his appearance before the mayor this morning. When arraigned he pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault and battery and the mayor set the date of trial for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Kauffman was present when Wolfe was arraigned and both men were given an opportunity to tell the story of the affair. Kauffman said:

"I had been at Wellsville and got off a street car at the Diamond and started up Sixth street toward my home. I was accosted by Wolfe, who asked me for a chew of tobacco. I told him that I did not have any and that I did not know why he should ask me for tobacco when he did not know me. I then started on my way and Wolfe, after beckoning for a partner, intercepted me before I got to Washington streets. Wolfe then without provocation struck me in the face."

Wolfe said: "I was standing on Sixth street talking to a friend when Kauffman came along. I thought he was a man that I know whose given name is Ed and I said: 'Hello, Ed! give me a chew.' Kauffman stopped and came up to me and said that I had insulted him. I told him that I did not think the simple asking for a chew was an insult. He got mad and called me 'one of the smart set' and several other names. I did not want any trouble and started up street. When I got near the Arcade restaurant I motioned for a friend to come over. Before he got to me Kauffman approached and when my friend did arrive Kauffman shoved him away, telling him not to mix up in the trouble. I did not know there was any trouble brewing and was surprised when Kauffman slapped me in the face. He struck me twice and then in self-defense I struck him."

Witnesses will be subpoenaed for both parties and the trial will be awaited with interest, inasmuch as both are well known in the city.

ROBBED BY GIRLS WHO CARESSED HIM

THE UNFORTUNATE EXPERIENCE OF A WELLSVILLE MAN.

Two Colored Damsels of This City Said to Have Relieved Him of $50.

While one woman was fondly caressing him, patting his cheeks in a loving manner and calling him sweet names, Peter Carsey, a laborer of Wellsville, was robbed of a pocketbook containing $50 in bills early Saturday evening by another woman, an accomplice of the first.

After being victimized by the clever pickpockets Carsey, between his loud outbursts of sobbing, told the story of his experience, disastrous from a pecuniary standpoint, to the police at central station. He is about 50 years of age and is employed at a mill in Wellsville, receiving $1.35 per day for his services, considering which fact he was certainly not able to lose the amount stolen. Saturday afternoon he came up from the neighboring city and after making a few purchases of necessaries thought he would make a friendly call on a friend at a saloon on Second street. To the friend he conversed pleasantly for a few minutes and in the meantime dank a glass or two of beer. He is not accustomed to drinking, and although he imbibed scantily his head was a little light, and when he started home by way of the rear exit he fell easy prey to the women who were in waiting for him. They are both colored and have bad reputations.

Warrants have been issued for their arrest, according to a statement made by Chief Thompson yesterday, and the entire police force have been detailed on a hunt for them. One of them is known as Mrs. Lee and the other as Mrs. Saunders. The latter was arrested several weeks ago by Officer McDermott and taken before the mayor as a suspicious person. She was accused of stealing $30 from a rather prominent man of the city. It is said that before she came to the city she had served several terms for similar offenses, and it was the intention of the mayor upon her arraignment to order her committed to the workhouse, but when she promised to correct her ways and live a respectable life the mayor had compassion and released her.

MANUFACTURERS LEAVE FOR NATIONAL MEETING

Almost all of the manufacturing potters or their representatives, of this city, to attend the annual convention of the United States Manufacturing Potters' association, to be held in Washington, D. C., will leave here this evening on a special car attached to the regular 6:40 C. & P. train. They will go direct to the Capitol City without change, and are due to arrive at 8:30 tomorrow morning. The convention is to be held in the new Hotel Willard, at the corner of Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. It is one of the finest hosteiries in the world and all local men will be its guests. The first session of the convention will be held tomorrow, but it is not likely that any matters of importance will come up before until Wednesday.

While the matter has not been publicly discussed it would not be surprising to see the presidency of the organization fall to an East Liverpool manufacturer this year. Indeed, the News Review is able to state, with a fair degree of certainty, that Joseph G. Lee, of the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company, will be named and supported for this high office by a large number of the delegates to the convention.

Following is the list of those who are to leave this evening:

W. H. Phillips and J. T. Smith, of Smith & Phillips company; J. R. Warner, of the National; S. C. Williams, Electrical Supply company; L. I. Aaron and W. E. Wells, Laughlin China company; Will Louthan, Louthan Supply company; Will Vodrey, Vodrey Bros.' Pottery company; H. P. Knoblock, Dresden Pottery company; H. A. Keffer, Sevres China company; George C. Thompson, C. C. Thompson Pottery company; H. N. Harker, Harker Pottery company; W. S. Brunt, William Brunt Pottery company; W. L. Smith, D. E. McNicol Pottery company; Colonel John N. Taylor, Knowles, Taylor & Knowles; W. L. Taylor, Taylor, Smith & Taylor company; George C. Murphy, Fred Lawrence and N. A. Frederick, East Liverpool Potteries company; George Burford, Burford Bros.' Pottery company; E. M. Knowles, E. M. Knowles company, Chester.

The following parties will accompany the local delegation: T. R. Bradshaw, Niles, O.; Joseph Mayer, Beaver Falls, Pa.; H. M. Preston, National Lead & Oil company, Pittsburg, Pa.; J. T. Croxall, East Liverpool; W. H. Deidrick, Dresden China company, Salineville; Harry Winteringer, of Steubenville Pottery company.

TWO CHARGES FILED

GROWING OUT OF THE SLAUGHTER OF A PET DOG.

Edward McGavern Accused of Assault And Battery And Cruelty to Animals.

The affidavits issued in 'Squire McLane's court Saturday afternoon by William Humble charging Edward McGavern with carrying concealed weapons and needlessly mutilating and killing a dog, which belonged to Chas. Ipe, were withdrawn before warrants were made out and unless the mind of Mr. Ipe is chnged materially McGavern will be arrested and taken before Mayor Davidson to answer to two different charges.

Ipe, through his attorney, M. J. McGarry, has had two charges compiled and will prefer them before the mayor this afternoon. One of them is for assault and battery and the other for cruelty to animals. Since the particulars of the alleged dastardly deed of McGavern was made public he has been almost the one topic of conversation. Sentiment is strongly against him and many have been the words of censure spoken.

REDISTRICTING

A Problem In Which the Courts May Yet Have to Take a Hand.

At the meeting of the re-districting committee of council held late in the week, nothing was accomplished. The members of the committee will have difficulty in getting together upon the question, and it is just possible the common pleas court will be called upon to do the work.

There have been but two definite plans submitted in a complete form to the present, Dr. Marshall's and that of O. D. Nice. Of the two, the idea of Dr. Marshall is the more favored by the people at least, and they are parties who must be suited. It is probable Dr. Marshall's plan will be taken as a basis upon which to work.

PROBATE COURT DIVORCES

Not Legal According to Judge Swing —This County Not Affected.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—A recent decision of Circuit Judge Swing, at Hamilton, decrees that persons who have secured divorces in probate court are not legally separated, holding that the law giving probate courts concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas courts is not constitutional.

Judge Hole says Columbiana county is not affected by this decision, the law never having been operated here.

WITH THE WORKMEN IN THE CLAY PLANTS

WHEELING POTTERIES MERGED.

The directors of the Wheeling Potteries company, which was recently incorporated with a capital stock of $1,250,900, met last week in Wheeling, and perfected their organization. The new company embraces Wheeling Pottery company, Riverside Pottery company and Vance-Faience company, of Tiltonville. The merger will take effect on January 1, at which time the property of the constituent companies will be taken possession of by the Wheeling Potteries company. At a stockholders meeting held last Tuesday the following board of directors were elected: C. W. Franzheim, W. A. Isett, W. J. Mays, J. J. Holloway, Geo. Wise, William Kirbach, Geo. K. Wheat, Joseph Speidel, J. A. Miller and William A. Wilson. The directors organized by electing officers as follows: President, C. A. Franzheim; vice-president, George K. Wheat; secretary, W. A. Isett; assistant secretary, W. J. Mays. It is understood that the Riverside went into the merger at 172.31, the Wheeling at about 165, and the Tiltonville plant at par. The stock was not watered, the basis of consolidation being the intrinsic value of the respective properties. The new company is among the largest pottery corporations in the Uunited States. It is expected that quarterly dividends of seven or eight per cent. will be paid on the stock. The Riverside company will pay its customary quarterly dividend of two per cent. on January 1. The combination gives the Wheeling Potteries company a more diversified product and with the other advantages incident to a merger of this character the concern starts off with exceedingly bright prospects.

MANUFACTURERS' MEETING.

The United States Potters' association, of which Charles Howell Cook, of Trenton, is president, will hold its annual session tomorrow in the Hotel Willard, Washington, D. C. It will be purely a manufacturers' meeting, and will last either two or three days. There have been several important questions at issue during the past year which have a decided bearing upon pottery. These matters have been investigated and statistics gathered by special committees, which will file their reports with the association. The most important of these matters is tariff reform, which is now the subject of much contention. While it has not been officially announced, judging from the attitude of the manufacturers in the past, their ultimatum will be, regarding a revision of the duty on pottery imports, "to let the tariff alone." The recent exposures of the wholesale frauds which are being worked by large importers in getting crockery into this country without paying the full rate of duty will likely receive attention. For some time there has been a concerted movement on the part of the manufacturers to obtain cheaper freight rates. In all likelyhood measures will be taken to provide a remedy.

THE MINERVA POTTERY.

The proposed new pottery for Minerva is said to have been decided upon. A Canton dispatch says: Congressman R. W. Tayler, who is counsel for the pottery combine, met a delegation of Minerva citizens at the office of Tayler & Stewart, Friday morning, and while there are some minor details yet to be arranged, the matter was practically closed up. The citizens have agreed to make a loan of $75,000 to the pottery, which will be secured by a claim upon the plant, and the company has agreed to erect a pottery many times the value of the money loaned, which will employ not less than 300 men. The Minerva citizens who were in Canton were Edward S. Deford, A. J. Grunder, E. M. Jerome, John Starkey and James Stewart. They stated that all the money had been subscribed and that there is no doubt of the success of the scheme. The people of Minerva are very much interested, as the new plant means the restoring of the old-time activity to the town.

ANOTHER AKRON PLANT.

If present plans do not miscarry Akron will have another big factory added to its already long list. John Lamparter and E. R. Bathrick, the men who have been given a franchise for a universal heating plant, have purchased a tract of land in the southeastern part of the city on the proposed line of the Akron & Barberton belt line and will in all probability put up a very large clay manufacturing establishment. The land which was purchased is a part of what is known as the Bellows' farm and is situated near the Windsor Brick company's plant. It is 16 acres in area and is said to be all clay land. The clay is of an especially fine variety and it is said to be one of the finest and largest clay beds in the state. In regard to the size of the new plant and the kind of ware that would be manufactured Mr. Bathrick said that he would not now state whether the company would make sewer pipe or whether it would be pottery. He stated that at present all that could be said was that it would be a clay plant with the output in doubt. "We have the best kind of clay there to make anything in the line of clay products we want to, and as yet have not decided what it will be," was the way he referred to the matter.

JEWELED POTTERY.

The new jeweled pottery is odd and striking and reminds one of the gilded marbles of Italy and the modern bronzes which are so richly decorated and begemmed that little of the bronze is visible. We have had jeweled glass for many years, and lamp shades inset with sparkling mock gems have been active sellers for many seasons, but pottery inset with mock jewels is an innovation of note. This new idea is carried out in egg-shell china. This china is cut with various elaborate floral designs, the cuttings being filled in with mock rubies, topazes, rhinestones, emeralds and other gems. These jewels are not made of glass, but from a form of hard enamel which closely resembles the gems.

NEW SPECIALTIES.

The Laughlin No. 2 is introducing many new specialties, being after the holiday trade, and after it with a vengeance. There are 18 new specialties in the nature of fancy trays. A new jardiniere in six sizes is being placed on the pressing bench, a beautiful pedestal standing 3½ feet high and covered entirely with full blown roses of a heavy and beautiful pattern. The pedestal is very heavy, as it will require the services of at least two men to move it while it is being made. They are also making a new toilet set. The employes of this plant are working very steadily.

MORE CLAY DEPOSITS.

Valuable deposits of kaolin have been discovered in the vicinity of Glenwood, Wis. Recent interesting and costly experiments have been made, covering some 600 acres, and the owners are confident they have in their possession very valuable property. It has been secured by Chicago capitalists, including large sanitary ware manufacturers. The deposit comes in layers to a depth of 16 feet and is of fine quality with the exception that it contains small quantities of sand. The clay beds look like chalk and are in fact decomposed stone.

NEW LOCAL AT SEBRING.

A new local order of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters has been organized in Sebring, with a membership of about 150. The charter membership has been taken from local No. 44. This local, No. 44, donated the new branch $100, with which to begin its home. The new union is composed of printers and decorators, and will be known as No. 65, N. B. of O. P., of Sebring. It is the second local which has been organized in Sebring, whose membership has been taken from No. 44.

A NOVELTY JIGGER.

A new novelty jigger is being installed at the Brunt pottery, and when completed and ready for operation, will add materially to the capacity of the plant. No one has yet been hired to operate the new machine, but this will be attended to in time

AMONG THE POTTERS.

James Nolan has recently accepted a situation at the Dresden.

Thomas Hines has recently accepted a situation with the pottery plant at Crooksville.

Lawrence Welch, a handler at Burford's, has returned to work again after a week's serious illness.

John Ryan, of New Castle, was calling on his many friends among the operatives here over Sunday.

Thompson Wilson, of the decorating department at Thompson's, has resigned his position to accept a similar one at Burford's. He made the change today.

J. E. Sutcliffe, who was injured Thanksgiving night while alighting from a street car in the Diamond, has sufficiently recoverd to resume his work as sticker-up at the Sevres.

Samuel Thomas, a dishmaker for the French China company, Sebring, and well known among the operatives in this city, has accepted a situation at the Crooksville plant and went to that city one day last week to take up his work.

A FATAL HEAD-ON COLLISION.

Train Ran Into Open Switch and One Man Was Killed and Three Injured.

Youngstown, O., Dec. 1.—A Chicago and Baltimore express train on the Baltimore and Ohio railway, eastbound, ran into an open switch at Carbon, Pa., seven miles east of here, early yesterday morning, and collided head-on with a freight train. One man was killed and three others injured, one seriously.

The dead: Howard Bradley, Pittsburg, engineer passenger train.

The injured: Walter Miller, Pittsburg, express messenger, back injured; H. E. Townsend, Pittsburg, passenger train, ribs broken and head hurt, may die; Frank Miller, Chicago, fireman freight train, painfully scalded.

Both engines were wrecked and the express car telescoped. The passengers were considerably shaken up, but none was injured. The collision, it is alleged, was due to the failure of the freight brakeman to throw the switch on the main track after taking the siding.

GREAT BRITAIN WANTS THE GOLD

Endeavoring to Locate Bars Worth $650,000 Brought to Germany from South Africa.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—The British government is telegraphing to all the German ports making inquiries concerning Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which, it is supposed, have been brought to this country from South Africa within the past fortnight. The bars are destined for former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and, it is presumed, had been concealed in the Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located on the ground that she is entitled to all the assets of the Transvaal, because she has assumed responsibility for the debts of that country, including the bonds issued prior to the war.

General Botha's reply to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the late Boer government had no assets was strictly true as far as he knew, but since receiving Mr. Chamberlain's letter General Botha learned, according to seemingly trustworthy information here, that Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have in their possession $2,500,000. ANALYSIS LEADS TO ARREST.

Parents Locked Up on Suspicion of Having Poisoned Children.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—After carrying on for a period of several weeks an investigation into the cause of the death of Annie Williams, aged 9 years, and her 3-year-old sister, Josephine, on Oct. 21 and 22, respectively, the police authorities have deemed it proper to detain at a police station the parents of the dead children. The father, John W. Williams, was taken into custody Saturday night and the wife was removed to a police station yesterday, along with her other three children. Annie and Josephine died of what the attending physician thinks was poison and notified the coroner. A chemical analysis made by direction of the coroner tended to prove the doctor's theory, and the arrest of the parents followed. It is said the dead children were insured, the elder one for $115 and the younger child for $30. Williams and his wife deny that they were the cause of the death of the two children.

Husband Charged With Murder.

Elwood, Ind., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Charles Dubois, a bride of but a few months, was found dead in her room late Saturday afternoon, with a bottle of carbolic acid lying at her side and a note, in which was stated her intention of taking her life. An autopsy was held Saturday night and no poison was found in her stomach. The side of her head was crushed, apparently by the blow of a blunt instrument. The coroner held an inquest yesterday, which led to the arrest of Charles Dubois, the husband of the dead woman, who is charged with murder.

WHEELING POTTERIES MERGED.

The directors of the Wheeling Potteries company, which was recently incorporated with a capital stock of $1,250,000, met last week in Wheeling, and perfected their organization. The new company embraces Wheeling Pottery company, Riverside Pottery company and Vance-Faience company, of Tiltonville. The merger will take effect on January 1, at which time the property of the constituent companies will be taken possession of by the Wheeling Potteries company. At a stockholders meeting held last Tuesday the following board of directors were elected: C. W. Franzheim, W. A. Isett, W. J. Mays, J. J. Holloway, Geo. Wise, William Kirbach, Geo. K. Wheat, Joseph Speidel, J. A. Miller and William A. Wilson. The directors organized by electing officers as follows: President, C. A. Franzheim; vice-president, George K. Wheat; secretary, W. A. Isett; assistant secretary, W. J. Mays. It is understood that the Riverside went into the merger at 172.31, the Wheeling at about 165, and the Tiltonville plant at par. The stock was not watered, the basis of consolidation being the intrinsic value of the respective properties. The new company is among the largest pottery corporations in the Uunited States. It is expected that quarterly dividends of seven or eight per cent. will be paid on the stock. The Riverside company will pay its customary quarterly dividend of two per cent. on January 1. The combination gives the Wheeling Potteries company a more diversified product and with the other advantages incident to a merger of this character the concern starts off with exceedingly bright prospects.

MANUFACTURERS' MEETING.

The United States Potters' association, of which Charles Howell Cook, of Trenton, is president, will hold its annual session tomorrow in the Hotel Willard, Washington, D. C. It will be purely a manufacturers' meeting, and will last either two or three days. There have been several important questions at issue during the past year which have a decided bearing upon pottery. These matters have been investigated and statistics gathered by special committees, which will file their reports with the association. The most important of these matters is tariff reform, which is now the subject of much contention. While it has not been officially announced, judging from the attitude of the manufacturers in the past, their ultimatum will be, regarding a revision of the duty on pottery imports, "to let the tariff alone." The recent exposures of the wholesale frauds which are being worked by large importers in getting crockery into this country without paying the full rate of duty will likely receive attention. For some time there has been a concerted movement on the part of the manufacturers to obtain cheaper freight rates. In all likelyhood measures will be taken to provide a remedy.

THE MINERVA POTTERY.

The proposed new pottery for Minerva is said to have been decided upon. A Canton dispatch says: Congressman R. W. Tayler, who is counsel for the pottery combine, met a delegation of Minerva citizens at the office of Tayler & Stewart, Friday morning, and while there are some minor details yet to be arranged, the matter was practically closed up. The citizens have agreed to make a loan of $75,000 to the pottery, which will be secured by a claim upon the plant, and the company has agreed to erect a pottery many times the value of the money loaned, which will employ not less than 300 men. The Minerva citizens who were in Canton were Edward S. Deford, A. J. Grunder, E. M. Jerome, John Starkey and James Stewart. They stated that all the money had been subscribed and that there is no doubt of the success of the scheme. The people of Minerva are very much interested, as the new plant means the restoring of the old-time activity to the town.

ANOTHER AKRON PLANT.

If present plans do not miscarry Akron will have another big factory added to its already long list. John Lamparter and E. R. Bathrick, the men who have been given a franchise for a universal heating plant, have purchased a tract of land in the southeastern part of the city on the proposed line of the Akron & Barberton belt line and will in all probability put up a very large clay manufacturing establishment. The land which was purchased is a part of what is known as the Bellows' farm and is situated near the Windsor Brick company's plant. It is 16 acres in area and is said to be all clay land. The clay is of an especially fine variety and it is said to be one of the finest and largest clay beds in the state. In regard to the size of the new plant and the kind of ware that would be manufactured Mr. Bathrick said that he would not now state whether the company would make sewer pipe or whether it would be pottery. He stated that at present all that could be said was that it would be a clay plant with the output in doubt. "We have the best kind of clay there to make anything in the line of clay products we want to, and as yet have not decided what it will be," was the way he referred to the matter.

JEWELED POTTERY.

The new jeweled pottery is odd and striking and reminds one of the gilded marbles of Italy and the modern bronzes which are so richly decorated and begemmed that little of the bronze is visible. We have had jeweled glass for many years, and lamp shades inset with sparkling mock gems have been active sellers for many seasons, but pottery inset with mock jewels is an innovation of note. This new idea is carried out in egg-shell china. This china is cut with various elaborate floral designs, the cuttings being filled in with mock rubies, topazes, rhinestones, emeralds and other gems. These jewels are not made of glass, but from a form of hard enamel which closely resembles the gems.

NEW SPECIALTIES.

The Laughlin No. 2 is introducing many new specialties, being after the holiday trade, and after it with a vengeance. There are 18 new specialties in the nature of fancy trays. A new jardiniere in six sizes is being placed on the pressing bench, a beautiful pedestal standing 3½ feet high and covered entirely with full blown roses of a heavy and beautiful pattern. The pedestal is very heavy, as it will require the services of at least two men to move it while it is being made. They are also making a new toilet set. The employes of this plant are working very steadily.

MORE CLAY DEPOSITS.

Valuable deposits of kaolin have been discovered in the vicinity of Glenwood, Wis. Recent interesting and costly experiments have been made, covering some 600 acres, and the owners are confident they have in their possession very valuable property. It has been secured by Chicago capitalists, including large sanitary ware manufacturers. The deposit comes in layers to a depth of 16 feet and is of fine quality with the exception that it contains small quantities of sand. The clay beds look like chalk and are in fact decomposed stone.

GREAT BRITAIN WANTS THE GOLD

Endeavoring to Locate Bars Worth $650,000 Brought to Germany from South Africa.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—The British government is telegraphing to all the German ports making inquiries concerning Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which, it is supposed, have been brought to this country from South Africa within the past fortnight. The bars are destined for former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and, it is presumed, had been concealed in the Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located on the ground that she is entitled to all the assets of the Transvaal, because she has assumed responsibility for the debts of that country, including the bonds issued prior to the war.

General Botha's reply to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the late Boer government had no assets was strictly true as far as he knew, but since receiving Mr. Chamberlain's letter General Botha learned, according to seemingly trustworthy information here, that Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have in their possession $2,500,000. Manila, Dec. 1.—General Miles inspected Subig bay Saturday. He will possibly abandon his projected coast trip to Vigan, Luzon, and proceed direct to Hong Kong and Shanghai.

Manila, Dec. 1.—Captain Pershing, with 60 men, has completed a march across the island of Mindanao, from Camp Vicars to Vligan. This is possibly the first time that white men have made the journey. Captain Pershing visited the villages of Madaya and Marahui.

Manila, Dec. 1.—The efforts to restore agriculture in the Philippine islands have been blocked by a dearth of field animals. Ninety per cent of the carababos died in the original epidemic of rinderpest, and of the small number imported since many have died.

Manila, Dec. 1.—Several columns of constabulary in the Zambales province had been chasing the Ladrones with the assistance of friendly natives. Five of the friendlies straggled from the column and were captured by Ladrones, who amputated the tongue and gouged out the eyes of one friendly and then sent him back to the constabulary. The fate of the other four is unknown.

Live Stock Exposition.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—If the number of people who visited the international live stock exposition yesterday may be taken as a criterion the attendance at this year's exposition will exceed that of last year by fully 100,000 persons. Notwithstanding that yesterday was Sunday, 20,000 people of Chicago and vicinity passed through the gates during the day and evening. The judging in the various departments began today.

GREAT BRITAIN WANTS THE GOLD

Endeavoring to Locate Bars Worth $650,000 Brought to Germany from South Africa.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—The British government is telegraphing to all the German ports making inquiries concerning Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which, it is supposed, have been brought to this country from South Africa within the past fortnight. The bars are destined for former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and, it is presumed, had been concealed in the Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located on the ground that she is entitled to all the assets of the Transvaal, because she has assumed responsibility for the debts of that country, including the bonds issued prior to the war.

General Botha's reply to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the late Boer government had no assets was strictly true as far as he knew, but since receiving Mr. Chamberlain's letter General Botha learned, according to seemingly trustworthy information here, that Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have in their possession $2,500,000. General Botha requested them to turn over this gold for the benefit of the Boer people, but Dr. Leyds refused averring that the money was to be used in upholding the Boer nationality in the future. General Botha has notified Dr. Leyds that unless the gold is given up legal proceedings will be brought against him.

ANALYSIS LEADS TO ARREST.

Parents Locked Up on Suspicion of Having Poisoned Children.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—After carrying on for a period of several weeks an investigation into the cause of the death of Annie Williams, aged 9 years, and her 3-year-old sister, Josephine, on Oct. 21 and 22, respectively, the police authorities have deemed it proper to detain at a police station the parents of the dead children. The father, John W. Williams, was taken into custody Saturday night and the wife was removed to a police station yesterday, along with her other three children. Annie and Josephine died of what the attending physician thinks was poison and notified the coroner. A chemical analysis made by direction of the coroner tended to prove the doctor's theory, and the arrest of the parents followed. It is said the dead children were insured, the elder one for $115 and the younger child for $30. Williams and his wife deny that they were the cause of the death of the two children.

Husband Charged With Murder.

Elwood, Ind., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Charles Dubois, a bride of but a few months, was found dead in her room late Saturday afternoon, with a bottle of carbolic acid lying at her side and a note, in which was stated her intention of taking her life. An autopsy was held Saturday night and no poison was found in her stomach. The side of her head was crushed, apparently by the blow of a blunt instrument. The coroner held an inquest yesterday, which led to the arrest of Charles Dubois, the husband of the dead woman, who is charged with murder.

DEFIED HIGHWAYMEN

Lisbon Football Player Compelled a Footpad to Stand Back.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—Frank Steele, one of the Lisbon football players, was the intended victim of a hold-up the other night, but upon the presentation of two revolvers by him, the highwayman gave up his enterprise. The suspicious actions of three men, who have been loitering at night in the eastern part of the town, between the fair grounds and the more thickly settled portion, have attracted attention recently.

Mr. Steele, having occasion to pass that way, and noticing the movements of the fellows, carried two revolvers with him on Friday night. He was coming toward home about midnight, when, at a lonely place on Spruce street, he met a man whom he recognized as one of the three, who stepped out of a dark alley and said: "Stop! I want you." In an instant he was looking into the muzzles of Steele's revolvers and obliged with alacrity to stand aside. Steele thinks he has seen the fellow about town but could not positively identify him.

The Formal Announcement of His Mayoralty Aspirations Made Publis This Morning.

The formal announcement of the candidacy of Walter C. Supplee for the Republican mayoralty nomination was made by him this morning. It will come as a big surprise to the major portion of the East End people, but his intimate friends, so they claim, have known of his intention for several weeks. The political situation in the East End is too chaotic and the announcement has been out too short a time to state definitely today how it will be received.

It has been known for some time that some concerted action had been determined up by the politicians and people of the East End on account of the Pennsylvania avenue assessments and the redistricting of the city, but it cannot be stated that Mr. Supplee's candidacy is a part of it. Personally Mr. Supplee is very popular. His friends are numbered by the hundred and are from all parts of the city. For a number of years he was a city policeman and won the reputation of being one of the very best ever on the force. He resigned to become a deputy sheriff under Sheriff Charley Gill and again he made an enviable record, both in the field and in the office. He has been eminently successful in all his undertakings.

NO GAS IN KLONDIKE

Break in Main Near Oakland Switch Shut off the Several for Several Hours.

The many people who live east of the Oakland switch and who depend upon the gas furnished by the Fort Pitt Light company for light and heat suffered very serious inconvenience and annoyance yesterday. A few days ago workmen from the water works in excavating for the extension of the water mains undermined the gas main near the Oakland switch. Evidently the filling-in was not properly accomplished for when the dirt settled the gas main was disturbed and a break followed. The break was soon discovered and repaired.

The gas was shut off all along the line yesterday morning while some repairs were being made, but this caused only a slight inconvenience as the patrons had been warned in advance. Today the supply is stronger than for some time.

FINEST BUILDINGS ANY COLLEGE HAS

WOOSTER UNIVERSITY IS SPLENDIDLY BUILT UP IN A YEAR.

Anniversary of the Great Fire to Be Celebrated By Dedication of New Halls.

Wooster, December 1.—The twelve months which end December 11, 1902, will have been a most remarkable year in the history of the university of Wooster. On December 11, 1901, the institution was practically wiped out of existence by a fire, which destroyed the main structure with all the equipment, causing a loss of over $800,000, with but $60,000 insurance. On December 11, 1902, five magnificent structures, erected to take the place of the ones destroyed, are to be dedicated with imposing ceremonies.

It is ascertained that no institution of learning in the world has recovered so quickly from what threatened to put an end to its existence. Pittsburgers did much to bring this about. The princely gift of $100,000 by Andrew Carnegie was the stimulant that caused over $400,000 to be rolled into the treasury of the university in a little more than two months.

The structures are pronounced the very finest college buildings in the world and are equipped in the most modern style. The program to be carried out is as follows:

University Memorial chapel, 10:30 a. m., President Louis Edward Holden presiding—Organ prelude, hallelujah chorus, invocation by Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., LL. D.; address by Rev. James D. Moffat, D. D., LL. D., president of Washington and Jefferson college, Washington, Pa.; address by Prof. Charles F. Mabery, Ph. D., professor of chemistry in Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland; address by Rev. Simon J. McPherson, D. D., LL. D., president of Lawrenceville academy, Lawrenceville, Md.; solo, Miss Frances A. Glenn; presentation of the new building to the synod of Ohio by Rev. S. S. Palmer, D. D., president of the board of trustees of the new university; acceptance of the new building by Rev. Robert J. Thompson, D. D., moderator of the synod of Ohio, Lima; benediction by Rev. William McKibbin, D. D., Cincinnati.

Afternoon exercises, Kauke hall at 3 p. m.—Prayer of dedication at Kauke hall by Rev. Oscar A. Hills, D. D., Wooster; prayer of dedication at Severance hall by Rev. James A. Worden, D. D., LL. D., Philadelphia; prayer of delication at Scovel hall by Rev. Sylvester F. Scovel, Wooster; prayer of dedication at Taylor hall by Rev. A. E. Taylor, D. D., LL. D., Columbus; benediction.

COUNTY AND NEIGHBORHOOD

Sebring complains of a scarcity of houses.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wang, of North Georgetown, fell down a flight of stairs, broke an arm and was otherwise injured.

Thomas M. Reed, a prominent old resident, son of ex-County Commissioner James Reed, died near Bloomfield, Jefferson county, aged 65

The barn of Robert Lodon, whe resides near Newgarden, was entirely destroyed by fire. The loss is $2,500, and is partly covered by insurance.

This fall Charles Wernet, of Hanover township, harvested 50 acres of wheat, which turned out 1,352 bushels, an average of 26½ bushels to the acre.

Ernest Sshmid, of Salem, who has served in the United States army, has been arrested at Alliance, charged with passing a counterfeit silver dollar.

The city building of Martin's Ferry, is in the hands of the St. Clairsville authorities to insure payment of judgment against the town for $400, granted recently in the Belmont county courts to Mrs. Caroline Meyers.

Another "English fortune" of several millions has vanished. The accountant of the bank of England states that the "Whitacre fortune," which Columbiana county people are after, amounts to less than 100 pounds.

Mrs. Jeannette R. Hunter is dead at Akron and another woman whose name is unknown is at the point of death as the result of morphine poison. It is believed the visitor gave Mrs. Hunter an overdose and becoming alarmed resolved to die herself.

Orders from headquarters have stopped improvements at the Salem plant of the American Steel & Wire company. The cause is the alleged hostility of the Salem city government. An engineer at the mill was arrested for running without a license.

COUNTY AND NEIGHBORHOOD

Sebring complains of a scarcity of houses.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wang, of North Georgetown, fell down a flight of stairs, broke an arm and was otherwise injured.

Thomas M. Reed, a prominent old resident, son of ex-County Commissioner James Reed, died near Bloomfield, Jefferson county, aged 65

The barn of Robert Lodon, whe reusides near Newgarden, was entirely destroyed by fire. The loss is $2,500, and is partly covered by insurance.

This fall Charles Wernet, of Hanover township, harvested 50 acres of wheat, which turned out 1,352 bushels, an average of 26½ bushels to the acre.

Ernest Sshmid, of Salem, who has served in the United States army, has been arrested at Alliance, charged with passing a counterfeit silver dollar.

The city building of Martin's Ferry, is in the hands of the St. Clairsville authorities to insure payment of judgment against the town for $400, granted recently in the Belmont county courts to Mrs. Caroline Meyers.

Another "English fortune" of several millions has vanished. The accountant of the bank of England states that the "Whitacre fortune," which Columbiana county people are after, amounts to less than 100 pounds.

Mrs. Jeannette R. Hunter is dead at Akron and another woman whose name is unknown is at the point of death as the result of morphine poison. It is believed the visitor gave Mrs. Hunter an overdose and becoming alarmed resolved to die herself.

Orders from headquarters have stopped improvements at the Salem plant of the American Steel & Wire company. The cause is the alleged hostility of the Salem city government. An engineer at the mill was arrested for running without a license.

DEFIED HIGHWAYMEN

Lisbon Football Player Compelled a Footpad to Stand Back.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—Frank Steele, one of the Lisbon football players, was the intended victim of a hold-up the other night, but upon the presentation of two revolvers by him, the highwayman gave up his enterprise. The suspicious actions of three men, who have been loitering at night in the eastern part of the town, between the fair grounds and the more thickly settled portion, have attracted attention recently.

Mr. Steele, having occasion to pass that way, and noticing the movements of the fellows, carried two revolvers with him on Friday night. He was coming toward home about midnight, when, at a lonely place on Spruce street, he met a man whom he recognized as one of the three, who stepped out of a dark alley and said: "Stop! I want you." In an instant he was looking into the muzzles of Steele's revolvers and obliged with alacrity to stand aside. Steele thinks he has seen the fellow about town but could not positively identify him.

AT THE THEATER

"The King of Tramps" company, one of the best organized theatrical companies on the road this season, to appear here December 2 at the Grand, enjoys a reputation seldom accorded to a traveling company. Being a creation of W. A. Tremayne, author of "A Secret Warrant." The story which abounds in thrilling situations and an abundance of wholesome comedy, embraces every element so necessary to success.

Reid's story of village life, "A Homespun Heart." As the title suggests it deals with the affairs of the plain, honest, country folks, but there is no attempt at caricature, there are no saw mills, railroad wrecks or startling effects, but the plot is interesting and full of pathos and comedy.

Edward "Ensemble" Rice is said to have made the triumph of his career in the selection of a chorus for the "Show Girl," "dainty, delicious and delirium provoking." Surely there must be a great treat in store for theatergoers. Don't miss it.

EAST END

SUPPLEE A CANDIDATE

The Formal Announcement of His Mayoralty Aspirations Made Publis This Morning.

The formal announcement of the candidacy of Walter C. Supplee for the Republican mayoralty nomination was made by him this morning. It will come as a big surprise to the major portion of the East End people, but his intimate friends, so they claim, have known of his intention for several weeks. The political situation in the East End is too chaotic and the announcement has been out too short a time to state definitely today how it will be received.

It has been known for some time that some concerted action had been determined up by the politicians and people of the East End on account of the Pennsylvania avenue assessments and the redistricting of the city, but it cannot be stated that Mr. Supplee's candidacy is a part of it. Personally Mr. Supplee is very popular. His friends are numbered by the hundred and are from all parts of the city. For a number of years he was a city policeman and won the reputation of being one of the very best ever on the force. He resigned to become a deputy sheriff under Sheriff Charley Gill and again he made an enviable record, both in the field and in the office. He has been eminently successful in all his undertakings.

NO GAS IN KLONDIKE

Break in Main Near Oakland Switch Shut off the Several for Several Hours.

The many people who live east of the Oakland switch and who depend upon the gas furnished by the Fort Pitt Light company for light and heat suffered very serious inconvenience and annoyance yesterday. A few days ago workmen from the water works in excavating for the extension of the water mains undermined the gas main near the Oakland switch. Evidently the filling-in was not properly accomplished for when the dirt settled the gas main was disturbed and a break followed. The break was soon discovered and repaired.

The gas was shut off all along the line yesterday morning while some repairs were being made, but this caused only a slight inconvenience as the patrons had been warned in advance. Today the supply is stronger than for some time.

Ben Hur Meets Tonight.

The meeting of the order of Ben Hur that is to be take place this evening in the P. H. C. hall promises to be of unusual interest and importance. Fifteen persons have made application for initiation and they will be taken in, unless they are kept away by sickness or other causes. The membership of Ben Hur is increasing steadily in the East End and the order is growing in popularity every day.

FINEST BUILDINGS ANY COLLEGE HAS

WOOSTER UNIVERSITY IS SPLENDIDLY BUILT UP IN A YEAR.

Anniversary of the Great Fire to Be Celebrated By Dedication of New Halls.

Wooster, December 1.—The twelve months which end December 11, 1902, will have been a most remarkable year in the history of the university of Wooster. On December 11, 1901, the institution was practically wiped out of existence by a fire, which destroyed the main structure with all the equipment, causing a loss of over $800,000, with but $60,000 insurance. On December 11, 1902, five magnificent structures, erected to take the place of the ones destroyed, are to be dedicated with imposing ceremonies.

It is ascertained that no institution of learning in the world has recovered so quickly from what threatened to put an end to its existence. Pittsburgers did much to bring this about. The princely gift of $100,000 by Andrew Carnegie was the stimulant that caused over $400,000 to be rolled into the treasury of the university in a little more than two months.

The structures are pronounced the very finest college buildings in the world and are equipped in the most modern style. The program to be carried out is as follows:

University Memorial chapel, 10:30 a. m., President Louis Edward Holden presiding—Organ prelude, hallelujah chorus, invocation by Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., LL. D.; address by Rev. James D. Moffat, D. D., LL. D., president of Washington and Jefferson college, Washington, Pa.; address by Prof. Charles F. Mabery, Ph. D., professor of chemistry in Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland; address by Rev. Simon J. McPherson, D. D., LL. D., president of Lawrenceville academy, Lawrenceville, Md.; solo, Miss Frances A. Glenn; presentation of the new building to the synod of Ohio by Rev. S. S. Palmer, D. D., president of the board of trustees of the new university; acceptance of the new building by Rev. Robert J. Thompson, D. D., moderator of the synod of Ohio, Lima; benediction by Rev. William McKibbin, D. D., Cincinnati.

Afternoon exercises, Kauke hall at 3 p. m.—Prayer of dedication at Kauke hall by Rev. Oscar A. Hills, D. D., Wooster; prayer of dedication at Severance hall by Rev. James A. Worden, D. D., LL. D., Philadelphia; prayer of delication at Scovel hall by Rev. Sylvester F. Scovel, Wooster; prayer of dedication at Taylor hall by Rev. A. E. Taylor, D. D., LL. D., Columbus; benediction.

TWELVE PAGES.

Drunkenness is decreasing in the United States, according to the testimony of expert observers. The consumption of malt, spiritous and vinous liquors is still enormous, and the social glass is tolerated in many circles, but the vice of drunkenness is universally frowned upon. Business requirements, education, home influence, physical and moral culture, are all directed toward its eradication. Business men will not entrust their interests to others who have not clear brains and steady hands. Sobriety and success go together. The men who rise in politics, in the business world, in professional life and those who obtain greatest prominence in athletic circles are the men who do not drink. The temperance reformers are learning that the surest way to banish the evil is to educate the young as to the dire effects of drunkenness. The counsel of a loving and wise parent is the most effective temperance lecture. The schools are doing their part nobly, and the world is learning and growing better.

This is the season when the shrewd advertiser places his holiday announcements. There are hundreds of people who like to do their buying before the rush begins, while the goods are new and fresh and unhandled by shoppers. Clerks and customers both have more time and satisfactory purchases are more easily made. No part of a newspaper is scanned with more interest at this season than the descriptions given by the merchants of what they have to sell. He who would reap a harvest from advertising should begin planting his crop early.

The commissioner's latest estimate for an isthmian canal is $184,000,000, for the Panama route and $189,000,000 for the Nicaragua route. Colombia has proved to be a greedy haggler and it may become necessary to try what can be done with Nivaragua. The difference in estimated cost is not serious.

Venezuela is in danger of getting into serious trouble through her quarrelsome habits. As long as her people fought among themselves there was no protest. But when they begin to bulldoze foreigners they are likely to learn that other nations have law if they have none.

According to Mr. Bryan, "The Democratic party does not need leaders so much as it needs voters." This is a profound truth. But where is it to get them as long as popular education flourishes and grows stronger?

President Roosevelt is a true civil service reformer, and he also believes in living up to the fourteenth amendment. In his appointments neither race nor color counts; only merit.

Congress will not meddle with the tariff question at the present session. The people rule, and the people have commanded congress to "let well enough alone."

Mrs. Bertha Krupp is henceforth to be the official gunmaker of Prussia. She will be in a position to help enforce the laws, though denied any part in making them.

Andrew Carnegie would doubtless be willing to give several millions to get back his youthful health. But such a commodity is not purchaseable.

Oklahoma, with 600,000 population, needs a state government and ought to have it. The fact will doubtless be impressed upon congress.

The Mexican dollar, containing more silver than ours, is now down to 36½ cents. Where would our dollar be if it had been Bryanized?

A silver dollar is worth only 35 cents, and the Democratic party, which championed it, looks as if it were worth five cents less.

Out west they have taken to wearing sheetiron armor in football matches. This is reforming the sport backwards.

There is always something to be thankful for. Though congress is in session the state legislature is not.

The man who invented the modern flat is dead, but the evils that men do live after them.

Winter is well begun, but the old rule of half finished does not apply.

Ohio is 100 years old, but you'd never guess it from her looks.

Scrofula

Few are entirely free from it.

It may develop so slowly as to cause little if any disturbance during the whole period of childhood.

It may then produce irregularity of the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia, catarrh, and marked tendency to consumption before manifesting itself in much cutaneous eruption or glandular swelling.

It is best to be sure that you are quite free from it, and for its complete eradication you can rely on

Use These Spices.

If you have a recipe calling for a certain spice, it means that the best is needed to produce the desired flavor. The writer of the recipe you use, had in mind only perfect full flavored spices; if you use the ordinary ones, results must be unsatisfactory. We are agents for Gilpin, Langdon & Co's High Grade Spices—the very choicest the world produces—and that is the kind you should have. They cost a trifle more because they are all spice, but they go much farther and for that reason alone they are more economical than inferior grades, not to speak of their delicious flavor and wholesomeness.

The officer was prone to believe that he had made a mistake.

"This is my first visit here since '61," Mr. Vogel further stated. "I won't attempt to tell you how much different the city is from what it was way back in those years. In fact, it would be impossible for me to tell you all. I will make myself believe that it is East Liverpool, but it seems like a fairy story. You see, I came here to meet one of my boyhood playmates whom I have not seen since I left. The name is Mrs. Oella Reitz."

Officer McDermott then offered his services in assisting the man to find the friend and in a few minutes the two who had been apart and heard nothing of each other during the long span of years spent the remainder of the day most delightfully in bringing back to memory reminiscences of their youthful days. TWELVE PAGES.

Drunkenness is decreasing in the United States, according to the testimony of expert observers. The consumption of malt, spiritous and vinous liquors is still enormous, and the social glass is tolerated in many circles, but the vice of drunkenness is universally frowned upon. Business requirements, education, home influence, physical and moral culture, are all directed toward its eradication. Business men will not entrust their interests to others who have not clear brains and steady hands. Sobriety and success go together. The men who rise in politics, in the business world, in professional life and those who obtain greatest prominence in athletic circles are the men who do not drink. The temperance reformers are learning that the surest way to banish the evil is to educate the young as to the dire effects of drunkenness. The counsel of a loving and wise parent is the most effective temperance lecture. The schools are doing their part nobly, and the world is learning and growing better.

This is the season when the shrewd advertiser places his holiday announcements. There are hundreds of people who like to do their buying before the rush begins, while the goods are new and fresh and unhandled by shoppers. Clerks and customers both have more time and satisfactory purchases are more easily made. No part of a newspaper is scanned with more interest at this season than the descriptions given by the merchants of what they have to sell. He who would reap a harvest from advertising should begin planting his crop early.

The commissioner's latest estimate for an isthmian canal is $184,000,000, for the Panama route and $189,000,000 for the Nicaragua route. Colombia has proved to be a greedy haggler and it may become necessary to try what can be done with Nivaragua. The difference in estimated cost is not serious.

Venezuela is in danger of getting into serious trouble through her quarrelsome habits. As long as her people fought among themselves there was no protest. But when they begin to bulldoze foreigners they are likely to learn that other nations have law if they have none.

According to Mr. Bryan, "The Democratic party does not need leaders so much as it needs voters." This is a profound truth. But where is it to get them as long as popular education flourishes and grows stronger?

President Roosevelt is a true civil service reformer, and he also believes in living up to the fourteenth amendment. In his appointments neither race nor color counts; only merit.

Congress will not meddle with the tariff question at the present session. The people rule, and the people have commanded congress to "let well enough alone."

It may develop so slowly as to cause little if any disturbance during the whole period of childhood.

It may then produce irregularity of the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia, catarrh, and marked tendency to consumption before manifesting itself in much cutaneous eruption or glandular swelling.

It is best to be sure that you are quite free from it, and for its complete eradication you can rely on

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Andrew Carnegie would doubtless be willing to give several millions to get back his youthful health. But such a commodity is not purchaseable.

Oklahoma, with 600,000 population, needs a state government and ought to have it. The fact will doubtless be impressed upon congress.

The Mexican dollar, containing more silver than ours, is now down to 36½ cents. Where would our dollar be if it had been Bryanized?

A silver dollar is worth only 35 cents, and the Democratic party, which championed it, looks as if it were worth five cents less.

Out west they have taken to wearing sheetiron armor in football matches. This is reforming the sport backwards.

There is always something to be thankful for. Though congress is in session the state legislature is not.

The man who invented the modern flat is dead, but the evils that men do live after them.

Winter is well begun, but the old rule of half finished does not apply.

Ohio is 100 years old, but you'd never guess it from her looks.

In a Wellsville Resort Saturday Night —Police And Mayor Kept Busy.

Mayor Fogo has been a busy man for the past two days and has at the same time kept the police force very busy. Saturday evening shortly before 11 o'clock Officers Davis, Canaday, Henthorn and Elliott raided a house at 512 Coal street, commonly known as "Peggy's place." Nine girls and eight men were placed under arrest and gave security for their appearance before Mayor Fogo this afternoon.

The proprietress, Cassie Coyle, put up $15 for her appearance and the balance of the men and girls each put up $10, making a total of $175 which was turned over to the mayor as security money. The mayor stated yesterday that he expected every one to appear before him this afternoon.

Mrs. Mary Dennis, who was arrested last Friday evening, charged by a man known by the name of Pittsburg Jack with striking him without provocation appeared before Mayor Fogo Saturday afternoon. She was dismissed, "Pittsburg" failing to appear against her. The mayor said: "If Pittsburg will stay away from town and Mary will stay off the street corners we will call the case off."

On account of the illness of J. H. Jacobs, father of M. Jacobs, the lad who was arrested a few days ago on a charge of petit larceny, and for whom security was put up for his appearance before the mayor Saturday evening, the case was continued until some time this week.

James Russell, who was arrested one day last week, charged with interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty, appeared before the mayor at the time set Saturday evening and pleaded guilty. He was dismissed without fine, but was given good advice which will probably prevent any repetition of the offense.

STRUCK BY STREET CAR

Team of Valuable Work Horses Killed In Chester On Saturday.

Another street car accident occurred Saturday evening at about 6 o'clock. A team of horses owned by Arner & Bowers, the Chester liverymen, were so badly injured that they had to be shot an hour later. A Rock Springs car in charge of Motorman Reed and Conductor Azdell struck the horses near the corner of Third street and Carolina avenue. The horses were dragged some distance before the car came to a standstill, as the track was wet at the time. They were terribly bruised and mangled and their suffering was pitiful.

Motorman Reed said he saw nothing until he was upon them. Mr. Arner, who had been working the team, had unhitched them from the wagon and started home towards the barn. James Keevan, who was with Arner, started after them but did not reach them in time to get them off the tracks before the car hit them. The loss will be quite severe as the team was one of the best in the stables.

Some difference of opinion exists as to where the blame rests. Some think there is some blame attached on both sides. The team is said to be valued at $250. Arner & Bowers, it is said, will ask damages.

FIRST STREET BRIDGE

Agreement Reached Between Members of Council And Railroad Officials.

They immediately took measurements and made plans of the proposed bridge. Council agreed that if the railroad company would put in a new steel bridge they would make the approaches. The members will report to council in time for final action upon it at their next regular meeting next Thursday evening.

The Coal Under the River.

Seventy thousand acres of coal land worth from $10 to $100 per acre, is involved in a question of title. The question is who owns the bed of the Ohio river, the United States, the state or the property owners abutting on the river. It is an old question, but is arose anew in the sale of coal lands a few days ago Unless the legislature enacts some law upon the subject it will probably be carried to the supreme court of the United States. The river is underlaid with coal, which can be mined by shafting.

Seventy thousand acres of coal land worth from $10 to $100 per acre, is involved in a question of title. The question is who owns the bed of the Ohio river, the United States, the state or the property owners abutting on the river. It is an old question, but is arose anew in the sale of coal lands a few days ago Unless the legislature enacts some law upon the subject it will probably be carried to the supreme court of the United States. The river is underlaid with coal, which can be mined by shafting.

WELLSVILLE

SEVENTEEN ARRESTED

In a Wellsville Resort Saturday Night —Police And Mayor Kept Busy.

Mayor Fogo has been a busy man for the past two days and has at the same time kept the police force very busy. Saturday evening shortly before 11 o'clock Officers Davis, Canaday, Henthorn and Elliott raided a house at 512 Coal street, commonly known as "Peggy's place." Nine girls and eight men were placed under arrest and gave security for their appearance before Mayor Fogo this afternoon.

The proprietress, Cassie Coyle, put up $15 for her appearance and the balance of the men and girls each put up $10, making a total of $175 which was turned over to the mayor as security money. The mayor stated yesterday that he expected every one to appear before him this afternoon.

Mrs. Mary Dennis, who was arrested last Friday evening, charged by a man known by the name of Pittsburg Jack with striking him without provocation, appeared before Mayor Fogo Saturday afternoon. She was dismissed, "Pittsburg" failing to appear against her. The mayor said: "If Pittsburg will stay away from town and Mary will stay off the street corners we will call the case off."

On account of the illness of J. H. Jacobs, father of M. Jacobs, the lad who was arrested a few days ago on a charge of petit larceny, and for whom security was put up for his appearance before the mayor Saturday evening, the case was continued until some time this week.

James Russell, who was arrested one day last week, charged with interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty, appeared before the mayor at the time set Saturday evening and pleaded guilty. He was dismissed without fine, but was given good advice which will probably prevent any repetition of the offense.

STRUCK BY STREET CAR

Team of Valuable Work Horses Killed In Chester On Saturday.

Another street car accident occurred Saturday evening at about 6 o'clock. A team of horses owned by Arner & Bowers, the Chester liverymen, were so badly injured that they had to be shot an hour later. A Rock Springs car in charge of Motorman Reed and Conductor Azdell struck the horses near the corner of Third street and Carolina avenue. The horses were dragged some distance before the car came to a standstill, as the track was wet at the time. They were terribly bruised and mangled and their suffering was pitiful.

Motorman Reed said he saw nothing until he was upon them. Mr. Arner, who had been working the team, had unhitched them from the wagon and started home towards the barn. James Keevan, who was with Arner, started after them but did not reach them in time to get them off the tracks before the car hit them. The loss will be quite severe as the team was one of the best in the stables.

Some difference of opinion exists as to where the blame rests. Some think there is some blame attached on both sides. The team is said to be valued at $250. Arner & Bowers, it is said, will ask damages.

FIRST STREET BRIDGE

They immediately took measurements and made plans of the proposed bridge. Council agreed that if the railroad company would put in a new steel bridge they would make the approaches. The members will report to council in time for final action upon it at their next regular meeting next Thursday evening.

SECULAR THEMES ABLY DISCUSSED

Rev. C. G. Jordan Discourses on Trusts and Various Other Matters.

ARBITRATION SENTIMENT

In Dealing With Strikes Something to Be Devoutly Thankful for—Signs of the Times As Related to Progress. Other Excellent Sermons.

It is seldom that a church congregation is treated to a talk as practical and so full of everyday truths as that delivered by Rev. C. G. Jordan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning. The discourse was replete with telling hits, and showed in every topic touched upon the results of careful study and a thorough knowledge of state and government affairs.

The sermon was out of the ordinary, in that it treated on subjects and took up matters seldom touched upon by pulpit orators on Sunday. The pastor made no apology for his choice of theme, saying he was vitally interested and profoundly impressed by the importance of the several matters in mind and felt that it was altogether proper they should be aired.

Rev. Mr. Jordan read for his text the first verse of the 107th Psalm: "O, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever." In part the speaker said:

"When there is nothing transpires to excite or produce activity, affairs remains at a standstill. It is well for us to consider the question of whether there has been progress made or activity noted in the affairs of church and state during the past year for which we should be thankful. The moral enthusiasm has been manifest, and to this is due much of the success and forward move of the nation. In national affairs the idea of arbitration has gained a foothold, and if in no other way the year has brought forth transactions in which the government's highest officials have figured."

The growth of the trust was reviewed. Not many years ago a small amount of capital would suffice to establish a factory, the revenue from which would make an independent fortune for its owner in time. It was not long until other capital was called in and interests of the same character were combined so that establishment took on the proportions called trusts. The inventive genius of certain workmen had been employed and appliances installed which enabled one man to perform the work formerly requiring the time of three. In many ways these combinations of capital and industrial interests had been a benefit to the country, but there have been instances of where men had been robbed of the fruits of years of toil by having patents and improvements in mechanical appliances stolen or appropriated by his firm without his consent.

In this regard the trusts have been very wrong. However, the men who produced the great wealth saw the advantages of combination and they too organized for the common good. Both had a right to do this, in the opinion of the speaker, and the object was at once apparent. The farmer had combined interests in order that a solid front might be presented in the matter of competition, while the workmen organized that a just recompense might be asked for their services. Many reasons were cited showing that each had a perfect right to combine for their mutual good. The workmen had by concerted action secured shorter hours and better conditions, enabling himself and his employer to find more time for worship and other diversions calculated to benefit him morally and socially. The concessions, in the opinion of the speaker, had been of great and lasting benefit to both sides. The formation of these combinations had their bad effects, and in not a few cases unjust demands had been made which resulted disastrously to both employer and employe.

At this point the history of the late coal strike was recalled, or a comparison made in a similar manner. It was shown conclusively that this transaction had been disastrous, not only to the best interests of the parties directly involved, but to the whole people. Then the president of these United States interposed and asked why should these opposing forces not come together and reason this thing out. The suggestion was acted upon, and instead of prolonging a struggle that could not but end disastrously to both, besides causing a stagnation of every line of industry, the dispute had been submitted to a board of honest and conscientious men for settlement.

Rev. Mr. Jordan thanked God that the idea of arbitration had been adopted; that the time had come when differences could be adjusted in other ways than bloody battles and prolonged strikes. He hoped that the time would soon come when the navy yards would be blotted out and cannons would not be mounted on battle fields to shoot down our fellow beings. The time was fast approaching when men would meet at the high tribunal of reason and disputed questions would be submitted to arbitration.

Reference was made to one of the great curses of the land—that of intemperance, and considerable time was devoted to the subject. The pastor asserted that nineteen-twentieths of the convictions in our county and city courts could be traced to this cause. The Beal local option law recently enacted was touched upon, and the framers of that measure commended in no uncertain terms. It would if properly applied do much good. If in no other way the law would put a stigma upon the traffic and brand it as a curse.

In looking over the election returns the speaker noticed that the Prohibition vote had increased and was steadily gaining. He thanked God that the sentiment in favor of temperance and sobriety was growing. "Through the operation of this most beneficial of all temperance acts, I would to God that every hell hole in the city, state and nation could be closed forever." The increase in the temperance sentiment since last Thanksgiving had, he thought, been manifest.

Rev. Mr. Jordan was thankful for this awakening, and for the fact that there had been increased interest in the church and its work. Other interests had expanded—why not the church. The congregation was urged to prepare itself to receive this spirit of progressiveness which was everywhere manifested, and to thank God for the opportunity to join in the onward march toward the coveted goal.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Problem of Grading In East Liverpool Ably And Interestingly Discussed.

A 2-hour session of the City Sunday School association was held at the Christian church yesterday afternoon. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the interest shown indicates that the association will accomplish much good.

W. W. Sloan presided and the opening prapey was made by Rev. Mr. Steele. The chair was composed of the following persons:

Messrs. Craddock Reese, Edward Beardmore, Edgar Eagan; Misses Annie Beardmore, Laura Farrell, Nellie Lloyd, Bessie Stanley, Kitty Sinclair, Miss Clara Wagner presiding at the organ.

The topic for discussion yesterday was "Can the East Liverpool Sunday School Be Successfully Graded?" A paper was read by Charles Brown, of the Baptist church, who treated the subject in an able manner.

Discussion of the subject was participated in by Prof. R. E. Rayman, Dr. M. B. Pratt, E. D. Moore, Rev. J. W. Gorrell, William Morris, D. F. White and others. When it was ended the time of the meeting had expired, and two subjects were left for another time. They were "The Measure of the Teacher's Responsibility," and "When And Where Should Lesson Helps Be Used?"

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Impressive Exercises at St. John's Lutheran Church Were Held Yesterday.

The sixth anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church was celebrated yesterday in a fitting manner.

Rev. R. M. Zimmerman, late of Santiago, Cuba, was to have delivered the addressed, but he was unable to reach this city in time, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz, pastor of St. John's, was compelled to officiate.

The service was none the less interesting by reason of the change, as the discourse of Rev. Mr. Reinartz was a most interesting and instructive one. He took as his subject "The heaven declareth the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The theme was especially adapted to a service of this kind, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz treated his hearers to an unusually brilliant sermon.

Riches in Christ.

Services at the Methodist Protestant church yesterday morning were unusually interesting. Dr. Jones delivered an eloquent sermon from the text, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." The keynote of the sermon was the poverty of Christ, that through His poverty man might be saved. He came into the world to seek and save, and Christ could not do this unless He made Himself as one of the masses.

St. Andrew's Day Services.

St. Andrew's day was celebrated at St. Stephen's Episcopal church yesterday. The members of the society of St. Andrew attended the service in a body, and the sermon and special music were particularly designed for the benefit of the Brotherhood.

Will Call in Executive Board.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 1.—The 2,500 employes of the Kindig Coal company have agreed to submit their grievances with the company to the executive board of the United Mine Workers. The company is opposed to the check weighmen employed by the miners and on the last pay day refused to deduct from the wages of the employes the amount necessary to pay monthly salaries of the weighmen. This brought about a crisis, and at meetings of the employes held yesterday it was decided to lay the matter before the executive board of the miners' union.

Barges Struck Reef.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 1.—A special to the Free Press from Put-in-Bay, O., says: The steam barge D. F. Rose, owned by L. B. Parker, of Marine City, Mich., and the barge Mosher, owned by Captain David Hutchinson, of Port Huron, struck Starve island reef in Saturday night's gale, and it is feared that both vessels will be a total loss. The Rose was beached on the south shore of Put-in-Bay and the Mosher lies on the reef with her back broken. The Mosher is not insured. The barges Wawanash and Lyman Casey, which were with the Mosher in the Rose's tow, were able to leave for Port Huron yesterday, though leaking badly. An attempt will be made to release the Rose and Mosher.

Second Degree Verdict.

Athens, O., Dec. 1.—Frank Smith, aged 25, who shot and killed Perry Oxley and Charles Brown at Gloucester, on Aug. 20 last, was found guilty of murder in the second degree yesterday afternoon by the jury, which took the case Saturday.

SECULAR THEMES ABLY DISCUSSED

Rev. C. G. Jordan Discourses on Trusts and Various Other Matters.

ARBITRATION SENTIMENT

In Dealing With Strikes Something to Be Devoutly Thankful for—Signs of the Times As Related to Progress. Other Excellent Sermons.

It is seldom that a church congregation is treated to a talk as practical and so full of everyday truths as that delivered by Rev. C. G. Jordan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning. The discourse was replete with telling hits, and showed in every topic touched upon the results of careful study and a thorough knowledge of state and government affairs.

The sermon was out of the ordinary, in that it treated on subjects and took up matters seldom touched upon by pulpit orators on Sunday. The pastor made no apology for his choice of theme, saying he was vitally interested and profoundly impressed by the importance of the several matters in mind and felt that it was altogether proper they should be aired.

Rev. Mr. Jordan read for his text the first verse of the 107th Psalm: "O, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever." In part the speaker said:

"When there is nothing transpires to excite or produce activity, affairs remains at a standstill. It is well for us to consider the question of whether there has been progress made or activity noted in the affairs of church and state during the past year for which we should be thankful. The moral enthusiasm has been manifest, and to this is due much of the success and forward move of the nation. In national affairs the idea of arbitration has gained a foothold, and if in no other way the year has brought forth transactions in which the government's highest officials have figured."

The growth of the trust was reviewed. Not many years ago a small amount of capital would suffice to establish a factory, the revenue from which would make an independent fortune for its owner in time. It was not long until other capital was called in and interests of the same character were combined so that establishment took on the proportions called trusts. The inventive genius of certain workmen had been employed and appliances installed which enabled one man to perform the work formerly requiring the time of three. In many ways these combinations of capital and industrial interests had been a benefit to the country, but there have been instances of where men had been robbed of the fruits of years of toil by having patents and improvements in mechanical appliances stolen or appropriated by his firm without his consent.

In this regard the trusts have been very wrong. However, the men who produced the great wealth saw the advantages of combination and they too organized for the common good. Both had a right to do this, in the opinion of the speaker, and the object was at once apparent. The farmer had combined interests in order that a solid front might be presented in the matter of competition, while the workmen organized that a just recompense might be asked for their services. Many reasons were cited showing that each had a perfect right to combine for their mutual good. The workmen had by concerted action secured shorter hours and better conditions, enabling himself and his employer to find more time for worship and other diversions calculated to benefit him morally and socially. The concessions, in the opinion of the speaker, had been of great and lasting benefit to both sides. The formation of these combinations had their bad effects, and in not a few cases unjust demands had been made which resulted disastrously to both employer and employe.

At this point the history of the late coal strike was recalled, or a comparison made in a similar manner. It was shown conclusively that this transaction had been disastrous, not only to the best interests of the parties directly involved, but to the whole people. Then the president of these United States interposed and asked why should these opposing forces not come together and reason this thing out. The suggestion was acted upon, and instead of prolonging a struggle that could not but end disastrously to both, besides causing a stagnation of every line of industry, the dispute had been submitted to a board of honest and conscientious men for settlement.

Rev. Mr. Jordan thanked God that the idea of arbitration had been adopted; that the time had come when differences could be adjusted in other ways than bloody battles and prolonged strikes. He hoped that the time would soon come when the navy yards would be blotted out and cannons would not be mounted on battle fields to shoot down our fellow beings. The time was fast approaching when men would meet at the high tribunal of reason and disputed questions would be submitted to arbitration.

Reference was made to one of the great curses of the land—that of intemperance, and considerable time was devoted to the subject. The pastor asserted that nineteen-twentieths of the convictions in our county and city courts could be traced to this cause. The Beal local option law recently enacted was touched upon, and the framers of that measure commended in no uncertain terms. It would if properly applied do much good. If in no other way the law would put a stigma upon the traffic and brand it as a curse.

In looking over the election returns the speaker noticed that the Prohibition vote had increased and was steadily gaining. He thanked God that the sentiment in favor of temperance and sobriety was growing. "Through the operation of this most beneficial of all temperance acts, I would to God that every hell hole in the city, state and nation could be closed forever." The increase in the temperance sentiment since last Thanksgiving had, he thought, been manifest.

Rev. Mr. Jordan was thankful for this awakening, and for the fact that there had been increased interest in the church and its work. Other interests had expanded—why not the church. The congregation was urged to prepare itself to receive this spirit of progressiveness which was everywhere manifested, and to thank God for the opportunity to join in the onward march toward the coveted goal.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Problem of Grading In East Liverpool Ably And Interestingly Discussed.

A 2-hour session of the City Sunday School association was held at the Christian church yesterday afternoon. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the interest shown indicates that the association will accomplish much good.

W. W. Sloan presided and the opening prapey was made by Rev. Mr. Steele. The chair was composed of the following persons:

Messrs. Craddock Reese, Edward Beardmore, Edgar Eagan; Misses Annie Beardmore, Laura Farrell, Nellie Lloyd, Bessie Stanley, Kitty Sinclair, Miss Clara Wagner presiding at the organ.

The topic for discussion yesterday was "Can the East Liverpool Sunday School Be Successfully Graded?" A paper was read by Charles Brown, of the Baptist church, who treated the subject in an able manner.

Discussion of the subject was participated in by Prof. R. E. Rayman, Dr. M. B. Pratt, E. D. Moore, Rev. J. W. Gorrell, William Morris, D. F. White and others. When it was ended the time of the meeting had expired, and two subjects were left for another time. They were "The Measure of the Teacher's Responsibility," and "When And Where Should Lesson Helps Be Used?"

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Impressive Exercises at St. John's Lutheran Church Were Held Yesterday.

The sixth anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church was celebrated yesterday in a fitting manner.

Rev. R. M. Zimmerman, late of Santiago, Cuba, was to have delivered the addressed, but he was unable to reach this city in time, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz, pastor of St. John's, was compelled to officiate.

The service was none the less interesting by reason of the change, as the discourse of Rev. Mr. Reinartz was a most interesting and instructive one. He took as his subject "The heaven declareth the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The theme was especially adapted to a service of this kind, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz treated his hearers to an unusually brilliant sermon.

Riches in Christ.

Services at the Methodist Protestant church yesterday morning were unusually interesting. Dr. Jones delivered an eloquent sermon from the text, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." The keynote of the sermon was the poverty of Christ, that through His poverty man might be saved. He came into the world to seek and save, and Christ could not do this unless He made Himself as one of the masses.

St. Andrew's Day Services.

St. Andrew's day was celebrated at St. Stephen's Episcopal church yesterday. The members of the society of St. Andrew attended the service in a body, and the sermon and special music were particularly designed for the benefit of the Brotherhood.

"Neglected colds make fat graveyards." Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup helps men and women to a happy, vigorous old age."

The time was fast approaching when men would meet at the high tribunal of reason and disputed questions would be submitted to arbitration.

Reference was made to one of the great curses of the land—that of intemperance, and considerable time was devoted to the subject. The pastor asserted that nineteen-twentieths of the convictions in our county and city courts could be traced to this cause. The Beal local option law recently enacted was touched upon, and the framers of that measure commended in no uncertain terms. It would if properly applied do much good. If in no other way the law would put a stigma upon the traffic and brand it as a curse.

In looking over the election returns the speaker noticed that the Prohibition vote had increased and was steadily gaining. He thanked God that the sentiment in favor of temperance and sobriety was growing. "Through the operation of this most beneficial of all temperance acts, I would to God that every hell hole in the city, state and nation could be closed forever." The increase in the temperance sentiment since last Thanksgiving had, he thought, been manifest.

Rev. Mr. Jordan was thankful for this awakening, and for the fact that there had been increased interest in the church and its work. Other interests had expanded—why not the church. The congregation was urged to prepare itself to receive this spirit of progressiveness which was everywhere manifested, and to thank God for the opportunity to join in the onward march toward the coveted goal.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Problem of Grading In East Liverpool Ably And Interestingly Discussed.

A 2-hour session of the City Sunday School association was held at the Christian church yesterday afternoon. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the interest shown indicates that the association will accomplish much good.

W. W. Sloan presided and the opening prapey was made by Rev. Mr. Steele. The chair was composed of the following persons:

Messrs. Craddock Reese, Edward Beardmore, Edgar Eagan; Misses Annie Beardmore, Laura Farrell, Nellie Lloyd, Bessie Stanley, Kitty Sinclair, Miss Clara Wagner presiding at the organ.

The topic for discussion yesterday was "Can the East Liverpool Sunday School Be Successfully Graded?" A paper was read by Charles Brown, of the Baptist church, who treated the subject in an able manner.

Discussion of the subject was participated in by Prof. R. E. Rayman, Dr. M. B. Pratt, E. D. Moore, Rev. J. W. Gorrell, William Morris, D. F. White and others. When it was ended the time of the meeting had expired, and two subjects were left for another time. They were "The Measure of the Teacher's Responsibility," and "When And Where Should Lesson Helps Be Used?"

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Impressive Exercises at St. John's Lutheran Church Were Held Yesterday.

The sixth anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church was celebrated yesterday in a fitting manner.

Rev. R. M. Zimmerman, late of Santiago, Cuba, was to have delivered the addressed, but he was unable to reach this city in time, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz, pastor of St. John's, was compelled to officiate.

The service was none the less interesting by reason of the change, as the discourse of Rev. Mr. Reinartz was a most interesting and instructive one. He took as his subject "The heaven declareth the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The theme was especially adapted to a service of this kind, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz treated his hearers to an unusually brilliant sermon.

Riches in Christ.

Services at the Methodist Protestant church yesterday morning were unusually interesting. Dr. Jones delivered an eloquent sermon from the text, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." The keynote of the sermon was the poverty of Christ, that through His poverty man might be saved. He came into the world to seek and save, and Christ could not do this unless He made Himself as one of the masses.

St. Andrew's Day Services.

St. Andrew's day was celebrated at St. Stephen's Episcopal church yesterday. The members of the society of St. Andrew attended the service in a body, and the sermon and special music were particularly designed for the benefit of the Brotherhood.

MORE HOSPITAL SCANDALS

Work of a Shady Character By the Old Board at Dayton State Hospital—The World's Fair Commissioners for Ohio.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 1.—The press at the state capital made many eulogistic references to the late Captain William T. Cope, former treasurer of state, who was born and reared in Columbiana county, and who was laid to rest in this city Saturday. Most of the state officials were present at the obsequies, which were simple and touching. The pall-bearers were close friends of the deceased and were as follows: Hon. I. B. Cameron, treasurer of state; Hon. Harry M. Daugherty, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the time Judge Nash was named for the place; Charles Wambaugh, Oliver Perry, Scott A. Webb, Charles Morris, Samuel P. Elliott and Charles Hain.

On Sunday the Ohio State Journal printed this: "In the death of Hon. William T. Cope Wednesday evening Ohio loses a citizen who served his state well for many years. Mr. Cope was elected to represent Columbiana county in the sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth general assemblies. and became almost from the inception of his first term one of the leaders of the house. At the beginning of his second term he was made chairman of the finance committee, a position which he filled with great credit to himself and the state. W. A. Thompson, treasurer of Columbiana county, a close friend of Mr. Cope, attended the funeral."

In appointing Senator Moore, of Athens, and Representative Hagenbuch, of Urbana, members of the commission to represent Ohio at the St. Louis exposition, Governor Nash acted upon advice given by Judge George B. Okey, a Democrat and one of the best lawyers in the state. Attorney General Sheets rendered an opinion informing the governor that the appointment of legislators on the committee would not be unconstitutional, but Judge Okey holds that as the commissionerships are but temporary and not permanent, they do not fall within the inhibition of the constitution, which prescribes that members of the legislature shall not serve in any office created by the legislature of which they are members, until one year after the expiration of the term of office of the member. The judge says the commissionerships are not civil offices as construed by the constitution.

A report filed with Governor Nash by the trustees of the Dayton State hospital brings to light transactions by the board appointed to manage the institution by the Bushnell administration and which Governor Nash ousted, of a very shady character. No charges are made, the facts as discovered by the present board merely being given. Among other things, a shortage of $4,000 was found. The report has been placed in the hands of the attorney general, and it is likely that legal proceedings will be instituted. The contents of the report are sensational in the extreme.

The strike assessments for the support of the anthracite miners have been discontinued in Ohio. The assessment was levied last July, and while it was in effect each miner gave 10 per cent of his wages to a fund which was used in maintaining the strike. About 150,000 Ohio miners paid assessments.

REALM OF SPORTS

ENDED IN A FIGHT

CHESTER INDIANS WANTED TO PUNISH THE B. A. C.

East Liverpool Boys Declared Winners, But Opponents Were Not Satisfied.

The foot ball game played at Rock Springs park Saturday afternoon by the Brewery Athletic club of this city and the Chester Indians, composed of tin mill employes, ended in a general fight, the result of the latter team refusing to abide by a decision of the referee on a ball which he declared dead, it having fallen to the ground after a fumble.

A member of the B. A. C. team, after the game said that, had not the East Liverpool team run from the park, every man would undoubtedly be today carrying a sore spot on his physiognomy. He said that the Indians were not satisfied to suffer fair defeat and to get even wanted to whip their opponents.

The halves played were of 15 minutes. In the first half Bridge scored a touchdown after a terrible run of 90 yards. Coleman made an advance of 10 yards and Brock, on a trick play, advanced 20 yards. Herbert, of the Indians, made a 10-yard run.

In the second half Bridge went through center for five yards and Coleman was thrown back five yards by the next rush. Brock figured conspicuously by running 10 yards around the end twice. Brock and Coleman fiercely tackled Herbert and succeeded in throwing him back five yards. The next rush was when the game ended. The ball was fumbled and fell to the ground. The referee immediately declared it dead and the Indians refused to stand for it. They were given 10 minutes by the referee to continue the game, and upon their refusing to again start the B. A. C. team was declared the winner by a score of 5 to 0.

Captain Brock claims his team to be the champion of eastern Ohio among all teams of 115 pounds in weight. He challenges any and all comers, and is willing to play for love or money. He is trying to arrange for a game with the Oakland team for next Saturday.

ANOTHER FAILURE

On the Part of the Columbian Juniors to Meet the C. F. Armours.

The C. F. Armour rugby team has about decided to give up meeting the Columbian Juniors this season. A second game was arranged between the teams for last Saturday, but as on the occasion of the Thanksgiving game the latter team failed to appear, and the Armours are now positive the Juniors are afraid of them.

The Armours would like to meet any reliable eleven in this section before the season closes. W. G. Dorf is the manager and communications addressed to him will receive consideration.

Sign of Cold Winter.

A local sportsman says the coming winter will be an extremely severe one. He bases his prediction on the fact that the hide of the squirrel in the nieghboring hills is so thick and tough that it can hardly be cut with a knife. He says he has hunted for many years and has yet failed to find squirrels with tough hides when a severe winter did not follow.

REED SMOOT OF UTAH.

Apostle of the Mormon Church Who May Go to United States Senate.

Reed Smoot, who in all probability will succeed Joseph L. Rawlins as senator from Utah, is an apostle of the Mormon church. Mr. Smoot is a Republican in politics and one of the most popular men in the state.

The prospective senator is but little over forty years of age and is wealthy. His father was one of the pioneers who crossed the plains with Brigham Young. He was one of the founders of the town of Provo, Mr. Smoot's present home.

Mr. Smoot's wife—unlike many leaders of the Mormon church, he has but one—is a daughter of H. S. Eldredge, a leading banker of Salt Lake City. She brought him a fortune, which has been increased by wise investment until Mr. Smoot is now considered one of the richest men in Utah. He is a banker and manufacturer, besides being interested in mining and many other enterprises and industries.

ORANGE GROVES FOR CUBA

Fruit Long Forbidden to Be Grown For Sale In That Prolific Isle.

Cuba, so long hampered and repressed by Spanish domination, now that she has become a republic and free to work her own will, is turning her attention to developing the immense fruit growing possibilities of her prolific soil.

Under Spanish rule the Cubans were not permitted to engage in orange growing as a business. Landholders were permitted to have half a dozen orange trees on their plantation, but they could not sell the fruit. If they tried to do so, their trees were chopped down and they were fined. It was the same way with pineapples and limes, and the reason for this law was that the fruit growers in Spain would not tolerate competition from the island.

A CUBAN FRUIT STORE.

Since Cuba has become a republic, however, the planters are free to grow what they please, and a number of those who are engaging in the orange growing business are Americans.

Tropical fruits of all kinds grow wild in great abundance in Cuba. But according to the Spanish idea it did not pay to cultivate them. Quicker returns were obtained from sugar and tobacco; besides the latter products did not compete with Spain's fruit orchards. So, although bananas, oranges, plums, lemons, limes, citron, grape fruit, pineapples and pears are found all over the island growing in a wild state, they have never been cultivated to any extent.

Fruit growers from Florida and California who have examined the Cuban soil report that it is the best and richest land they have ever seen, possessing many properties which have to be supplied artificially in the United States.

Another feature which impressed itself upon the experts who went over the ground was that there are no frosts in Cuba. In Florida, where frosts often destroy crops for several years in succession, the owner of groves has to cover his trees. There is none of this in Cuba, for frosts are unknown there. The temperature averages 73 degrees for the year, and it is said that the orange crop will be ready for the market several weeks before that of Florida.

On Sunday the Ohio State Journal printed this: "In the death of Hon. William T. Cope Wednesday evening Ohio loses a citizen who served his state well for many years. Mr. Cope was elected to represent Columbiana county in the sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth general assemblies, and became almost from the inception of his first term one of the leaders of the house. At the beginning of his second term he was made chairman of the finance committee, a position which he filled with great credit to himself and the state. W. A. Thompson, treasurer of Columbiana county, a close friend of Mr. Cope, attended the funeral."

In appointing Senator Moore, of Athens, and Representative Hagenbuch, of Urbana, members of the commission to represent Ohio at the St. Louis exposition, Governor Nash acted upon advice given by Judge George B. Okey, a Democrat and one of the best lawyers in the state. Attorney General Sheets rendered an opinion informing the governor that the appointment of legislators on the committee would not be unconstitutional, but Judge Okey holds that as the commissionerships are but temporary and not permanent, they do not fall within the inhibition of the constitution, which prescribes that members of the legislature shall not serve in any office created by the legislature of which they are members, until one year after the expiration of the term of office of the member. The judge says the commissionerships are not civil offices as construed by the constitution.

A report filed with Governor Nash by the trustees of the Dayton State hospital brings to light transactions by the board appointed to manage the institution by the Bushnell administration and which Governor Nash ousted, of a very shady character. No charges are made, the facts as discovered by the present board merely being given. Among other things, a shortage of $4,000 was found. The report has been placed in the hands of the attorney general, and it is likely that legal proceedings will be instituted. The contents of the report are sensational in the extreme.

The strike assessments for the support of the anthracite miners have been discontinued in Ohio. The assessment was levied last July, and while it was in effect each miner gave 10 per cent of his wages to a fund which was used in maintaining the strike. About 150,000 Ohio miners paid assessments.

ENDED IN A FIGHT

CHESTER INDIANS WANTED TO PUNISH THE B. A. C.

East Liverpool Boys Declared Winners, But Opponents Were Not Satisfied.

The foot ball game played at Rock Springs park Saturday afternoon by the Brewery Athletic club of this city and the Chester Indians, composed of tin mill employes, ended in a general fight, the result of the latter team refusing to abide by a decision of the referee on a ball which he declared dead, it having fallen to the ground after a fumble.

A member of the B. A. C. team, after the game said that, had not the East Liverpool team run from the park, every man would undoubtedly be today carrying a sore spot on his physiognomy. He said that the Indians were not satisfied to suffer fair defeat and to get even wanted to whip their opponents.

The halves played were of 15 minutes. In the first half Bridge scored a touchdown after a terrible run of 90 yards. Coleman made an advance of 10 yards and Brock, on a trick play, advanced 20 yards. Herbert, of the Indians, made a 10-yard run.

In the second half Bridge went through center for five yards and Coleman was thrown back five yards by the next rush. Brock figured conspicuously by running 10 yards around the end twice. Brock and Coleman fiercely tackled Herbert and succeeded in throwing him back five yards. The next rush was when the game ended. The ball was fumbled and fell to the ground. The referee immediately declared it dead and the Indians refused to stand for it. They were given 10 minutes by the referee to continue the game, and upon their refusing to again start the B. A. C. team was declared the winner by a score of 5 to 0.

Captain Brock claims his team to be the champion of eastern Ohio among all teams of 115 pounds in weight. He challenges any and all comers, and is willing to play for love or money. He is trying to arrange for a game with the Oakland team for next Saturday.

ANOTHER FAILURE

On the Part of the Columbian Juniors to Meet the C. F. Armours.

The C. F. Armour rugby team has about decided to give up meeting the Columbian Juniors this season. A second game was arranged between the teams for last Saturday, but as on the occasion of the Thanksgiving game the latter team failed to appear, and the Armours are now positive the Juniors are afraid of them.

The Armours would like to meet any reliable eleven in this section before the season closes. W. G. Dorf is the manager and communications addressed to him will receive consideration.

Sign of Cold Winter.

A local sportsman says the coming winter will be an extremely severe one. He bases his prediction on the fact that the hide of the squirrel in the nieghboring hills is so thick and tough that it can hardly be cut with a knife. He says he has hunted for many years and has yet failed to find squirrels with tough hides when a severe winter did not follow.

REED SMOOT OF UTAH.

Apostle of the Mormon Church Who May Go to United States Senate.

Reed Smoot, who in all probability will succeed Joseph L. Rawlins as senator from Utah, is an apostle of the Mormon church. Mr. Smoot is a Republican in politics and one of the most popular men in the state.

The prospective senator is but little over forty years of age and is wealthy. His father was one of the pioneers who crossed the plains with Brigham Young. He was one of the founders of the town of Provo, Mr. Smoot's present home.

Mr. Smoot's wife—unlike many leaders of the Mormon church, he has but one—is a daughter of H. S. Eldredge, a leading banker of Salt Lake City. She brought him a fortune, which has been increased by wise investment until Mr. Smoot is now considered one of the richest men in Utah. He is a banker and manufacturer, besides being interested in mining and many other enterprises and industries.

ORANGE GROVES FOR CUBA

Fruit Long Forbidden to Be Grown For Sale In That Prolific Isle.

Cuba, so long hampered and repressed by Spanish domination, now that she has become a republic and free to work her own will, is turning her attention to developing the immense fruit growing possibilities of her prolific soil.

Under Spanish rule the Cubans were not permitted to engage in orange growing as a business. Landholders were permitted to have half a dozen orange trees on their plantation, but they could not sell the fruit. If they tried to do so, their trees were chopped down and they were fined. It was the same way with pineapples and limes, and the reason for this law was that the fruit growers in Spain would not tolerate competition from the island.

A CUBAN FRUIT STORE.

Since Cuba has become a republic, however, the planters are free to grow what they please, and a number of those who are engaging in the orange growing business are Americans.

Tropical fruits of all kinds grow wild in great abundance in Cuba. But according to the Spanish idea it did not pay to cultivate them. Quicker returns were obtained from sugar and tobacco; besides the latter products did not compete with Spain's fruit orchards. So, although bananas, oranges, plums, lemons, limes, citron, grape fruit, pineapples and pears are found all over the island growing in a wild state, they have never been cultivated to any extent.

Fruit growers from Florida and California who have examined the Cuban soil report that it is the best and richest land they have ever seen, possessing many properties which have to be supplied artificially in the United States.

Another feature which impressed itself upon the experts who went over the ground was that there are no frosts in Cuba. In Florida, where frosts often destroy crops for several years in succession, the owner of groves has to cover his trees. There is none of this in Cuba, for frosts are unknown there. The temperature averages 73 degrees for the year, and it is said that the orange crop will be ready for the market several weeks before that of Florida.

MORE HOSPITAL SCANDALS

Work of a Shady Character By the Old Board at Dayton State Hospital—The World's Fair Commissioners for Ohio.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 1.—The press at the state capital made many eulogistic references to the late Captain William T. Cope, former treasurer of state, who was born and reared in Columbiana county, and who was laid to rest in this city Saturday. Most of the state officials were present at the obsequies, which were simple and touching. The pall-bearers were close friends of the deceased and were as follows: Hon. I. B. Cameron, treasurer of state; Hon. Harry M. Daugherty, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the time Judge Nash was named for the place; Charles Wambaugh, Oliver Perry, Scott A. Webb, Charles Morris, Samuel P. Elliott and Charles Hain.

On Sunday the Ohio State Journal printed this: "In the death of Hon. William T. Cope Wednesday evening Ohio loses a citizen who served his state well for many years. Mr. Cope was elected to represent Columbiana county in the sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth general assemblies, and became almost from the inception of his first term one of the leaders of the house. In appointing Senator Moore, of Athens, and Representative Hagenbuch, of Urbana, members of the commission to represent Ohio at the St. Louis exposition, Governor Nash acted upon advice given by Judge George B. Okey, a Democrat and one of the best lawyers in the state. Attorney General Sheets rendered an opinion informing the governor that the appointment of legislators on the committee would not be unconstitutional, but Judge Okey holds that as the commissionerships are but temporary and not permanent, they do not fall within the inhibition of the constitution, which prescribes that members of the legislature shall not serve in any office created by the legislature of which they are members, until one year after the expiration of the term of office of the member. The East Liverpool Street Railway Put In Operation December 1, 1891.

Just 11 years ago today the East Liverpool Street railroad was put in actual operation in this city. It will be remembered by the older residents that the franchise was granted to Albert Johnson, Sidney Short and others 90 days previous to the placing in operation of the railway. Johnson promised the city that the road should be constructed and in running order within 90 days, and he kept his promise.

The line has been of great benefit to the citizens of this portion of the Ohio valley, and with extensions and improvements is likely to be of greater benefit in future years.

Owl on a Rampage.

William Dye, who has charge of the animal department at the Pleasure Palace, met with a misfortune this morning while engaged in handling a pet owl, which is nearly as large as a chicken. The owl suddenly started to fly, and it being daylight it was unable to see. It flew the whole length of the room, and when it reached the end it continued its course through a large glass window. Being stunned by the shock Mr. Dye was able to pick it up before it could fly again.

CURRENCY FIGURES.

Comptroller Ridgely's Report Shows That Deposits Reach New High Point.

TROOPS SHOULD HAVE CANTEEN.

Its Absence Is Proving Bad for Army, Says Secretary of War—Recommends Passage of the Militia Bill Now Before Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The annual report of William B. Ridgely, comptroller of the currency, has been prepared for transmission to congress. The report starts with a table giving a detailed statement of the resources and liabilities of all the national banks of the United States, as shown by the five reports of condition made in response to the call of the comptroller.

From the table it appears that on Sept. 15, 1902, the date of the last call, 4,601 associations reported, with aggregate resources of $6,113,928,50. The loans and discounts amounted to $3,208,127,480.69, or more than 50 per cent of the total resources of the banks. The items of surplus and undivided profits amounted, respectively, to $326,393,953.66 and $169,216,512.03. The individual deposits reached the highest point in the existence of the national banking system, $3,209,273,893.93. There was due to approved reserve agents, other national banks, state banks and bankers, trust companies and savings banks, the sum of $1,200,341,233.39.

A Year's Growth.

From Sept. 30, 1901, to Sept. 15, 1902, there was an increase of $418,581,617.54 in the aggregate resources of the reporting banks, the principal items of interest being, loans and discounts, $261,511,562.29; United States bonds, $12,570,520; due from national and other banks, $35,217,372.29. There was an increase in capital stock of $50,193,537; in surplus and other profits of $65,048,357.81; and in individual deposits of $271,520,660.60.

During the year ended Oct. 31, 1902, 470 banks were chartered, with an aggregate capital of $31,800,000, of which number 302, with capital of $7,905,000, were of the smaller class, and 168, with capital of $23,225,000, had individual capital of $50,000 and over. There was an average of one and one-half banks organized on every secular day of the year.

The banking power of the world in 1850, that is, capital, surplus profits, note issues and deposits, as stated by the late M. G. Mulhall, was £3,197,000,000, as follows:

United Kingdom, £910,000,000; continental Europe, £1,037,000,000; Australia, Canada, Cape Colony, Argentina and Uruguay, £220,000,000, and United States, £1,030,000,000. In 1894 Maurice L. Muhleman calculated the banking power of the world at £3,915,000,000.

Mr. Ridgely discusses the needs of currency legislation at great length and gives a brief statement of the action taken and trend of discussion at meetings of bankers' associations.

Secretary Root's Report.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The report of Secretary of War Root, to be sent to congress, makes many recommendations somewhat in line with those of his last report. Perhaps the most interesting point is on the subject of canteens, in which the secretary says:

"I am convinced that the general effect of prohibiting the use of beer and light wines within the limited area of the of the army post is to lead the enlisted men to go out of the post, to frequent vile resorts which cluster in the neighborhood, to drink bad whisky to excess, and to associate intimately with abandoned men and more abandoned women; and that the operation of the law is to increase drunkenness, disease of the most loathsome kind, insubordination and desertion, and moral and physical degeneration."

On the disposition of the army in peace, he recommends large camps adjacent to, but beyond the limits of large cities, rather than many small camps, thus giving opportunity for increasing the efficiency of the army.

Militia System.

On the question of state militia, the secretary urges the passage of the bill now before congress, and says in part:

"It is really absurd that a nation which maintains but a small regular army and depends upon unprofessional citizen soldiery for its defense should run along as we have done for 110 years under a militia law which never worked satisfactorily in the beginning, and which was perfectly obsolete before any man now fit for military duty was born."

The secretary recommends the creation of a general staff for the army, with the commanding general as chief. This staff, however, would not be modeled after those of European armies.

The secretary estimates the needs of his department for the year ending June 30, 1904, as follows: Civil establishment, $2,020,896; military establishment, support of the army and of the military academy, $77,986,515.29; public works, including fortifications and river and harbor improvements, $40,175,613.03; miscellaneous, $5,806,411.10; total, $125,989,435.42. The total estimate for the year ending June 30, 1903, was $157,469,836.26, and the appropriation by congress was $146,937,395.77.

ENGLAND'S ACTIVE FOE, THE MAD MOLLAH.

A small British army is now hard at work endeavoring to rout the forces of the Mad Mollah in Somaliland, Africa. The Mad Mollah and his 12,000 followers recently defeated a British force, inflicting considerable loss.

Charles Householder, of Sebring, and Miss Mamie McGuffin, of East Palestine, experienced much trouble in getting married on Thanksgiving day. Not to be so easily discouraged the couple boarded the first train for Alliance, and related their wishes to Father Farrell, who agreed to perform the ceremony after satisfying himself as to the ages of the parties and the publication of the bans. The last word of the ceremony had scarcely been spoken when Father Farrell was called to the telephone and received Father Barth's message of warning. OHIO'S CENTENN'AL

ANNIVERSARY OF FIRST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Appropriate Exercises Held at Chillicothe on Saturday.

Chillicothe, December 1.—On Saturday this city, the original capital of the northwest territory, out of which was formed the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, celebrated the centennial anniversary of the assembling of the convention which framed the first constitution of Ohio. Advantage was taken of the occasion to place a tablet to mark the site of the building in which the constitutional convention assembled and which was also the capitol of the northwest territory as well as of the state of Ohio until the seat of government was removed to Columbus.

In the morning the tablet was presented to the city and county by Robert W. Manley, a great-grandson of Edward Tiffin, the first governor of Ohio. It was accepted by Wallace D. Yaple, mayor of the city, and was unveiled by Miss Effie Scott, a granddaughter of Governor William Allen and a great-granddaughter of Governor Duncan McArthur.

In the afternoon at Memorial hall the celebration was continued by an introductory address by Hon. W. T. McClintick, one of the oldest residents of the city. His address was full of delightful reminiscences of the city and its pioneers. Hon. Daniel J. Ryan spoke on "The Original Constitution and Its Effect on Ohio History."

At the close of the centennial exercises in the afternoon the members of the State Historical Society met to discuss the centennial celebration of Ohio's admission to the union, which is to be held here May 21 and 22, 1903. It was decided to make this celebration one of national interest, and the president and governors of all the states in the union will be invited to participate.

Panhandle Railroad Company Adjusts Claims Against It By Picnickers.

Steubenville, December 1.—It will cost the Pennsylvania Railroad company $1,150 because one of its conductors failed to stop a passenger train at Willow Springs last Fourth of July. The company late Wednesday compromised with the claimants in the 23 cases against it for $50 each. The agreements, therefore, will result in the dismissals of the suits now standing against the company in the circuit court.

A party of 23 people, Wheeling people, spent last Fourth of July at the springs some distance above the city, and made arrangements for the late train on the Panhandle to stop there and take them on for the return trip to the city.

The party was overlooked in a rush of business on the road that day, and suits were entered by each member of the party for $1,000 damages each.

In the trial of the first case, that of Lillian Poe vs. the Panhandle, the jury brought in a verdict of $60 for the plaintiff. This termination of the test case compelled the railroad company to sue for settlement in all of them. Prior to the trial of the Poe case the company had offered each member of the party $60, but it was refused. The company thus gets off for half the amount.

CURRENCY FIGURES.

Comptroller Ridgely's Report Shows That Deposits Reach New High Point.

TROOPS SHOULD HAVE CANTEEN.

Its Absence Is Proving Bad for Army, Says Secretary of War—Recommends Passage of the Militia Bill Now Before Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The annual report of William B. Ridgely, comptroller of the currency, has been prepared for transmission to congress. The report starts with a table giving a detailed statement of the resources and liabilities of all the national banks of the United States, as shown by the five reports of condition made in response to the call of the comptroller.

From the table it appears that on Sept. 15, 1902, the date of the last call, 4,601 associations reported, with aggregate resources of $6,113,928,50. The loans and discounts amounted to $3,208,127,480.69, or more than 50 per cent of the total resources of the banks. The items of surplus and undivided profits amounted, respectively, to $326,393,953.66 and $169,216,512.03. The individual deposits reached the highest point in the existence of the national banking system, $3,209,273,893.93. There was due to approved reserve agents, other national banks, state banks and bankers, trust companies and savings banks, the sum of $1,200,341,233.39.

A Year's Growth.

From Sept. 30, 1901, to Sept. 15, 1902, there was an increase of $418,581,617.54 in the aggregate resources of the reporting banks, the principal items of interest being, loans and discounts, $261,511,562.29; United States bonds, $12,570,520; due from national and other banks, $35,217,372.29. There was an increase in capital stock of $50,193,587; in surplus and other profits of $65,049,357.81; and in individual deposits of $271,520,660.60.

During the year ended Oct. 31, 1902, 470 banks were chartered, with an aggregate capital of $[illegible],000, of which number 302, with capital of $87,905,000, were of the smaller class, and 168, with capital of $23,225,000, had individual capital of $50,000 and over. There was an average of one and one-half banks organized on every secular day of the year.

The banking power of the world in 1850, that is, capital, surplus profits, note issues and deposits, as stated by the late M. G. Mulhall, was £3,197,000,000, as follows:

United Kingdom, £910,000,000; continental Europe, £1,037,000,000; Australia, Canada, Cape Colony, Argentina and Uruguay, £220,000,000, and United States, £1,030,000,000. In 1894 Maurice L. Muhleman calculated the banking power of the world at £3,915,000,000.

Mr. Ridgely discusses the needs of currency legislation at great length and gives a brief statement of the action taken and trend of discussion at meetings of bankers' associations.

Secretary Root's Report.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The report of Secretary of War Root, to be sent to congress, makes many recommendations somewhat in line with those of his last report. Perhaps the most interesting point is on the subject of canteens, in which the secretary says:

"I am convinced that the general effect of prohibiting the use of beer and light wines within the limited area of the of the army post is to lead the enlisted men to go out of the post, to frequent vile resorts which cluster in the neighborhood, to drink bad whisky to excess, and to associate intimately with abandoned men and more abandoned women; and that the operation of the law is to increase drunkenness, disease of the most loathsome kind, insubordination and desertion, and moral and physical degeneration."

On the disposition of the army in peace, he recommends large camps adjacent to, but beyond the limits of large cities, rather than many small camps, thus giving opportunity for increasing the efficiency of the army.

Militia System.

On the question of state militia, the secretary urges the passage of the bill now before congress, and says in part:

"It is really absurd that a nation which maintains but a small regular army and depends upon unprofessional citizen soldiery for its defense should run along as we have done for 110 years under a militia law which never worked satisfactorily in the beginning, and which was perfectly obsolete before any man now fit for military duty was born."

The secretary recommends the creation of a general staff for the army, with the commanding general as chief. This staff, however, would not be modeled after those of European armies.

The secretary estimates the needs of his department for the year ending June 30, 1904, as follows: Civil establishment, $2,020,896; military establishment, support of the army and of the military academy, $77,986,615.29; public works, including fortifications and river and harbor improvements, $40,175,613.03; miscellaneous, $5,806,411.10; [illegible]23,989,436.42. The total estimate for the year ending June 30, 1904, was $157,-999,336.26, and the appropriation by congress was $146,937,395.77.

Secretary Root's Report.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The report of Secretary of War Root, to be sent to congress, makes many recommendations somewhat in line with those of his last report. Perhaps the most interesting point is on the subject of canteens, in which the secretary says:

"I am convinced that the general effect of prohibiting the use of beer and light wines within the limited area of the of the army post is to lead the enlisted men to go out of the post, to frequent vile resorts which cluster in the neighborhood, to drink bad whisky to excess, and to associate intimately with abandoned men and more abandoned women; and that the operation of the law is to increase drunkenness, disease of the most loathsome kind, insubordination and desertion, and moral and physical degeneration."

On the disposition of the army in peace, he recommends large camps adjacent to, but beyond the limits of large cities, rather than many small camps, thus giving opportunity for increasing the efficiency of the army.

Militia System.

On the question of state militia, the secretary urges the passage of the bill now before congress, and says in part:

"It is really absurd that a nation which maintains but a small regular army and depends upon unprofessional citizen soldiery for its defense should run along as we have done for 110 years under a militia law which never worked satisfactorily in the beginning, and which was perfectly obsolete before any man now fit for military duty was born."

The secretary recommends the creation of a general staff for the army, with the commanding general as chief. This staff, however, would not be modeled after those of European armies.

The secretary estimates the needs of his department for the year ending June 30, 1904, as follows: Civil establishment, $2,020,896; military establishment, support of the army and of the military academy, $77,986,515.29; public works, including fortifications and river and harbor improvements, $40,175,613.03; miscellaneous, $5,806,411.10; [illegible] $125,989,435.42. The total estimate for the year ending June 30, 1903, was $157,609,836.26, and the appropriation by congress was $146,937,395.77.

LOVE FOUND A WAY

Young Couple Had Trouble in Getting Married, But Finally Succeeded.

Charles Householder, of Sebring, and Miss Mamie McGuffin, of East Palestine, experienced much trouble in getting married on Thanksgiving day. They first visited Father Barth, of the Catholic church at East Palestine, who refused to perform the ceremony because the prospective groom was not a member of the church, and who further notified the couple that he would warn every Catholic priest in the vicinity not to perform the ceremony.

Not to be so easily discouraged the couple boarded the first train for Alliance, and related their wishes to Father Farrell, who agreed to perform the ceremony after satisfying himself as to the ages of the parties and the publication of the bans. The last word of the ceremony had scarcely been spoken when Father Farrell was called to the telephone and received Father Barth's message of warning. The message came too late, however, and the couple departed for their home, happy in the thought of victory.

Started Fire With Kerosene.

Elkhart, Ind., Dec. 1.—Arthur and Charles Lynett, 8 and 6 years respectively, died yesterday as the result of burns. They were the children of James Lynett, a Lake Shore fireman. Mr. and Mrs. Lynett slept late. The boys came down stairs before their parents arose. The older boy attempted to start a fire with kerosene. An explosion followed, both boys receiving burns from which they died an hour later.

De Wet's Book.

London, Dec. 1.—"Had not so many of our burghers proved false to their own colors, England, as the great Bismarck foretold, would have found her grave in South Africa." This is the keynote of the Boer General De Wet's book, entitled "Three Years' War," published by Archibald Constable & Co., in London, and dedicated by the Boer general "to my fellow subjects of the British empire."

OHIO'S CENTENN'AL

ANNIVERSARY OF FIRST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Appropriate Exercises Held at Chillicothe on Saturday.

Chillicothe, December 1.—On Saturday this city, the original capital of the northwest territory, out of which was formed the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, celebrated the centennial anniversary of the assembling of the convention which framed the first constitution of Ohio. Advantage was taken of the occasion to place a tablet to mark the site of the building in which the constitutional convention assembled and which was also the capitol of the northwest territory as well as of the state of Ohio until the seat of government was removed to Columbus.

In the morning the tablet was presented to the city and county by Robert W. Manley, a great-grandson of Edward Tiffin, the first governor of Ohio. It was accepted by Wallace D. Yaple, mayor of the city, and was unveiled by Miss Effie Scott, a granddaughter of Governor William Allen and a great-granddaughter of Governor Duncan McArthur.

In the afternoon at Memorial hall the celebration was continued by an introductory address by Hon. W. T. McClintick, one of the oldest residents of the city. His address was full of delightful reminiscences of the city and its pioneers. Hon. Daniel J. Ryan spoke on "The Original Constitution and Its Effect on Ohio History."

At the close of the centennial exercises in the afternoon the members of the State Historical Society met to discuss the centennial celebration of Ohio's admission to the union, which is to be held here May 21 and 22, 1903. It was decided to make this celebration one of national interest, and the president and governors of all the states in the union will be invited to participate.

SETTLED AT $50 EACH

Panhandle Railroad Company Adjusts Claims Against It By Picnickers.

Steubenville, December 1.—It will cost the Pennsylvania Railroad company $1,150 because one of its conductors failed to stop a passenger train at Willow Springs last Fourth of July. The company late Wednesday compromised with the claimants in the 23 cases against it for $50 each. The agreements, therefore, will result in the dismissals of the suits now standing against the company in the circuit court.

A party of 23 people, Wheeling people, spent last Fourth of July at the springs some distance above the city, and made arrangements for the late train on the Panhandle to stop there and take them on for the return trip to the city.

The party was overlooked in a rush of business on the road that day, and suits were entered by each member of the party for $1,000 damages each.

In the trial of the first case, that of Lillian Poe vs. the Panhandle, the jury brought in a verdict of $60 for the plaintiff. This termination of the test case compelled the railroad company to sue for settlement in all of them. Prior to the trial of the Poe case the company had offered each member of the party $60, but it was refused. The company thus gets off for half the amount.

CONGRESS CONVENES.

Territorial Bill, Trusts, Tariff and Cuban Reciprocity Will Take Time of Senate.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TUESDAY

Deluge of Bills Dealing With the Trust Question Poured Into the House on Opening of Final Session of the Fifty-Fifth Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The admission of the territories of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona as states of the Union was the subject of general importance to receive the attention of the senate in the session which began at noon today.

After the omnibus territorial bill passed the house last session its friends in the senate were so insistent on action by the senate and so strong in point of numbers that in the interest of other pending legislation a unanimous agreement was reached that in consideration of abatement by the friends of the measure during the last session the committee on territories would report on the bill on next Wednesday, Dec. 3, and that a week later the bill should become the unfinished business of the senate, which means that unless the measure shall be displaced by vote or by unanimous consent it will occupy the first place on the senate calendar until disposed of.

Change in Tariff Improbable.

Other questions which, in addition to the appropriation bills, are expected to receive attenuon of the senate at this session are the trusts, the tariff and Cuban reciprocity. Very few Republican senators admit the probability of any change of the tariff law during the present session, but some bills to modify present schedules may be introduced and speeches made thereon. Some senators speak of the creation of a tariff commission as a possibility, but there are differences of opinion as to the utility of such a body. There is quite a unanimity of opinion favorable to anti-trust legislation, and this opinion goes to the extent of predicting results along the lines indicated by Attorney General Knox for the amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law. The present week will barely witness the beginning of the three months' work. Today the usual committee of two senators was appointed to call on the president and resolutions of regret for the death of Senator McMillan of Michigan, brought the day's session to a close a few minutes after assemblage. Tomorrow the president's message will be read, and beyond this no business will be attempted. The sessions of Wednesday and Thursday also will be brief, with an adjournment from Thursday until the following Monday.

There will be an effort to confirm some of the numerous nominations expected to be sent in at the first opportunity.

A large number of bills will be introduced on Wednesday and Thursday and the foundation will be laid for what all predict will be a very crowded session.

Flood of Bills.

When the house convened today to enter on the final session of the fifty-fifth congress a perfect deluge of bills dealing with the trust question in all its phases were thrown into the legislative hopper. It is admitted on all hands that this will be the most important topic of discussion. Indeed, the leaders incline to the belief that beyond the appropriation bills and routine legislation it will be the only general subject on which there is a chance of action at the short session. The president's recommendations on the subject are waited with interest. The most conservative opinion among the Republican leaders seems to favor an application for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law. Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, is one of those who believe that the Sherman law, if enforced, is sufficient to meet the situation, and today he introduced a bill appropriating $500,000 to be used by the department of justice in prosecutions under the present law. Meantime the trust bills will be referred to the judiciary committee.

To Expedite Appropriations.

The leaders already have resolved to expedite the appropriation bills as much as possible in order to allow the largest margin of time for other matters. The appropriation committees will go to work at once and prepare the supply bills as rapidly as possible. The legislative and pension bills probably will be read before the end of the week. One of the first things the appropriation committee will be called on to do, however, is to prepare a bill to provide for the coal strike commission. The appropriations committee met today to adopt a bill which it is believed will be presented and passed this week. No opposition to it from the minority is anticipated. The session of the house today was brief. There was roll call and the announcement of the deaths that have occurred during the recent recess. The house adjourned until tomorrow, when the president's message will be read. There is no program for the remainder of the week beyond the bill to defray the expenses of the coal strike commission. If the regular order is demanded the London dock charge bill is the unfinished business.

THE COAST BEACONS

PERILS OF THE MEN WHO LIGHT THE MARINER ON HIS WAY.

Winter Vigil of Uncle Sam's Lightkeepers—Dangerous Spots on the Coasts—Dreaded Diamond Shoals. When a Lightship Breaks Away.

This is the month when Uncle Sam's coast guardians begin their winter-long fight against storm and fog, those twin evils of the sailor, ever a menace, but particularly so from November to March.

The life of the lightkeeper is at best a lonely one, but when the beacon is built on ledges and rocky islands far from land the post becomes one of peril as well as isolation.

During the late fall and winter the gales become almost incessant, and frequently there may be a month or more when the sea is so rough that supply ships dare not approach the wave battered rocks on which many of the lighthouses perch. Then the keepers are as besieged men. They must save every drop of oil that their lights may be kept burning even should a new supply fail to arrive when due. They must watch their machinery every minute, for no help could reach them to repair it should it break down.

The famous Minot's Ledge light, off Boston harbor, for instance, stands eighty-five feet high from the level of the sea. The reef on which it is set is far below the surface in any except low tides even in ordinary weather. When the ocean roars around it in a winter storm, the mariner, looking at it from the sea, often can discern only its lantern above the spray. The entrance to this lighthouse is half way up the tower, and an iron ladder reaches from it to sea level. In the winter there are days after days and sometimes weeks when no man could venture into that doorway. He would be carried away by the rollers that break against the base and sweep the little balcony.

But it is in the lightship that the brave light keeper is subjected to the greatest hardships and peril. Anchored far out at sea to mark some dangerous rock or shoal, they are battered and tossed by furious storms.

While every year sees more or less damage to lighthouses and beacons, there is only one spot along the coast that has defied the lighthouse builders successfully, and that is Diamond shoals, off Cape Hatteras, the most dangerous place in the service.

Several attempts have been made to build a lighthouse on the shoals, but so far unsuccessfully. So this year, as in previous years, a lightship will mark this danger spot, dreaded by every mariner who sails the southern coast.

As showing the dangers of this station the department's directions for this year are conclusive: "Light vessels No. 71 and 72 will be used on this station alternately." Each of these ships is fitted so that she can move under her own steam, so she will not be an absolutely helpless hulk when she breaks away from her mooring in a howling gale, as she will more than once in this coming winter.

Lightship No. 69, also built to go under her own steam, was driven from her anchorage six times in four months, but managed to steam back to her position each time. The seventh time she failed. She fought against the hurricane for three days and then went up on the North Carolina beach near the Creeds Hill life station. The life savers got her crew off.

The value of the Diamond Shoals lightships is shown by the fact that during this vessel's last year on her station 2,570 steam vessels and 2,576 sailing vessels passed her.

The United States lightship that has had what is probably the most extraordinary experience is Columbia river light vessel No. 50. Her station is off the Columbia river, eight miles off shore, in the Pacific. One November day a gale began to blow from the sea. The chains snapped, and she moved toward the breakers. Sail was made, and she was worked twenty-five miles to sea. The next day two tenders steamed out to tow her in. Both failed. By dusk she was in the breakers. She was headed for the beach and struck. Her crew was taken off in the breeches buoy.

Such are the perils which the guardians of the coast are compelled to face each winter. Yet through it all they keep their lights burning except when overwhelmed by disaster. Without them navigation of Uncle Sam's coasts would be well nigh impossible.

Two Light Plays

Mrs. Le Moyne and James O'Neill In Vehicles Unworthy of Their Ability.

The Four Hundred will not enjoy "Among Those Present," because no one likes to have his corns trodden on. The ordinary world may like the play, because it lets them peep behind the curtains which hide the folly and emptiness of fashionable society from the gaping eyes of the uninitiated. Glen Macdonough has taken many bits from the printed doings of swell society and put them together to make a play. It is so nearly "nothing" for an actress like Mrs. Le Moyne, so trifling. It is like an artist doing well the regular work of an artisan. There is no credit to the actress. Any educated person can spell cat. So in this play of "Among Those Present." One recognizes Harry Lehr. There is a touch of familiarity in the sudden strike of the servants and a fresh lot being brought from an office in the city. A familiar odor greets the nostrils in the social fight over the entertainment of the crown prince at dinner and the hostess who succeeded in landing the fish, and we recognize the young man aspiring to get into this magic circle making his money on the exchange and suddenly being found dead in his rooms.

The amateur circus and all its belongings were well carried out and was possibly a faithful reproduction in a way of social circuses. Then a foreign personage on his first visit to America occasionally airs his views of the apparently peculiar things society "always does," such as "building a mansion and at its completion locking it up and going to Europe." Such things are strung together in the form of a play and offered as a vehicle for a really good star to show her worth. Wasted, and more's the pity. The play has some very bright, pretty young girl parts, nicely shown; some good men roles, well enacted, and some interest. Those who saw Mrs. Le Moyne in "In a Balcony" as the jealous woman and outraged queen will never doubt the great ability of the star, but it would be hard to persuade one who for the first time saw her in "Among Those Present" that she was more than "very good." There is no opportunity for so excellent an artist as Mrs. Le Moyne. As Mrs. Clinton, the successful social leader, we see her dominate by a love for society its hollow pomp and her sacrifice of home, husband and pride for money and social glory.

Tommy Dodd was well played by George Douglas Parker and Dr. Clinton by Harold Russell. Next to the star, the best work of the play was done by Olga Flinck. Whoever this lady may be, as her name is not familiar to me, she is undoubtedly talented. Her work as Mrs. Parker was admirable, and in her heavy scene with Mrs. Le Moyne she bore the test of juxtaposition well.

Another poor vehicle for an excellent actor is offered for public approval. James O'Neill is on tour as Rurik the Serf in an adaptation from the French called "The Honor of the Humble." I feel like apologizing whenever I write that title. It is a very bad one and alone would not sell a ticket.

James O'Neill as Rurik makes a strong, manly and convincing character and has the sympathy of the audience, but the actor is too good to be wasted on such a role. It is not powerful enough for a man who has won the worldwide commendation which his Count of Monte-Christo has deservedly brought him. James O'Neill's work as the adventurous count is superb and has ranked him in his line with the best in any other line of acting. "The Honor of the Humble" does not give enough opportunity, and while O'Neill does all that is possible with the part it is not up to his standard. The play is handsomely mounted and costumed, and the company is good.

May Buckley as leading woman and Helen Tracy in the role of the Countess Suvoroff are both admirable additions to any production. Miss Buckley's Rhoda is a charming piece of work. Small, graceful, beautiful and winning in her light work, she surprised me in her emotional moments. She gives a delightful performance.

The Countess Suvoroff, whose son, Count Paul, is the last of the name, plans a marriage for him with Princess Helene Goudonoff of Moscow and finds that he has long been madly in love with Rhoda, a former serf, who because of her beauty and refined appearance has been reared in the countess' household more like a daughter than an inferior. The girl has forgotten somewhat her humble birth or real bondage and unbidden returns the love of Count Paul. When this condition is revealed to the countess, her humiliation is great, but her anger and wounded pride are greater. After a violent scene with her son, whom she loves with the absorbing passion of her life, she agrees to send him to Moscow to remain for a year. During that time he is to try to love the princess. If at the expiration of the time he still loves Rhoda, he will return, and his mother's opposition will be ended. She adds that he must not mention this compact to any one, especially Rhoda.

He goes, happy in waiting one short year. Inside of an hour after his departure the countess summons Rurik, her coachman, and one of the serfs. He has once saved the life of her son, and the men have grown from boyhood like friends. Their true positions are master and serf. Annually marriages are arranged by the ruling head with a view of keeping a strong race of servitors in the family, and this is the time. To the horror of Rhoda, Rurik is ordered to marry her. She is appalled, while he is overcome with his good fortune, for he has always worshiped in silence the star he never hoped to reach. Though Rhoda is a serf like himself, she has become a cultured lady by her life in the palace.

When Rurik sees her sorrow and hears the countess' bitter words about her daring to aspire to be her daughter-in-law, he understands that to gain her ends the countess will force even a worse partner on poor Rhoda if he refuses to marry her. Rhoda does not dream of this, and while admiring Rurik as a serf is horrified at the thought of marrying one man while loving another. The marriage is then and there consummated, and the couple are left alone. Rhoda upbraids Rurik for marrying her. Then he tells her the bitter truth, that loving her dearly he is heartbroken to find she loves Paul and that love is returned; that he married her to save her from a humbler slave than himself and will devote himself to trying to win her love, and until then will protect her as a brother and friend, never demanding any rights as a husband.

Four months later we find that his efforts have been ineffectual, and she loves Paul as ever. She is grateful to Rurik and has lived in his home, as his sister would, loving his noble character and unselfish devotion, but never thinking of him as her husband. It seems impossible to love another man as she loves Paul.

At this time the countess visits Moscow really to find out if her plan is working and is horrified to find that all is with the count as before. He is keeping his word to his mother, not dreaming she has betrayed him. Rurik travels to Moscow to see Count Paul, not knowing of the countess' presence, to satisfy himself if Paul is to marry the princess. I forgot to add that Rurik and Rhoda were enfranchised at the time of their marriage and are therefore at liberty to act as they see fit.

In Moscow the countess enters during the scene between the men and finds that her vile work is now known to her son. Rurik has found that Paul still loves Rhoda and does not know of her marriage, and when it is told he is beside himself. Rurik returns to Rhoda, finds that the countess still dares to scheme to bring her son happiness and wishes to send Rurik away on a mission. Rhoda she will then try to bring to her son as his mistress. Rurik indignantly reminds her that he and his wife are now free and she has no control over them. To free Rhoda from himself Rurik seeks a divorce. This is prevented again through the countess, who realizes that if Rhoda were free Paul would marry her. The czar is therefore asked to refuse the divorce. Rurik seeing that Rhoda will never get her happiness in this way, determines to retire to a monastery, for thus the church annuls a marriage never consummated in the home life. When Rurik in the presence of Father Andree is about publicly to renounce the world and Rhoda realizes his wonderful sacrifice, she awakens to her love for him and declares that she will not permit it, as she is his wife and loves him. Final curtain.

The Princess, quite a difficult part, was well played by Adelaide Whytall, as was Henri du Cachet by Frank A. Connor. Count Paul was very poorly done by John W. Albaugh, Jr.

COMRADES YET!

Roguish eyed,
Daddy's pride;
Funny little chap he is!
Day or night, hugs me tight;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"
Throws his little arms around me,
With his kisses to impound me;
In my pockets after candy;
Daddy's always got some handy!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Fresh and bright,
Every night
When I leave my business care,
There he is, fair he is,
Pulling out his daddy's chair!
Laughing in his childish fancy,
As by some queer necromancy
He produces pipe, tobacco,
Slippers from behind his back, oh!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Happy he
Is with me
When we play some little game;
Rain or shine, fair or fine,
Skies to him are all the same.
Makes no difference what the weather
When we romp and play together;
Comrades both, nor serf nor master,
And the heart beats stronger, faster;
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

In the sky,
By and by,
Will I meet my comrade there?
Will he be still with me,
Our companionship as fair?
God that ruleth, my petition,
Humbly and in right contrition,
Let it reach thy gracious ear;
Keep us comrades there as here!
Faithful little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Today the usual committee of two senators was appointed to call on the president and resolutions of regret for the death of Senator McMillan of Michigan, brought the day's session to a close a few minutes after assemblage. Tomorrow the president's message will be read, and beyond this no business will be attempted. The sessions of Wednesday and Thursday also will be brief, with an adjournment from Thursday until the following Monday.

There will be an effort to confirm some of the numerous nominations expected to be sent in at the first opportunity.

A large number of bills will be introduced on Wednesday and Thursday and the foundation will be laid for what all predict will be a very crowded session.

Flood of Bills.

When the house convened today to enter on the final session of the fifty-fifth congress a perfect deluge of bills dealing with the trust question in all its phases were thrown into the legislative hopper. It is admitted on all hands that this will be the most important topic of discussion. Indeed, the leaders incline to the belief that beyond the appropriation bills and routine legislation it will be the only general subject on which there is a chance of action at the short session. The president's recommendations on the subject are waited with interest. The most conservative opinion among the Republican leaders seems to favor an application for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law. Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, is one of those who believe that the Sherman law, if enforced, is sufficient to meet the situation, and today he introduced a bill appropriating $500,000 to be used by the department of justice in prosecutions under the present law. Meantime the trust bills will be referred to the judiciary committee.

To Expedite Appropriations.

The leaders already have resolved to expedite the appropriation bills as much as possible in order to allow the largest margin of time for other matters. The appropriation committees will go to work at once and prepare the supply bills as rapidly as possible. The legislative and pension bills probably will be read before the end of the week. One of the first things the appropriation committee will be called on to do, however, is to prepare a bill to provide for the coal strike commission. The appropriations committee met today to adopt a bill which it is believed will be presented and passed this week. No opposition to it from the minority is anticipated. The session of the house today was brief. There was roll call and the announcement of the deaths that have occurred during the recent recess. The house adjourned until tomorrow, when the president's message will be read. There is no program for the remainder of the week beyond the bill to defray the expenses of the coal strike commission. If the regular order is demanded the London dock charge bill is the unfinished business.

THE COAST BEACONS

PERILS OF THE MEN WHO LIGHT THE MARINER ON HIS WAY.

Winter Vigil of Uncle Sam's Lightkeepers—Dangerous Spots on the Coasts—Dreaded Diamond Shoals. When a Lightship Breaks Away.

This is the month when Uncle Sam's coast guardians begin their winter-long fight against storm and fog, those twin evils of the sailor, ever a menace, but particularly so from November to March.

The life of the lightkeeper is at best a lonely one, but when the beacon is built on ledges and rocky islands far from land the post becomes one of peril as well as isolation.

During the late fall and winter the gales become almost incessant, and frequently there may be a month or more when the sea is so rough that supply ships dare not approach the wave battered rocks on which many of the lighthouses perch. Then the keepers are as besieged men. They must save every drop of oil that their lights may be kept burning even should a new supply fail to arrive when due. They must watch their machinery every minute, for no help could reach them to repair it should it break down.

The famous Minot's Ledge light, off Boston harbor, for instance, stands eighty-five feet high from the level of the sea. The reef on which it is set is far below the surface in any except low tides even in ordinary weather. When the ocean roars around it in a winter storm, the mariner, looking at it from the sea, often can discern only its lantern above the spray. The entrance to this lighthouse is half way up the tower, and an iron ladder reaches from it to sea level. In the winter there are days after days and sometimes weeks when no man could venture into that doorway. He would be carried away by the rollers that break against the base and sweep the little balcony.

But it is in the lightship that the brave light keeper is subjected to the greatest hardships and peril. Anchored far out at sea to mark some dangerous rock or shoal, they are battered and tossed by furious storms.

While every year sees more or less damage to lighthouses and beacons, there is only one spot along the coast that has defied the lighthouse builders successfully, and that is Diamond shoals, off Cape Hatteras, the most dangerous place in the service.

Several attempts have been made to build a lighthouse on the shoals, but so far unsuccessfully. So this year, as in previous years, a lightship will mark this danger spot, dreaded by every mariner who sails the southern coast.

As showing the dangers of this station the department's directions for this year are conclusive: "Light vessels No. 71 and 72 will be used on this station alternately." Each of these ships is fitted so that she can move under her own steam, so she will not be an absolutely helpless hulk when she breaks away from her mooring in a howling gale, as she will more than once in this coming winter.

Lightship No. 69, also built to go under her own steam, was driven from her anchorage six times in four months, but managed to steam back to her position each time. The seventh time she failed. She fought against the hurricane for three days and then went up on the North Carolina beach near the Creeds Hill life station. The life savers got her crew off.

The value of the Diamond Shoals lightships is shown by the fact that during this vessel's last year on her station 2,570 steam vessels and 2,576 sailing vessels passed her.

The United States lightship that has had what is probably the most extraordinary experience is Columbia river light vessel No. 50. Her station is off the Columbia river, eight miles off shore, in the Pacific. One November day a gale began to blow from the sea. The chains snapped, and she moved toward the breakers. Sail was made, and she was worked twenty-five miles to sea. The next day two tenders steamed out to tow her in. Both failed. By dusk she was in the breakers. She was headed for the beach and struck. Her crew was taken off in the breeches buoy.

Such are the perils which the guardians of the coast are compelled to face each winter. Yet through it all they keep their lights burning except when overwhelmed by disaster. Without them navigation of Uncle Sam's coasts would be well nigh impossible.

Two Light Plays

Mrs. Le Moyne and James O'Neill In Vehicles Unworthy of Their Ability.

The Four Hundred will not enjoy "Among Those Present," because no one likes to have his corns trodden on. The ordinary world may like the play, because it lets them peep behind the curtains which hide the folly and emptiness of fashionable society from the gaping eyes of the uninitiated. Glen Macdonough has taken many bits from the printed doings of swell society and put them together to make a play. It is so nearly "nothing" for an actress like Mrs. Le Moyne, so trifling. It is like an artist doing well the regular work of an artisan. There is no credit to the actress. Any educated person can spell cat. So in this play of "Among Those Present." One recognizes Harry Lehr. There is a touch of familiarity in the sudden strike of the servants and a fresh lot being brought from an office in the city. A familiar odor greets the nostrils in the social fight over the entertainment of the crown prince at dinner and the hostess who succeeded in landing the fish, and we recognize the young man aspiring to get into this magic circle making his money on the exchange and suddenly being found dead in his rooms.

The amateur circus and all its belongings were well carried out and was possibly a faithful reproduction in a way of social circuses. Then a foreign personage on his first visit to America occasionally airs his views of the apparently peculiar things society "always does," such as "building a mansion and at its completion locking it up and going to Europe." Such things are strung together in the form of a play and offered as a vehicle for a really good star to show her worth. Wasted, and more's the pity. The play has some very bright, pretty young girl parts, nicely shown; some good men roles, well enacted, and some interest. Those who saw Mrs. Le Moyne in "In a Balcony" as the jealous woman and outraged queen will never doubt the great ability of the star, but it would be hard to persuade one who for the first time saw her in "Among Those Present" that she was more than "very good." There is no opportunity for so excellent an artist as Mrs. Le Moyne. As Mrs. Clinton, the successful social leader, we see her dominate by a love for society its hollow pomp and her sacrifice of home, husband and pride for money and social glory.

Tommy Dodd was well played by George Douglas Parker and Dr. Clinton by Harold Russell. Next to the star, the best work of the play was done by Olga Flinck. Whoever this lady may be, as her name is not familiar to me, she is undoubtedly talented. Her work as Mrs. Parker was admirable, and in her heavy scene with Mrs. Le Moyne she bore the test of juxtaposition well.

Another poor vehicle for an excellent actor is offered for public approval. James O'Neill is on tour as Rurik the Serf in an adaptation from the French called "The Honor of the Humble." I feel like apologizing whenever I write that title. It is a very bad one and alone would not sell a ticket.

James O'Neill as Rurik makes a strong, manly and convincing character and has the sympathy of the audience, but the actor is too good to be wasted on such a role. It is not powerful enough for a man who has won the worldwide commendation which his Count of Monte-Christo has deservedly brought him. James O'Neill's work as the adventurous count is superb and has ranked him in his line with the best in any other line of acting. "The Honor of the Humble" does not give enough opportunity, and while O'Neill does all that is possible with the part it is not up to his standard. The play is handsomely mounted and costumed, and the company is good.

May Buckley as leading woman and Helen Tracy in the role of the Countess Suvoroff are both admirable additions to any production. Miss Buckley's Rhoda is a charming piece of work. Small, graceful, beautiful and winning in her light work, she surprised me in her emotional moments. She gives a delightful performance.

The Countess Suvoroff, whose son, Count Paul, is the last of the name, plans a marriage for him with Princess Helene Goudonoff of Moscow and finds that he has long been madly in love with Rhoda, a former serf, who because of her beauty and refined appearance has been reared in the countess' household more like a daughter than an inferior. The girl has forgotten somewhat her humble birth or real bondage and unbidden returns the love of Count Paul. When this condition is revealed to the countess, her humiliation is great, but her anger and wounded pride are greater. After a violent scene with her son, whom she loves with the absorbing passion of her life, she agrees to send him to Moscow to remain for a year. During that time he is to try to love the princess. If at the expiration of the time he still loves Rhoda, he will return, and his mother's opposition will be ended. She adds that he must not mention this compact to any one, especially Rhoda.

He goes, happy in waiting one short year. Inside of an hour after his departure the countess summons Rurik, her coachman, and one of the serfs. He has once saved the life of her son, and the men have grown from boyhood like friends. Their true positions are master and serf. Annually marriages are arranged by the ruling head with a view of keeping a strong race of servitors in the family, and this is the time. To the horror of Rhoda, Rurik is ordered to marry her. She is appalled, while he is overcome with his good fortune, for he has always worshiped in silence the star he never hoped to reach. Though Rhoda is a serf like himself, she has become a cultured lady by her life in the palace.

When Rurik sees her sorrow and hears the countess' bitter words about her daring to aspire to be her daughter-in-law, he understands that to gain her ends the countess will force even a worse partner on poor Rhoda if he refuses to marry her. Rhoda does not dream of this, and while admiring Rurik as a serf is horrified at the thought of marrying one man while loving another. The marriage is then and there consummated, and the couple are left alone. Rhoda upbraids Rurik for marrying her. Then he tells her the bitter truth, that loving her dearly he is heartbroken to find she loves Paul and that love is returned; that he married her to save her from a humbler slave than himself and will devote himself to trying to win her love, and until then will protect her as a brother and friend, never demanding any rights as a husband.

Four months later we find that his efforts have been ineffectual, and she loves Paul as ever. She is grateful to Rurik and has lived in his home, as his sister would, loving his noble character and unselfish devotion, but never thinking of him as her husband. It seems impossible to love another man as she loves Paul.

At this time the countess visits Moscow really to find out if her plan is working and is horrified to find that all is with the count as before. He is keeping his word to his mother, not dreaming she has betrayed him. Rurik travels to Moscow to see Count Paul, not knowing of the countess' presence, to satisfy himself if Paul is to marry the princess. I forgot to add that Rurik and Rhoda were enfranchised at the time of their marriage and are therefore at liberty to act as they see fit.

In Moscow the countess enters during the scene between the men and finds that her vile work is now known to her son. Rurik has found that Paul still loves Rhoda and does not know of her marriage, and when it is told he is beside himself. Rurik returns to Rhoda, finds that the countess still dares to scheme to bring her son happiness and wishes to send Rurik away on a mission. Rhoda she will then try to bring to her son as his mistress. Rurik indignantly reminds her that he and his wife are now free and she has no control over them. To free Rhoda from himself Rurik seeks a divorce. This is prevented again through the countess, who realizes that if Rhoda were free Paul would marry her. The czar is therefore asked to refuse the divorce. Rurik seeing that Rhoda will never get her happiness in this way, determines to retire to a monastery, for thus the church annuls a marriage never consummated in the home life. When Rurik in the presence of Father Andree is about publicly to renounce the world and Rhoda realizes his wonderful sacrifice, she awakens to her love for him and declares that she will not permit it, as she is his wife and loves him. Final curtain.

The Princess, quite a difficult part, was well played by Adelaide Whytall, as was Henri du Cachet by Frank A. Connor. Count Paul was very poorly done by John W. Albaugh, Jr.

COMRADES YET!

Roguish eyed,
Daddy's pride;
Funny little chap he is!
Day or night, hugs me tight;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"
Throws his little arms around me,
With his kisses to impound me;
In my pockets after candy;
Daddy's always got some handy!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Fresh and bright,
Every night
When I leave my business care,
There he is, fair he is,
Pulling out his daddy's chair!
Laughing in his childish fancy,
As by some queer necromancy
He produces pipe, tobacco,
Slippers from behind his back, oh!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Happy he
Is with me
When we play some little game;
Rain or shine, fair or fine,
Skies to him are all the same.
Makes no difference what the weather
When we romp and play together;
Comrades both, nor serf nor master,
And the heart beats stronger, faster;
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

In the sky,
By and by,
Will I meet my comrade there?
Will he be still with me,
Our companionship as fair?
God that ruleth, my petition,
Humbly and in right contrition,
Let it reach thy gracious ear;
Keep us comrades there as here!
Faithful little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

CONGRESS CONVENES.

Territorial Bill, Trusts, Tariff and Cuban Reciprocity Will Take Time of Senate.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TUESDAY

Deluge of Bills Dealing With the Trust Question Poured Into the House on Opening of Final Session of the Fifty-Fifth Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The admission of the territories of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona as states of the Union was the subject of general importance to receive the attention of the senate in the session which began at noon today.

After the omnibus territorial bill passed the house last session its friends in the senate were so insistent on action by the senate and so strong in point of numbers that in the interest of other pending legislation a unanimous agreement was reached that in consideration of abatement by the friends of the measure during the last session the committee on territories would report on the bill on next Wednesday, Dec. 3, and that a week later the bill should become the unfinished business of the senate, which means that unless the measure shall be displaced by vote or by unanimous consent it will occupy the first place on the senate calendar until disposed of.

Change in Tariff Improbable.

Other questions which, in addition to the appropriation bills, are expected to receive attenuon of the senate at this session are the trusts, the tariff and Cuban reciprocity. Very few Republican senators admit the probability of any change of the tariff law during the present session, but some bills to modify present schedules may be introduced and speeches made thereon. Some senators speak of the creation of a tariff commission as a possibility, but there are differences of opinion as to the utility of such a body. There is quite a unanimity of opinion favorable to anti-trust legislation, and this opinion goes to the extent of predicting results along the lines indicated by Attorney General Knox for the amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law. The present week will barely witness the beginning of the three months' work. Today the usual committee of two senators was appointed to call on the president and resolutions of regret for the death of Senator McMillan of Michigan, brought the day's session to a close a few minutes after assemblage. Tomorrow the president's message will be read, and beyond this no business will be attempted. May Buckley as leading woman and Helen Tracy in the role of the Countess Suvoroff are both admirable additions to any production. Miss Buckley's Rhoda is a charming piece of work. Small, graceful, beautiful and winning in her light work, she surprised me in her emotional moments. She gives a delightful performance.

The Countess Suvoroff, whose son, Count Paul, is the last of the name, plans a marriage for him with Princess Helene Goudonoff of Moscow and finds that he has long been madly in love with Rhoda, a former serf, who because of her beauty and refined appearance has been reared in the countess' household more like a daughter than an inferior. The girl has forgotten somewhat her humble birth or real bondage and unbidden returns the love of Count Paul. When this condition is revealed to the countess, her humiliation is great, but her anger and wounded pride are greater. After a violent scene with her son, whom she loves with the absorbing passion of her life, she agrees to send him to Moscow to remain for a year. During that time he is to try to love the princess. If at the expiration of the time he still loves Rhoda, he will return, and his mother's opposition will be ended. She adds that he must not mention this compact to any one, especially Rhoda.

He goes, happy in waiting one short year. Inside of an hour after his departure the countess summons Rurik, her coachman, and one of the serfs. He has once saved the life of her son, and the men have grown from boyhood like friends. Their true positions are master and serf. Annually marriages are arranged by the ruling head with a view of keeping a strong race of servitors in the family, and this is the time. To the horror of Rhoda, Rurik is ordered to marry her. She is appalled, while he is overcome with his good fortune, for he has always worshiped in silence the star he never hoped to reach. Though Rhoda is a serf like himself, she has become a cultured lady by her life in the palace.

When Rurik sees her sorrow and hears the countess' bitter words about her daring to aspire to be her daughter-in-law, he understands that to gain her ends the countess will force even a worse partner on poor Rhoda if he refuses to marry her. Rhoda does not dream of this, and while admiring Rurik as a serf is horrified at the thought of marrying one man while loving another. The marriage is then and there consummated, and the couple are left alone. Rhoda upbraids Rurik for marrying her. Then he tells her the bitter truth, that loving her dearly he is heartbroken to find she loves Paul and that love is returned; that he married her to save her from a humbler slave than himself and will devote himself to trying to win her love, and until then will protect her as a brother and friend, never demanding any rights as a husband.

Four months later we find that his efforts have been ineffectual, and she loves Paul as ever. She is grateful to Rurik and has lived in his home, as his sister would, loving his noble character and unselfish devotion, but never thinking of him as her husband. It seems impossible to love another man as she loves Paul.

At this time the countess visits Moscow really to find out if her plan is working and is horrified to find that all is with the count as before. He is keeping his word to his mother, not dreaming she has betrayed him. Rurik travels to Moscow to see Count Paul, not knowing of the countess' presence, to satisfy himself if Paul is to marry the princess. I forgot to add that Rurik and Rhoda were enfranchised at the time of their marriage and are therefore at liberty to act as they see fit.

In Moscow the countess enters during the scene between the men and finds that her vile work is now known to her son. Rurik has found that Paul still loves Rhoda and does not know of her marriage, and when it is told he is beside himself. Rurik returns to Rhoda, finds that the countess still dares to scheme to bring her son happiness and wishes to send Rurik away on a mission. Rhoda she will then try to bring to her son as his mistress. Rurik indignantly reminds her that he and his wife are now free and she has no control over them. To free Rhoda from himself Rurik seeks a divorce. This is prevented again through the countess, who realizes that if Rhoda were free Paul would marry her. The czar is therefore asked to refuse the divorce. Rurik seeing that Rhoda will never get her happiness in this way, determines to retire to a monastery, for thus the church annuls a marriage never consummated in the home life. When Rurik in the presence of Father Andree is about publicly to renounce the world and Rhoda realizes his wonderful sacrifice, she awakens to her love for him and declares that she will not permit it, as she is his wife and loves him. Final curtain.

The Princess, quite a difficult part, was well played by Adelaide Whytall, as was Henri du Cachet by Frank A. Connor. Count Paul was very poorly done by John W. Albaugh, Jr.

COMRADES YET!

Roguish eyed,
Daddy's pride;
Funny little chap he is!
Day or night, hugs me tight;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"
Throws his little arms around me,
With his kisses to impound me;
In my pockets after candy;
Daddy's always got some handy!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Fresh and bright,
Every night
When I leave my business care,
There he is, fair he is,
Pulling out his daddy's chair!
Laughing in his childish fancy,
As by some queer necromancy
He produces pipe, tobacco,
Slippers from behind his back, oh!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Happy he
Is with me
When we play some little game;
Rain or shine, fair or fine,
Skies to him are all the same.
Makes no difference what the weather
When we romp and play together;
Comrades both, nor serf nor master,
And the heart beats stronger, faster;
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

In the sky,
By and by,
Will I meet my comrade there?
Will he be still with me,
Our companionship as fair?
God that ruleth, my petition,
Humbly and in right contrition,
Let it reach thy gracious ear;
Keep us comrades there as here!
Faithful little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,

Professor of Botany, Iowa State University.

X.—Trees For Ornamental Purposes.

THUS far we have discussed trees chiefly in their broader economic aspects. We have thought of them as aggregated in forests either indigenous or artificial and as affecting the larger problems of human living and human happiness. Let us now consider the more simple relations which trees in smaller numbers bear to our enjoyment or comfort. Although as a people we destroy forests in a fashion for which history offers no precedent, we are nevertheless almost without exception tree planters. In our northern states at least a treeless yard or homestead is an exception so unusual as to be a matter of general comment. So strong is the tendency to plant trees about the house that the traveler may often find abundant attempts in this direction far out on the plains, where on account of continued dryness a tree cannot possibly grow. The pioneer in such a region will sometimes haul water for miles to pour around some transplanted cottonwood, watch it grow green for a season, only at length to see it perish in a day when the hot wind sweeps up across the desert. Our zeal is not according to knowledge, or, to put it the other way, our knowledge by no means equals our zeal.

To be reasonably successful tree planters there are several matters to which we must give heed. We must consider first of all the locality and its climatic conditions; second, the habit and history of the various species of trees from which selection must in any case be made, and, third, we must attend to the special purpose we have in view in making the particular plantations. This is all apart from the mere matter of setting the tree in the ground, pruning it, mulching it, etc., concerning which we may have something to say in the next chapter. Let us now study in the order named these several prerequisites to success. In the first place, it is evident that in tree planting much depends on having due regard to climatic and other local conditions. We must select species adapted to these conditions or our labor is in vain. In making such selection the flora of the locality or of the region round about is the absolute criterion. People in Iowa, for instance, need not put themselves to the trouble, as they have often done, to plant tulip trees in long rows about their holdings. Tulip trees were never an element of the Iowa forest or of any part of it. Neither do people of Ohio, though favored with the tulip trees, wisely attempt the several magnolias or the bald cypress, though these may find place in Kentucky or farther south. We must have respect to the natural distribution of these things or suffer the consequences. Beneficent nature has worked all this out for us, and, while for variety's sake we may introduce some novelties in her original scheme, we shall find ourselves everywhere, in the main, largely restricted to the results in her husbandry. As we go west in this latitude the number of arboreous species rapidly diminishes, as we have already stated, although by no means so rapidly as some have supposed. There are, for example, at least twenty-five species of trees and shrubs in the valley of the Missouri river where it begins to form the boundary of the state of Iowa. Farther west the number is of course smaller. The higher grounds are too dry to support trees at all. The few forms listed are limited to the water courses, diminished, dwarfed in size, until at last we begin to find the coniferous outliers of the Rocky mountain forests.

Over all this region, then, in general, trees native to the region may be successfully planted. But the second consideration mentioned, above all, now calls for remark. We must not only have regard to original distribution, but we must also study the habit, the habitat, of our different sorts of trees. This means simply a more exact examination of the particular case. Our native trees affect different situations, different soils, habitats we say, and, while many of them will grow almost anywhere if sufficient moisture is at hand, yet after all each does best in natural soil and surroundings. Thus willows grow by the water courses only. One common species is found generally on the driest hillsides. The black walnut rises to splendid perfection in rich alluvial soil; the beech and pine will flourish on a soil of sand and gravel; the white oak affects the loess capped ridge; the basswood and the hard maple, in the west at least, love the cool limestone ridge, the rocky bank; knee deep in the swamp stands the tamarack of the north, the cypress of the south; the bur oak lives in the sand, on sunny slopes, on dry, thin soils on the prairie, braving the prairie fires, even invading the desert in stunted, dwarfish growth to form the farthest western skirmish line of the Atlantic forest. These are only illustrations of how trees love special habitats. Nevertheless within their natural limits almost all trees flourish well in good, rich soil—not all. The expert forester knows his tree and knows exactly where it may be placed to best advantage. In general, as rainfall is less we need better soil and better cultivation.

In the third place, in selecting trees to plant the planter must have respect to his own ultimate purpose. If a prairie farmer desires to secure quick results, early protection, he will plant cottonwoods, white maples, box elders almost surely these because of their hardiness, ease of cultivation and rapidity of growth. Among them he will plant the larch, the Austrian pine, various evergreens, and if sufficiently farsighted he will intersperse seeds or seedlings of better varieties for the establishment of a permanent wood lot. If our tree planter is an eastern landholder desiring to restore a forest cover to the denuded farm, he will consult the species formerly occupants of the soil and be guided by the ordinary rules of reforestation, too extended to be here discussed.

But probably the greater number of those who read these columns are interested in tree planting chiefly as the art contributes to the adornment of street and park and lawn, to the decoration of the homestead, and precisely along these lines there seems to be everywhere room for improvement. In how many towns, not to say cities, in the United States have the trees been properly selected and regularly planted? In how many towns is the matter considered and systematically controlled? We have planted trees, but is it not true that each individual has obeyed his own individual impulse and as a result we have individualism run wild? In order to build a home for himself a man has been known to grub out or destroy a fine colony of young oaks or hickories, grade the surface from his lot and then in front of his premises plant a row of white maples or equally unsuitable species, having no regard to similar plantings on the part of his neighbors, but consulting some fancied convenience of his own, and that alone. Of course, the remedy for this is municipal control. The man who succeeds at last in surrounding his home with vistas of beauty effects it by carefully studying the situation as a whole, taking advantage of all that nature contributes, allowing art to supplement nature only where modification or addition is positively necessary. In the same way, if the city is to be properly planted and adorned, the entire property of the public must be treated as a unit, managed and planted as a single holding. A plan rapidly growing in popularity is to put all the tree planting of the town under control of a competent commission. When this is wisely done, we get system and may reasonably expect the very highest results.

In the city of Minneapolis every tree is under control of a committee having almost absolute power. The city plants and cares for all the trees within the municipality. A similar rule holds in Boston, Passaic, N. J., and several other American cities, to say nothing of the capitals of the old world.

It is said that such a commission is impracticable in our thousand smaller towns and villages. The reply is obvious that in such situation the problem is of proportionate simplicity, and it can be brought about by the people themselves if only they can be organized and in serious earnest. A village improvement society or simply a village committee is all we need. For instance, there is no better street tree in all the world than our American elm, fortunately the most common tree throughout the northern states, most easily transplanted, most certain to afford a symmetrical growth if simply let alone. Now, it ought to be possible even in the small village to plant the principal street with elms, a row on each side, all appropriately spaced and all in one straight line. We admit that if we were to judge by what is shown today such a thing would seem an impossibility, but it is possible all the same. In any village let such trees be today so planted, and in thirty years they will be the pride of the town, in a century its glory. The famous elms of Yale are the American elms, so nearly universal as to be practically free to the poorest corner from Connecticut to the Dakotas. In all our towns the white or soft maple has been too often made to do duty in lieu of the elm. It grows perhaps more rapidly, but nevertheless to less advantage. Soft maples have their use, but not along the streets, the peculiar branching giving the tree as it grows older a top more and more open. The principal branches lengthen rather stiffly and become presently easy victims of the storm. The hard maple is also objectionable along the streets, not that it is not an exceedingly beautiful tree, equally attractive by the dense shade of its summer green and by the richness of its autumn glory, but it lacks endurance in isolated situations.

But it is said that the elms are monotonous; we must have variety. Let it be so. Ample variety is easily within our reach. There are many other natives of our forests waiting our disposal. The linden is a beautiful tree and will make, where properly cared for, a most handsome row, its foliage rich and umbrageous, its flowers odorous and honey laden, a gift to the bees. The honey locust is by no means to be despised. The thornless variety is a lovely tree, perfectly healthy and hardy, the wood heavy and strong, the foliage feathery and graceful, the rather abundant fruit the only objection. The sycamore in some places makes beautiful rows, but seems not to thrive very well far from its favorite alluvial habitat. The horse chestnut is an exceedingly ornamental tree, generally hardy, unrivaled in its pyramids of tinted bloom. Nor should the catalpa, our native species, be forgotten. The hackberry makes a rounded head of soft, pale leaves, a clean, straight, elegant stem, and may well on cross streets supplant its more vigorous cousin, the elm.

You think you are bilious. Well, I should think you would be! What did you expect your stomach and liver could stand? You ought to be thankful that you got off with simply being bilious. The wonder is that you have any stomach or liver left at all, says Medical Talk.

What would I advise? Well, in order to stir up your liver a little and give you a slight gymnastic exercise I would advise you to go and find the doctor who gave you 100 grains of quinine and give him a good licking. Hit him with your hands. Don't hit with a club or shoot him. Just use your open hand. After you have done this right I would quit using tobacco, if not entirely at least nearly so, say a little after supper each day. Use no alcoholic stimulants of any sort. Let your diet be simple and plain. Avoid excesses. Avoid everything fried during the hot season. Eat much fruit; drink much water. Take long nights' sleep. Behave yourself. Keep away from the doctors.

DARK SOMALILAND

BUT LITTLE KNOWN OF THIS ODD CORNER OF EASTERN AFRICA.

Inhabited by a Nomadic Race Descended From the Arabs—Their Strange Religious Beliefs—Why England Must Crush the Mollah.

England seems never to be entirely at peace. Always there appears to be fighting in some one of her colonies or dependencies. Her latest trouble with the Mad Mollah, by which two British officers and a hundred men were slain, has aroused the foreign office, and a punishing force has been sent to crush that troublesome individual.

General W. H. Manning, who will have charge of affairs in Somaliland, is the principal military officer in the foreign office and secretary of the protectorate of Somaliland. His familiarity with the land of the Mad Mollah augurs ill for the welfare of that fanatic.

Arabs describe as "Bar Agan," or the "Unknown Land," that particular horn of Africa's eastern coast which lies directly opposite Aden, called Somali, and which from time immemorial has enjoyed so evil a reputation that not only has it been avoided by the vast majority of explorers of the Dark Continent, but has likewise in the partition of the latter by the great powers of Europe been left untouched save as regards the coast line, none of them caring to assume the responsibilities of the sovereignty of the hinterland.

There is an Italian, an English, an Abyssinian and a French Somaliland. But the rule of none of these four nations extends beyond the littoral, and as long as there is no undue attempt on the part of the natives of the hinterland to interfere with the trade that finds its outlet and inlet at the various stations on the coast the tribes of the interior are left to fight among themselves as much as they please, and no attempt is made to bring them under subjection.

The Somalis are a nomadic race and claim to be descended from fugitive Arabs who, abandoning their own country, landed on the Somali coast, subsequently intermarrying with the local tribes. The dawn of the Somali people coincides with the rise of Mohammed some 1,200 or 1,300 years ago. They, however, do not belong to the true African race, for they reveal no signs of the negroid type and from a slight resemblance in language are believed to be allied to the races of Hindustan.

The religion professed by the Somalis—that is to say, the most fanatical type of Islam—has the effect of keeping them engaged in constant warfare with their neighbors, the Abyssinians, who profess what is probably the lowest class of Christianity. Indeed, one of the most cherished objects of the Somali and, in fact, of all the warlike Mohammedan tribes of that portion of Africa, has been to prevent Abyssinia from securing or retaining possession of a seaport on the northeast coast of the Dark Continent.

This is due to an ancient Mohammedan prophecy, according to which Mecca, the most holy place of Islam, will one day be razed to the ground by the Abyssinians, an event which will be attended by the most disastrous consequences for the whole of the Moslem world.

It is owing to this belief that the British must crush the Mad Mollah, since to leave him unconquered would place them in bad light not only with the Egyptian army, but also in the eyes of the 80,000,000 Mohammedans in India.

To abandon Somaliland to his sway would work incalculable damage to her power and prestige in all other Mohammedan countries under her rule. Not only must he be defeated, but crushed absolutely. For in the case of Islam more than in that of any other creed the authenticity of the mahdis and prophets is gauged by the degree of their success against the infidels, and the leaders of any armed religious movement are not relegated to the ranks of false prophets until defeat, capture or death has convinced their coreligionists that they were frauds.

This is the task assigned to General Manning. To assist him he will have the troops already in Somaliland and an extra brigade from India. That he will eventually succeed is certain, but at what cost remains to be seen.

What He Meant.

"I see Follansby is on his legs again."

"No, he isn't. He hasn't a cent. Had to sell his horse and carriage."

"That's what I mean. Now he walks."—Success.

Would Not Insure Him.

Insurance Companies would not insure the Rev. J. W. Yeisley because he had Kidney Trouble.

Mr. Yeisley was much discouraged till a friend recommended Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and it cured him. Mr. Yeisley writes:

"My kidneys and liver were in bad condition and I was anxious for relief. I had tried many remedies without success. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' which effectively proved its merit. The best proof that it has completely cured me is my recent acceptance by four different life insurance companies."

The Rev. Mr. Yeisley is the pastor of the First Reformed Church of St. Paris, Ohio, and is as well the editor of the St. Paris Dispatch.

There is no question that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best and surest medicine in the world for diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as the weaknesses peculiar to women. It quickly relieves and cures inability to hold urine and the necessity of getting up a number of times during the night and puts an end to that scalding pain when passing urine.

OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,
Professor of Botany, Iowa State University.

X.—Trees For Ornamental Purposes.

THUS far we have discussed trees chiefly in their broader economic aspects. We have thought of them as aggregated in forests either indigenous or artificial and as affecting the larger problems of human living and human happiness. Let us now consider the more simple relations which trees in smaller numbers bear to our enjoyment or comfort. Although as a people we destroy forests in a fashion for which history offers no precedent, we are nevertheless almost without exception tree planters. In our northern states at least a treeless yard or homestead is an exception so unusual as to be a matter of general comment. So strong is the tendency to plant trees about the house that the traveler may often find abundant attempts in this direction far out on the plains, where on account of continued dryness a tree cannot possibly grow. The pioneer in such a region will sometimes haul water for miles to pour around some transplanted cottonwood, watch it grow green for a season, only at length to see it perish in a day when the hot wind sweeps up across the desert. Our zeal is not according to knowledge, or, to put it the other way, our knowledge by no means equals our zeal.

To be reasonably successful tree planters there are several matters to which we must give heed. We must consider first of all the locality and its climatic conditions; second, the habit and history of the various species of trees from which selection must in any case be made, and, third, we must attend to the special purpose we have in view in making the particular plantations. This is all apart from the mere matter of setting the tree in the ground, pruning it, mulching it, etc., concerning which we may have something to say in the next chapter. Let us now study in the order named these several prerequisites to success. In the first place, it is evident that in tree planting much depends on having due regard to climatic and other local conditions. We must select species adapted to these conditions or our labor is in vain. In making such selection the flora of the locality or of the region round about is the absolute criterion. People in Iowa, for instance, need not put themselves to the trouble, as they have often done, to plant tulip trees in long rows about their holdings. Tulip trees were never an element of the Iowa forest or of any part of it. Neither do people of Ohio, though favored with the tulip trees, wisely attempt the several magnolias or the bald cypress, though these may find place in Kentucky or farther south. We must have respect to the natural distribution of these things or suffer the consequences. Beneficent nature has worked all this out for us, and, while for variety's sake we may introduce some novelties in her original scheme, we shall find ourselves everywhere, in the main, largely restricted to the results in her husbandry. As we go west in this latitude the number of arboreous species rapidly diminishes, as we have already stated, although by no means so rapidly as some have supposed. There are, for example, at least twenty-five species of trees and shrubs in the valley of the Missouri river where it begins to form the boundary of the state of Iowa. Farther west the number is of course smaller. The higher grounds are too dry to support trees at all. The few forms listed are limited to the water courses, diminished, dwarfed in size, until at last we begin to find the coniferous outliers of the Rocky mountain forests.

Over all this region, then, in general, trees native to the region may be successfully planted. But the second consideration mentioned, above all, now calls for remark. We must not only have regard to original distribution, but we must also study the habit, the habitat, of our different sorts of trees. This means simply a more exact examination of the particular case. Our native trees affect different situations, different soils, habitats we say, and, while many of them will grow almost anywhere if sufficient moisture is at hand, yet after all each does best in natural soil and surroundings. Thus willows grow by the water courses only. One common species is found generally on the driest hillsides. The black walnut rises to splendid perfection in rich alluvial soil; the beech and pine will flourish on a soil of sand and gravel; the white oak affects the loess capped ridge; the basswood and the hard maple, in the west at least, love the cool limestone ridge, the rocky bank; knee deep in the swamp stands the tamarack of the north, the cypress of the south; the bur oak lives in the sand, on sunny slopes, on dry, thin soils on the prairie, braving the prairie fires, even invading the desert in stunted, dwarfish growth to form the farthest western skirmish line of the Atlantic forest. These are only illustrations of how trees love special habitats. Nevertheless within their natural limits almost all trees flourish well in good, rich soil—not all. The expert forester knows his tree and knows exactly where it may be placed to best advantage. In general, as rainfall is less we need better soil and better cultivation.

In the third place, in selecting trees to plant the planter must have respect to his own ultimate purpose. If a prairie farmer desires to secure quick results, early protection, he will plant cottonwoods, white maples, box elders almost surely these because of their hardiness, ease of cultivation and rapidity of growth. Among them he will plant the larch, the Austrian pine, various evergreens, and if sufficiently far sighted he will intersperse seeds or seedlings of better varieties for the establishment of a permanent wood lot. If our tree planter is an eastern landholder desiring to restore a forest cover to the denuded farm, he will consult the species formerly occupants of the soil and be guided by the ordinary rules of reforestation, too extended to be here discussed.

But probably the greater number of those who read these columns are interested in tree planting chiefly as the art contributes to the adornment of street and park and lawn, to the decoration of the homestead, and precisely along these lines there seems to be everywhere room for improvement. In how many towns, not to say cities, in the United States have the trees been properly selected and regularly planted? In how many towns is the matter considered and systematically controlled? We have planted trees, but is it not true that each individual has obeyed his own individual impulse and as a result we have individualism run wild? In order to build a home for himself a man has been known to grub out or destroy a fine colony of young oaks or hickories, grade the surface from his lot and then in front of his premises plant a row of white maples or equally unsuitable species, having no regard to similar plantings on the part of his neighbors, but consulting some fancied convenience of his own, and that alone. Of course, the remedy for this is municipal control. The man who succeeds at last in surrounding his home with vistas of beauty effects it by carefully studying the situation as a whole, taking advantage of all that nature contributes, allowing art to supplement nature only where modification or addition is positively necessary. In the same way, if the city is to be properly planted and adorned, the entire property of the public must be treated as a unit, managed and planted as a single holding. A plan rapidly growing in popularity is to put all the tree planting of the town under control of a competent commission. When this is wisely done, we get system and may reasonably expect the very highest results.

In the city of Minneapolis every tree is under control of a committee having almost absolute power. The city plants and cares for all the trees within the municipality. A similar rule holds in Boston, Passaic, N. J., and several other American cities, to say nothing of the capitals of the old world.

It is said that such a commission is impracticable in our thousand smaller towns and villages. The reply is obvious that in such situation the problem is of proportionate simplicity, and it can be brought about by the people themselves if only they can be organized and in serious earnest. A village improvement society or simply a village committee is all we need. For instance, there is no better street tree in all the world than our American elm, fortunately the most common tree throughout the northern states, most easily transplanted, most certain to afford a symmetrical growth if simply let alone. Now, it ought to be possible even in the small village to plant the principal street with elms, a row on each side, all appropriately spaced and all in one straight line. We admit that if we were to judge by what is shown today such a thing would seem an impossibility, but it is possible all the same. In any village let such trees be today so planted, and in thirty years they will be the pride of the town, in a century its glory. The famous elms of Yale are the American elms, so nearly universal as to be practically free to the poorest corner from Connecticut to the Dakotas. In all our towns the white or soft maple has been too often made to do duty in lieu of the elm. It grows perhaps more rapidly, but nevertheless to less advantage. Soft maples have their use, but not along the streets, the peculiar branching giving the tree as it grows older a top more and more open. The principal branches lengthen rather stiffly and become presently easy victims of the storm. The hard maple is also objectionable along the streets, not that it is not an exceedingly beautiful tree, equally attractive by the dense shade of its summer green and by the richness of its autumn glory, but it lacks endurance in isolated situations.

But it is said that the elms are monotonous; we must have variety. Let it be so. Ample variety is easily within our reach. There are many other natives of our forests waiting our disposal. The linden is a beautiful tree and will make, where properly cared for, a most handsome row, its foliage rich and umbrageous, its flowers odorous and honey laden, a gift to the bees. The honey locust is by no means to be despised. The thornless variety is a lovely tree, perfectly healthy and hardy, the wood heavy and strong, the foliage feathery and graceful, the rather abundant fruit the only objection. The sycamore in some places makes beautiful rows, but seems not to thrive very well far from its favorite alluvial habitat. The horse chestnut is an exceedingly ornamental tree, generally hardy, unrivaled in its pyramids of tinted bloom. Nor should the catalpa, our native species, be forgotten. The hackberry makes a rounded head of soft, pale leaves, a clean, straight, elegant stem, and may well on cross streets supplant its more vigorous cousin, the elm.

Substitute For Quinine.

You think you are bilious. Well, I should think you would be! What did you expect your stomach and liver could stand? You ought to be thankful that you got off with simply being bilious. The wonder is that you have any stomach or liver left at all, says Medical Talk.

What would I advise? Well, in order to stir up your liver a little and give you a slight gymnastic exercise I would advise you to go and find the doctor who gave you 100 grains of quinine and give him a good licking. Hit him with your hands. Don't hit with a club or shoot him. Just use your open hand. After you have done this right I would quit using tobacco, if not entirely at least nearly so, say a little after supper each day. Use no alcoholic stimulants of any sort. Let your diet be simple and plain. Avoid excesses. Avoid everything fried during the hot season. Eat much fruit; drink much water. Take long nights' sleep. Behave yourself. Keep away from the doctors.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Anxious Daughter—Mother, did papa have his salary increased when he was married?

Mother—No, my child.

Anxious Daughter—I don't suppose he had any money saved up, had he?

Mother—Not a penny. He spent all he earned.

Anxious Daughter—Did you get along comfortably?

Mother—We were very happy.

Anxious Daughter—Well, you know, George hasn't been able to save a penny, but—

Mother—Now, Maria, if that poverty stricken fellow dares to show his face here again I'll get your father to turn him out!

DARK SOMALILAND

BUT LITTLE KNOWN OF THIS ODD CORNER OF EASTERN AFRICA.

Inhabited by a Nomadic Race Descended From the Arabs—Their Strange Religious Beliefs—Why England Must Crush the Mollah.

England seems never to be entirely at peace. Always there appears to be fighting in some one of her colonies or dependencies. Her latest trouble with the Mad Mollah, by which two British officers and a hundred men were slain, has aroused the foreign office, and a punishing force has been sent to crush that troublesome individual.

General W. H. Manning, who will have charge of affairs in Somaliland, is the principal military officer in the foreign office and secretary of the protectorate of Somaliland. His familiarity with the land of the Mad Mollah augurs ill for the welfare of that fanatic.

Arabs describe as "Bar Agan," or the "Unknown Land," that particular horn of Africa's eastern coast which lies directly opposite Aden, called Somali, and which from time immemorial has enjoyed so evil a reputation that not only has it been avoided by the vast majority of explorers of the Dark Continent, but has likewise in the partition of the latter by the great powers of Europe been left untouched save as regards the coast line, none of them caring to assume the responsibilities of the sovereignty of the hinterland.

There is an Italian, an English, an Abyssinian and a French Somaliland. But the rule of none of these four nations extends beyond the littoral, and as long as there is no undue attempt on the part of the natives of the hinterland to interffere with the trade that finds its outlet and inlet at the various stations on the coast the tribes of the interior are left to fight among themselves as much as they please, and no attempt is made to bring them under subjection.

The Somalis are a nomadic race and claim to be descended from fugitive Arabs who, abandoning their own country, landed on the Somali coast, subsequently intermarrying with the local tribes. The dawn of the Somali people coincides with the rise of Mohammed some 1,200 or 1,300 years ago. They, however, do not belong to the true African race, for they reveal no signs of the negroid type and from a slight resemblance in language are believed to be allied to the races of Hindustan.

The religion professed by the Somalis—that is to say, the most fanatical type of Islam—has the effect of keeping them engaged in constant warfare with their neighbors, the Abyssinians, who profess what is probably the lowest class of Christianity. Indeed, one of the most cherished objects of the Somali and, in fact, of all the warlike Mohammedan tribes of that portion of Africa, has been to prevent Abyssinia from securing or retaining possession of a seaport on the northeast coast of the Dark Continent.

This is due to an ancient Mohammedan prophecy, according to which Mecca, the most holy place of Islam, will one day be razed to the ground by the Abyssinians, an event which will be attended by the most disastrous consequences for the whole of the Moslem world.

It is owing to this belief that the British must crush the Mad Mollah, since to leave him unconquered would place them in bad light not only with the Egyptian army, but also in the eyes of the 80,000,000 Mohammedans in India.

To abandon Somaliland to his sway would work incalculable damage to her power and prestige in all other Mohammedan countries under her rule. Not only must he be defeated, but crushed absolutely. For in the case of Islam more than in that of any other creed the authenticity of the mahdis and prophets is gauged by the degree of their success against the infidels, and the leaders of any armed religious movement are not relegated to the ranks of false prophets until defeat, capture or death has convinced their coreligionists that they were frauds.

This is the task assigned to General Manning. To assist him he will have the troops already in Somaliland and an extra brigade from India. That he will eventually succeed is certain, but at what cost remains to be seen.

What He Meant.

"I see Follansby is on his legs again."

"No, he isn't. He hasn't a cent. Had to sell his horse and carriage."

"That's what I mean. Now he walks."—Success.

Would Not Insure Him.

Insurance Companies would not insure the Rev. J. W. Yeisley because he had Kidney Trouble.

Mr. Yeisley was much discouraged till a friend recommended Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and it cured him. Mr. Yeisley writes:

"My kidneys and liver were in bad condition and I was anxious for relief. I had tried many remedies without success. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' which effectively proved its merit. The best proof that it has completely cured me is my recent acceptance by four different life insurance companies."

The Rev. Mr. Yeisley is the pastor of the First Reformed Church of St. Paris, Ohio, and is as well the editor of the St. Paris Dispatch.

There is no question that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best and surest medicine in the world for diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as the weaknesses peculiar to women. It quickly relieves and cures inability to hold urine and the necessity of getting up a number of times during the night and puts an end to that scalding pain when passing urine.

As we go west in this latitude the number of arboreous species rapidly diminishes, as we have already stated, although by no means so rapidly as some have supposed. There are, for example, at least twenty-five species of trees and shrubs in the valley of the Missouri river where it begins to form the boundary of the state of Iowa. Farther west the number is of course smaller. The higher grounds are too dry to support trees at all. The few forms listed are limited to the water courses, diminished, dwarfed in size, until at last we begin to find the coniferous outliers of the Rocky mountain forests.

Over all this region, then, in general, trees native to the region may be successfully planted. But the second consideration mentioned, above all, now calls for remark. We must not only have regard to original distribution, but we must also study the habit, the habitat, of our different sorts of trees. This means simply a more exact examination of the particular case. Our native trees affect different situations, different soils, habitats we say, and, while many of them will grow almost anywhere if sufficient moisture is at hand, yet after all each does best in natural soil and surroundings. Thus willows grow by the water courses only. One common species is found generally on the driest hillsides. The black walnut rises to splendid perfection in rich alluvial soil; the beech and pine will flourish on a soil of sand and gravel; the white oak affects the loess capped ridge; the basswood and the hard maple, in the west at least, love the cool limestone ridge, the rocky bank; knee deep in the swamp stands the tamarack of the north, the cypress of the south; the bur oak lives in the sand, on sunny slopes, on dry, thin soils on the prairie, braving the prairie fires, even invading the desert in stunted, dwarfish growth to form the farthest western skirmish line of the Atlantic forest. These are only illustrations of how trees love special habitats. Nevertheless within their natural limits almost all trees flourish well in good, rich soil—not all. The expert forester knows his tree and knows exactly where it may be placed to best advantage. In general, as rainfall is less we need better soil and better cultivation.

In the third place, in selecting trees to plant the planter must have respect to his own ultimate purpose. If a prairie farmer desires to secure quick results, early protection, he will plant cottonwoods, white maples, box elders almost surely these because of their hardiness, ease of cultivation and rapidity of growth. Among them he will plant the larch, the Austrian pine, various evergreens, and if sufficiently far-sighted he will intersperse seeds or seedlings of better varieties for the establishment of a permanent wood lot. If our tree planter is an eastern landholder desiring to restore a forest cover to the denuded farm, he will consult the species formerly occupants of the soil and be guided by the ordinary rules of reforestation, too extended to be here discussed.

But probably the greater number of those who read these columns are interested in tree planting chiefly as the art contributes to the adornment of street and park and lawn, to the decoration of the homestead, and precisely along these lines there seems to be everywhere room for improvement. In how many towns, not to say cities, in the United States have the trees been properly selected and regularly planted? In how many towns is the matter considered and systematically controlled? We have planted trees, but is it not true that each individual has obeyed his own individual impulse and as a result we have individualism run wild? In order to build a home for himself a man has been known to grub out or destroy a fine colony of young oaks or hickories, grade the surface from his lot and then in front of his premises plant a row of white maples or equally unsuitable species, having no regard to similar plantings on the part of his neighbors, but consulting some fancied convenience of his own, and that alone. Of course, the remedy for this is municipal control. The man who succeeds at last in surrounding his home with vistas of beauty effects it by carefully studying the situation as a whole, taking advantage of all that nature contributes, allowing art to supplement nature only where modification or addition is positively necessary. In the same way, if the city is to be properly planted and adorned, the entire property of the public must be treated as a unit, managed and planted as a single holding. A plan rapidly growing in popularity is to put all the tree planting of the town under control of a competent commission. When this is wisely done, we get system and may reasonably expect the very highest results.

In the city of Minneapolis every tree is under control of a committee having almost absolute power. The city plants and cares for all the trees within the municipality. A similar rule holds in Boston, Passaic, N. J., and several other American cities, to say nothing of the capitals of the old world.

It is said that such a commission is impracticable in our thousand smaller towns and villages. The reply is obvious that in such situation the problem is of proportionate simplicity, and it can be brought about by the people themselves if only they can be organized and in serious earnest. A village improvement society or simply a village committee is all we need. For instance, there is no better street tree in all the world than our American elm, fortunately the most common tree throughout the northern states, most easily transplanted, most certain to afford a symmetrical growth if simply let alone. Now, it ought to be possible even in the small village to plant the principal street with elms, a row on each side, all appropriately spaced and all in one straight line. We admit that if we were to judge by what is shown today such a thing would seem an impossibility, but it is possible all the same. In any village let such trees be today so planted, and in thirty years they will be the pride of the town, in a century its glory. The famous elms of Yale are the American elms, so nearly universal as to be practically free to the poorest corner from Connecticut to the Dakotas. In all our towns the white or soft maple has been too often made to do duty in lieu of the elm. It grows perhaps more rapidly, but nevertheless to less advantage. Soft maples have their use, but not along the streets, the peculiar branching giving the tree as it grows older a top more and more open. The principal branches lengthen rather stiffly and become presently easy victims of the storm. The hard maple is also objectionable along the streets, not that it is not an exceedingly beautiful tree, equally attractive by the dense shade of its summer green and by the richness of its autumn glory, but it lacks endurance in isolated situations.

But it is said that the elms are monotonous; we must have variety. Let it be so. Ample variety is easily within our reach. There are many other natives of our forests waiting our disposal. The linden is a beautiful tree and will make, where properly cared for, a most handsome row, its foliage rich and umbrageous, its flowers odorous and honey laden, a gift to the bees. The honey locust is by no means to be despised. The thornless variety is a lovely tree, perfectly healthy and hardy, the wood heavy and strong, the foliage feathery and graceful, the rather abundant fruit the only objection. The sycamore in some places makes beautiful rows, but seems not to thrive very well far from its favorite alluvial habitat. The horse chestnut is an exceedingly ornamental tree, generally hardy, unrivaled in its pyramids of tinted bloom. Nor should the catalpa, our native species, be forgotten. The hackberry makes a rounded head of soft, pale leaves, a clean, straight, elegant stem, and may well on cross streets supplant its more vigorous cousin, the elm.

Substitute For Quinine.

You think you are bilious. Well, I should think you would be! What did you expect your stomach and liver could stand? You ought to be thankful that you got off with simply being bilious. The wonder is that you have any stomach or liver left at all, says Medical Talk.

What would I advise? Well, in order to stir up your liver a little and give you a slight gymnastic exercise I would advise you to go and find the doctor who gave you 100 grains of quinine and give him a good licking. Hit him with your hands. Don't hit with a club or shoot him. Just use your open hand. After you have done this right I would quit using tobacco, if not entirely at least nearly so, say a little after supper each day. Use no alcoholic stimulants of any sort. Let your diet be simple and plain. Avoid excesses. Avoid everything fried during the hot season. Eat much fruit; drink much water. Take long nights' sleep. Behave yourself. Keep away from the doctors.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Anxious Daughter—Mother, did papa have his salary increased when he was married?

Mother—No, my child.

Anxious Daughter—I don't suppose he had any money saved up, had he?

Mother—Not a penny. He spent all he earned.

Anxious Daughter—Did you get along comfortably?

Mother—We were very happy.

Anxious Daughter—Well, you know, George hasn't been able to save a penny, but—

Mother—Now, Maria, if that poverty stricken fellow dares to show his face here again I'll get your father to turn him out!

DARK SOMALILAND

BUT LITTLE KNOWN OF THIS ODD CORNER OF EASTERN AFRICA.

Inhabited by a Nomadic Race Descended From the Arabs—Their Strange Religious Beliefs—Why England Must Crush the Mollah.

England seems never to be entirely at peace. Always there appears to be fighting in some one of her colonies or dependencies. Her latest trouble with the Mad Mollah, by which two British officers and a hundred men were slain, has aroused the foreign office, and a punishing force has been sent to crush that troublesome individual.

General W. H. Manning, who will have charge of affairs in Somaliland, is the principal military officer in the foreign office and secretary of the protectorate of Somaliland. His familiarity with the land of the Mad Mollah augurs ill for the welfare of that fanatic.

Arabs describe as "Bar Agan," or the "Unknown Land," that particular horn of Africa's eastern coast which lies directly opposite Aden, called Somali, and which from time immemorial has enjoyed so evil a reputation that not only has it been avoided by the vast majority of explorers of the Dark Continent, but has likewise in the partition of the latter by the great powers of Europe been left untouched save as regards the coast line, none of them caring to assume the responsibilities of the sovereignty of the hinterland.

There is an Italian, an English, an Abyssinian and a French Somaliland. But the rule of none of these four nations extends beyond the littoral, and as long as there is no undue attempt on the part of the natives of the hinterland to interffere with the trade that finds its outlet and inlet at the various stations on the coast the tribes of the interior are left to fight among themselves as much as they please, and no attempt is made to bring them under subjection.

The Somalis are a nomadic race and claim to be descended from fugitive Arabs who, abandoning their own country, landed on the Somali coast, subsequently intermarrying with the local tribes. The dawn of the Somali people coincides with the rise of Mohammed some 1,200 or 1,300 years ago. They, however, do not belong to the true African race, for they reveal no signs of the negroid type and from a slight resemblance in language are believed to be allied to the races of Hindustan.

The religion professed by the Somalis—that is to say, the most fanatical type of Islam—has the effect of keeping them engaged in constant warfare with their neighbors, the Abyssinians, who profess what is probably the lowest class of Christianity. Indeed, one of the most cherished objects of the Somali and, in fact, of all the warlike Mohammedan tribes of that portion of Africa, has been to prevent Abyssinia from securing or retaining possession of a seaport on the northeast coast of the Dark Continent.

This is due to an ancient Mohammedan prophecy, according to which Mecca, the most holy place of Islam, will one day be razed to the ground by the Abyssinians, an event which will be attended by the most disastrous consequences for the whole of the Moslem world.

It is owing to this belief that the British must crush the Mad Mollah, since to leave him unconquered would place them in bad light not only with the Egyptian army, but also in the eyes of the 80,000,000 Mohammedans in India.

To abandon Somaliland to his sway would work incalculable damage to her power and prestige in all other Mohammedan countries under her rule. Not only must he be defeated, but crushed absolutely. For in the case of Islam more than in that of any other creed the authenticity of the mahdis and prophets is gauged by the degree of their success against the infidels, and the leaders of any armed religious movement are not relegated to the ranks of false prophets until defeat, capture or death has convinced their coreligionists that they were frauds.

This is the task assigned to General Manning. To assist him he will have the troops already in Somaliland and an extra brigade from India. That he will eventually succeed is certain, but at what cost remains to be seen.

What He Meant.

"I see Follansby is on his legs again."

Would Not Insure Him.

Insurance Companies would not insure the Rev. J. W. Yeisley because he had Kidney Trouble.

Mr. Yeisley was much discouraged till a friend recommended Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and it cured him.

Mr. Yeisley writes:

"My kidneys and liver were in bad condition and I was anxious for relief. I had tried many remedies without success. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' which effectively proved its merit. The best proof that it has completely cured me is my recent acceptance by four different life insurance companies."

The Rev. Mr. Yeisley is the pastor of the First Reformed Church of St. Paris, Ohio, and is as well the editor of the St. Paris Dispatch.

There is no question that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best and surest medicine in the world for diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as the weaknesses peculiar to women. It quickly relieves and cures inability to hold urine and the necessity of getting up a number of times during the night and puts an end to that scalding pain when passing urine.

ORINOCO BLOCKADE.

British Want to Know Intentions of United States Regarding Manzanares.

VENEZUELA IS APPREHENSIVE.

Will Renew Diplomatic Relations With France, Which Have Been Ruptured Since 1894—President Castro Opening Prisons and Releasing Prisoners.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 1.—The United States is confronted with the question of declaring its attitude regarding the blockade of the Orinoco river, which has been declared by the Venezuelan government. The British authorities say they have asked United States Consul Smith what the intentions of the Washington government are regarding the steamer Manzanares, belonging to the Orinoco Steamship company, which is now here. Some days ago the British authorities announced their willingness to convey the Manzanares up the Orinoco, but withdrew their offer on the arrival of the United States gunboat Nashville, on the ground that the United States now has a warship in port and should convoy its own merchantmen. Consul Smith is conferring with Admiral Crowninshield and Admiral Sumner, it is believed, with regard to the Manzanares. The Nashville is suited to the purpose of convoying the Manzanares, but no action is possible until instructions have been received from Washington.

Embarrassing American Commerce.

The United States is the only nation which has not taken a decided stand regarding the blockade, and it is claimed that this situation is embarrassing American commerce, especially the Manzanares, which has been here since last June, her cargo spoiling and the delay involving a great loss to the company.

Since the proclamation of the blockade 1,375 ships of all nations, except the United States, and principally Venezuelan vessels have entered and left the Orinoco, and it is insisted that this fact constitutes the best evidence possible that the blockade is ineffective. Venezuelan gunboats have left the Orinoco unguarded for periods of two weeks at a time and the guns of the Fort Los Castillos, which were the only means of maintaining the blockade of Ciudad Bolivar after the withdrawal of the gunboats, have been removed.

Sends Minister to France.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—The Venezuelan General Antonio Velutini has been appointed minister plenipotentiary to France. He will renew the diplomatic relations between the countries, which have been ruptured since 1894. The precipitate nomination of General Velutini is due to the fears entertained by the Venezuelan government of complications with Germany. The newly appointed minister is of French descent.

The news that Germany will send three warships to reinforce the German squadron in Venezuelan waters, which already numbers three vessels, has produced a feeling of apprehension in this city, and especially in official circles.

President Castro has opened all the prisons in this city and at Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo and liberated the political offenders confined therein. Among the released prisoners are Olavarria, the brother-in-law of General Matos; Acosio, the latter's confidential agent, and the leading traders in Caracas named Travieso, Volcan and Nunez, who were arrested for complicity in the revolution. This act has produced a good impression, and it is reported that General J. M. Hernandez, called "El Mocho," and three others of the revolutionary leaders will also be liberated shortly.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—An American chamber of commerce will be organized in this city, Dec. 4, by American business men here.

Hamburg, Dec. 1.—The German painter, Christian Allers, who, it is alleged, was responsible for the charges brought against the late Herr Krupp, has been arrested at the Swiss frontier.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 1.—Owing to the cattle embargo on New England ports the agents of the Leyland line, of Boston, are making arrangements for the housing and shipment of cattle and sheep from here. There is accommodation for 3,000 cattle and 500 sheep

London, Dec. 1.—The colonial officers announce that after Dec. 1 no permits to proceed to the Transvaal or to the Orange River colony will be issued in England or anywhere except at South African ports. Intending passengers are advised to ascertain beforehand by writing whether they are likely to obtain permits

THE MINE STRIKE COMMISSION.

Arbitrators Will Hold Conference Tomorrow, Prior to Resumption of Hearing on Wednesday.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1.—A conference of the mine strike commissioners will be held here tomorrow night, prior to the resumption of hearings Wednesday morning. Commissioners Clark, Watkins and Parker are here, but doing absolutely nothing besides waiting for the return of the other commissioners. At tomorrow night's conference it is expected the commission will prepare a statement setting forth the purposes and results, or, rather, lack of results, of the 10-day recess and define specifically the position of the commission regarding the recess.

Expert accountants of both sides are going over the company's books with a view of eliminating as far as possible the contentions regarding the mathematics of the controversy, particularly as to wage figures. This was the ostensibly primal purpose of the recess. The negotiations for amicable adjustment of all the matters in dispute set back the undertaking of this work five days. As a consequence the commission will have to busy itself for a week or so at some other feature of the case while awaiting a report from the belated accountants.

CAPE MAY IMPROVEMENTS.

Company Formed to Develop Summer Resort at Outlay of $11,000,000.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Announcement was made last night that documents were filed at Trenton Saturday incorporating the East Cape May company, having for its object the improvement and development of Cape May, the oldest seashore resort in the country. A gentleman interested in the project says capitalists have bought over 4,000 acres of land in and around the city and propose making changes that will revolutionize the resort. Their plans include the building of a new city, which, they say, they intend to make one of the finest all-around resorts in the world. In this they declare they will be aided by the United States government and the Pennsylvania and Reading railroad companies. Estimates of the cost of the project point to ultimate outlay of $11,000,000.

In order to attract owners of yachts deep waterways will be formed, and the company intends constructing a lake for yachts with a water surface covering hundreds of acres. Conferences with government officials at Washington have resulted in promises to deepen Cold Spring inlet so that the largest ocean-going yachts will be able to enter the lake. It is planned to build two and perhaps three of the most modern seaside hotels. This winter 100 cottages will be built, which will cost $10 000 each. The first hotel, for which plans have been completed, will cost $1,000,000. The projectors say 3,000 men will be employed all winter on the improvements.

YOUNG CLERK KILLED.

Interior of Bank Showed Evidences of Terrible Struggle.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 1.—Wesley Reynolds, aged 16, employed as clerk in the bank at Westville, in this county, was shot and killed at an early hour yesterday morning by robbers, who had broken into the place and were about to blow open the safe. The men escaped in a stolen rig. Adolph Koontz, passing the building early yesterday morning, discovered a broken window and called to Reynolds, but received no response. He reported the circumstance to E. S. Smith, owner of the bank, who investigated, finding his clerk dead in a pool of blood on the floor. At his side were an empty revolver and another partially empty. Examination showed evidences of a desperate battle. More than 20 shots had been exchanged. From the trail of blood left by the robbers it is believed one of the men was wounded. The rig in which they escaped was abandoned six miles south of Westville. Sheriff Small and a posse of men are scouring the country for the men. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the apprehension of the robbers. Pinkerton detectives, sent to the scene by the American Bankers' association, of which the Westville bank is a member, are also working on the case. Young Reynolds received three bullet wounds, one through the head, the second through the neck and the third through the heart.

Suspected Woman Suicides.

Dexter, Me., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Hattie L. Whitten, who was arrested Saturday on the charge of having poisoned her 9-year-old daughter, from whose funeral she had just returned, committed suicide yesterday by hanging while in the custody of the deputy sheriff. Mrs. Whitten is suspected also of having caused the death of an older daughter, aged 11, on Sept. 19 last, and this body had been exhumed. Both children died suddenly when previously they had appeared to be in the best of health. Mrs. Whitten's husband also died suddenly two years ago. The children were insured for $56 and $85, respectively. As a cause of death the physicians's certificate mentioned meningitis and heart failure. An autopsy on the body of the younger girl disclosed arsenic and strychnine.

Telegraphers Get Increase.

Fon du Lac, Wis., Dec. 1.—All the telegraph operators on the Wisconsin Central railroad have been granted an increase in salary, amounting to $5 a month for every employe in that department. The advance in the wage scale has already gone into effect and the pay checks for Dec. 16 will show the increase.

Delicate Tact.

I watched them on the street car—the little mother and her manly boy of nine or ten.

Before them was seated a white haired man, whose almost entirely sightless eyes were hidden behind a pair of dark glasses. The man was trusting to instinct or intuition, whichever one may call it, more than to sight to tell him when he had reached his particular corner. Closely he bent his face to the glass and hesitatingly reached his hand toward the bell.

"Mother," whispered the manly boy, "may I not ask him where he wants to get off and help him too?"

One glance at the proud, pale face, and the little mother answered:

"No, son; I don't believe he would like to be made feel dependent."

Then as quick as thought she said in a loud tone:

"See, son; the next corner is Seventh street, then Sixth and Broadway. The hotel is on Broadway. Don't let mother miss it."

Promptly the man's hand went to the bell. Seventh was evidently the street he wanted.

I fancy that when that boy has grown to be a man any expression of the fine charity that is now latent in his heart will be accompanied by tact in action and that in looking back over the years he will remember the lessons; that they were good ones; that his mother taught him.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication.

Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion.

Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation.

Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition.

Without nutrition there cannot be health.

Without health what is life worth?

Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

Thus Spoke the Cynic.

"Curious thing about a man with a watch is that if you see him take it out and look at it and you ask him two seconds later what time it is he never remembers. He has to look at it again."

"Yes; I've noticed that he'll always do it—if his watch is a fine one."—Chicago Tribune.

Fully Competent.

"What we require," said the managing editor, "is the services of a man capable of taking full charge of our 'Query Box.' Are you capable of answering all kinds of questions?"

"Well, I rather think I ought to be," replied the applicant. "I'm the father of eleven children."

Stuffed With Food, Starved For Air.

You can live forty days without food, but you cannot live four minutes without air. These things being true, is it wise to stuff ourselves with food and starve ourselves for want of air?—Philistine.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind. "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventitive and cure for croup." A NEW WHITE HOUSE

IN EFFECT THAT IS THE RESULT OF THE RECENT CHANCES.

Executive Mansion Restored to Style of Architecture In Which It Was Originally Designed—The New Office Building and Esplanade.

When the doors of the rejuvenated White House are thrown open to the public, they will disclose practically a new interior in the historic home of the nation's chief executives.

Some adverse comment has been made concerning the new building erected south of the executive mansion for the president's offices, the objection being made that neither in its outlines nor general effect is it in keeping with the White House proper, whose exterior aspect remains unchanged.

The experts say this comment is ill advised, for when the grounds are rearranged and everything connected with the building operations is removed the entire effect of the new and the old buildings will be most attractive and harmonious.

With the new interior of the executive mansion, however, not the smallest criticism will have weight. With happiest effect it has been sought to restore the executive mansion as nearly as possible to the semblance of the early Italian renaissance, in which style it was originally designed.

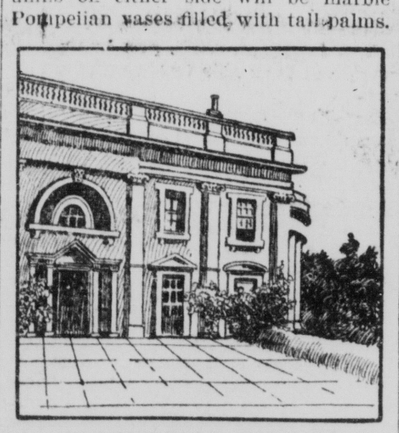
The grand entrance to the east by which the public and invited guests will approach for receptions will not be completed before February, but the historic old white front portico will be in readiness before the end of this month, at which time the splendid state dining room will be completely finished.

On entering by the front portico, which after February will only be used by the president's immediate family, the effect is in its truest sense classic and stately. A Pompeiian effect has been imparted by the removal of the old stained glass screen and substitution of six white marble pillars.

The floor will be of marble, with the walls and high ceiling in white in simple yet classical treatment.

On the large wall space to the right of the entrance will be from floor to ceiling a plate glass mirror, the duplicate to which will face it from the opposite side. Before that on the right will be the colossal statue of Washington by Houdon now in the capitol at Richmond, while before the mirror at the left will, it is expected, be the St. Gaudens bronze statue of Lincoln, at present in one of the public parks in Chicago.

This placing of the statues will give an endless effect of vista and statuary. Immediately facing the entrance the spaces between two of the farther columns on either side will be marble Pompeiian vases filled with tall palms.



THE WHITE HOUSE ESPLANADE.

For the space nearest to the state apartments there has been ordered from India a splendid brilliant red rug seventy-two feet long.

Down to the floorway both long western windows open out on to the 165 foot long esplanade between the mansion proper and the new offices. This, with a three foot high wall about it, will be an ideal place to which Mrs. Roosevelt is already looking forward to giving teas and afternoon receptions in the early spring and summer.

At the far end from the house a fountain will leap high in air, while the entire length of wall all about will serve for most artistic effects in palms and tall growing plants, through which most enchanting vistas will be had in all directions and especially overlooking the monument grounds.

It is intended to heighten this present effect by having the south grounds assume the old world Italian garden plan, in which high box brushes and hedges, stone seats and fountains will play a leading part. The immediate foreground will be a massing of brilliant flowers.

This was Thomas Jefferson's idea in first designing the terraces which are now being restored at either side of the White House.

By the removal of the executive offices from the White House the mansion reverts to the uses for which it was intended—the residence of the chief executive and the social entertainment of his guests.

ORINOCO BLOCKADE.

British Want to Know Intentions of United States Regarding Manzanares.

VENEZUELA IS APPREHENSIVE.

Will Renew Diplomatic Relations With France, Which Have Been Ruptured Since 1894—President Castro Opening Prisons and Releasing Prisoners.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 1.—The United States is confronted with the question of declaring its attitude regarding the blockade of the Orinoco river, which has been declared by the Venezuelan government. The British authorities say they have asked United States Consul Smith what the intentions of the Washington government are regarding the steamer Manzanares, belonging to the Orinoco Steamship company, which is now here. Some days ago the British authorities announced their willingness to convey the Manzanares up the Orinoco, but withdrew their offer on the arrival of the United States gunboat Nashville, on the ground that the United States now has a warship in port and should convoy its own merchantmen. Consul Smith is conferring with Admiral Crowninshield and Admiral Sumner, it is believed, with regard to the Manzanares. The Nashville is suited to the purpose of convoying the Manzanares, but no action is possible until instructions have been received from Washington.

Embarrassing American Commerce.

The United States is the only nation which has not taken a decided stand regarding the blockade, and it is claimed that this situation is embarrassing American commerce, especially the Manzanares, which has been here since last June, her cargo spoiling and the delay involving a great loss to the company.

Since the proclamation of the blockade 1,875 ships of all nations, except the United States, and principally Venezuelan vessels have entered and left the Orinoco, and it is insisted that this fact constitutes the best evidence possible that the blockade is ineffective. Venezuelan gunboats have left the Orinoco unguarded for periods of two weeks at a time and the guns of the Fort Los Castillos, which were the only means of maintaining the blockade of Ciudad Bolivar after the withdrawal of the gunboats, have been removed.

Sends Minister to France.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—The Venezuelan General Antonio Velutini has been appointed minister plenipotentiary to France. He will renew the diplomatic relations between the countries, which have been ruptured since 1894. The precipitate nomination of General Velutini is due to the fears entertained by the Venezuelan government of complications with Germany. The newly appointed minister is of French descent.

The news that Germany will send three warships to reinforce the German squadron in Venezuelan waters, which already numbers three vessels, has produced a feeling of apprehension in this city, and especially in official circles.

President Castro has opened all the prisons in this city and at Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo and liberated the political offenders confined therein. Among the released prisoners are Olavarria, the brother-in-law of General Matos; Acolo, the latter's confidential agent, and the leading traders in Caracas named Travieso, Volcan and Nunez, who were arrested for complicity in the revolution. This act has produced a good impression, and it is reported that General J. M. Hernandez, called "El Mocho," and three others of the revolutionary leaders will also be liberated shortly.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—An American chamber of commerce will be organized in this city, Dec. 4, by American business men here.

London, Dec. 1.—Andrew Carnegie, who has been lying ill here for the past fortnight, was able to get up yesterday for the first time.

Rome, Dec. 1.—The pope yesterday gave an audience to the Grand Duke Sergius, who announced to his holiness the czar's intention to visit Rome.

Vienna, Dec. 1.—The heirs, some of whom are living in the United States, are wanted to an estate valued at about $100,000, left by Heinrich Oesterreicher, a miser who recently died here.

THE MINE STRIKE COMMISSION.

Arbitrators Will Hold Conference Tomorrow, Prior to Resumption of Hearing on Wednesday.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1.—A conference of the mine strike commissioners will be held here tomorrow night, prior to the resumption of hearings Wednesday morning. Commissioners Clark, Watkins and Parker are here, but doing absolutely nothing besides waiting for the return of the other commissioners. At tomorrow night's conference it is expected the commission will prepare a statement setting forth the purposes and results, or, rather, lack of results, of the 10-day recess and define specifically the position of the commission regarding the recess.

Expert accountants of both sides are going over the company's books with a view of eliminating as far as possible the contentions regarding the mathematics of the controversy, particularly as to wage figures. This was the ostensibly primal purpose of the recess. The negotiations for amicable adjustment of all the matters in dispute set back the undertaking of this work five days. As a consequence the commission will have to busy itself for a week or so at some other feature of the case while awaiting a report from the belated accountants.

CAPE MAY IMPROVEMENTS.

Company Formed to Develop Summer Resort at Outlay of $11,000,000.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Announcement was made last night that documents were filed at Trenton Saturday incorporating the East Cape May company, having for its object the improvement and development of Cape May, the oldest seashore resort in the country. A gentleman interested in the project says capitalists have bought over 4,000 acres of land in and around the city and propose making changes that will revolutionize the resort. Their plans include the building of a new city, which, they say, they intend to make one of the finest all-around resorts in the world. In this they declare they will be aided by the United States government and the Pennsylvania and Reading railroad companies. Estimates of the cost of the project point to ultimate outlay of $11,000,000.

In order to attract owners of yachts deep waterways will be formed, and the company intends constructing a lake for yachts with a water surface covering hundreds of acres. Conferences with government officials at Washington have resulted in promises to deepen Cold Spring inlet so that the largest ocean-going yachts will be able to enter the lake. It is planned to build two and perhaps three of the most modern seaside hotels. This winter 100 cottages will be built, which will cost $10 000 each. The first hotel, for which plans have been completed, will cost $1,000,000. The projectors say 3,000 men will be employed all winter on the improvements.

YOUNG CLERK KILLED.

Interior of Bank Showed Evidences of Terrible Struggle.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 1.—Wesley Reynolds, aged 16, employed as clerk in the bank at Westville, in this county, was shot and killed at an early hour yesterday morning by robbers, who had broken into the place and were about to blow open the safe. The men escaped in a stolen rig. Adolph Koontz, passing the building early yesterday morning, discovered a broken window and called to Reynolds, but received no response. He reported the circumstance to E. S. Smith, owner of the bank, who investigated, finding his clerk dead in a pool of blood on the floor. At his side were an empty revolver and another partially empty. Examination showed evidences of a desperate battle. More than 20 shots had been exchanged. From the trail of blood left by the robbers it is believed one of the men was wounded. The rig in which they escaped was abandoned six miles south of Westville. Sheriff Small and a posse of men are scouring the country for the men. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the apprehension of the robbers. Pinkerton detectives, sent to the scene by the American Bankers' association, of which the Westville bank is a member, are also working on the case. Young Reynolds received three bullet wounds, one through the head, the second through the neck and the third through the heart.

Suspected Woman Suicides.

Dexter, Me., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Hattie L. Whitten, who was arrested Saturday on the charge of having poisoned her 9-year-old daughter, from whose funeral she had just returned, committed suicide yesterday by hanging while in the custody of the deputy sheriff. Mrs. Whitten is suspected also of having caused the death of an elder daughter, aged 11, on Sept. 19 last, and this body had been exhumed. Both children died suddenly when previously they had appeared to be in the best of health. Mrs. Whitten's husband also died suddenly two years ago. The children were insured for $56 and $85, respectively. As a cause of death the physicians's certificate mentioned meningitis and heart failure. An autopsy on the body of the younger girl disclosed arsenic and strychnine.

Telegraphers Get Increase.

Fon du Lac, Wis., Dec. 1.—All the telegraph operators on the Wisconsin Central railroad have been granted an increase in salary, amounting to $5 a month for every employe in that department. The advance in the wage scale has already gone into effect and the pay checks for Dec. 16 will show the increase.

Delicate Tact.

I watched them on the street car—the little mother and her manly boy of nine or ten.

Before them was seated a white haired man, whose almost entirely sightless eyes were hidden behind a pair of dark glasses. The man was trusting to instinct or intuition, whichever one may call it, more than to sight to tell him when he had reached his particular corner. Closely he bent his face to the glass and hesitatingly reached his hand toward the bell.

"Mother," whispered the manly boy, "may I not ask him where he wants to get off and help him too?"

One glance at the proud, pale face, and the little mother answered:

"No, son; I don't believe he would like to be made feel dependent."

Then as quick as thought she said in a loud tone:

"See, son; the next corner is Seventh street, then Sixth and Broadway. The hotel is on Broadway. Don't let mother miss it."

Promptly the man's hand went to the bell. Seventh was evidently the street he wanted.

I fancy that when that boy has grown to be a man any expression of the fine charity that is now latent in his heart will be accompanied by tact in action and that in looking back over the years he will remember the lessons; that they were good ones; that his mother taught him.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication.

Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion.

Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation.

Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition.

Without nutrition there cannot be health.

Without health what is life worth?

Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

Thus Spoke the Cynic.

"Curious thing about a man with a watch is that if you see him take it out and look at it and you ask him two seconds later what time it is he never remembers. He has to look at it again."

"Yes; I've noticed that he'll always do it—if his watch is a fine one."—Chicago Tribune.

Fully Competent.

"What we require," said the managing editor, "is the services of a man capable of taking full charge of our 'Query Box.' Are you capable of answering all kinds of questions?"

"Well, I rather think I ought to be," replied the applicant. "I'm the father of eleven children."

Stuffed With Food, Starved For Air.

You can live forty days without food, but you cannot live four minutes without air. These things being true, is it wise to stuff ourselves with food and starve ourselves for want of air?—Philistine.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind. "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventitive and cure for croup." A NEW WHITE HOUSE

IN EFFECT THAT IS THE RESULT OF THE RECENT CHANCES.

Executive Mansion Restored to Style of Architecture In Which It Was Originally Designed—The New Office Building and Esplanade.

When the doors of the rejuvenated White House are thrown open to the public, they will disclose practically a new interior in the historic home of the nation's chief executives.

Some adverse comment has been made concerning the new building erected south of the executive mansion for the president's offices, the objection being made that neither in its outlines nor general effect is it in keeping with the White House proper, whose exterior aspect remains unchanged.

The experts say this comment is ill advised, for when the grounds are rearranged and everything connected with the building operations is removed the entire effect of the new and the old buildings will be most attractive and harmonious.

With the new interior of the executive mansion, however, not the smallest criticism will have weight. With happiest effect it has been sought to restore the executive mansion as nearly as possible to the semblance of the early Italian renaissance, in which style it was originally designed.

The grand entrance to the east by which the public and invited guests will approach for receptions will not be completed before February, but the historic old white front portico will be in readiness before the end of this month, at which time the splendid state dining room will be completely finished.

On entering by the front portico, which after February will only be used by the president's immediate family, the effect is in its truest sense classic and stately. A Pompeiian effect has been imparted by the removal of the old stained glass screen and substitution of six white marble pillars.

The floor will be of marble, with the walls and high ceiling in white in simple yet classical treatment.

On the large wall space to the right of the entrance will be from floor to ceiling a plate glass mirror, the duplicate to which will face it from the opposite side. Before that on the right will be the colossal statue of Washington by Houdon now in the capitol at Richmond, while before the mirror at the left will, it is expected, be the St. Gaudens bronze statue of Lincoln, at present in one of the public parks in Chicago.

This placing of the statues will give an endless effect of vista and statuary. Immediately facing the entrance the spaces between two of the farther columns on either side will be marble Pompeiian vases filled with tall palms.

THE WHITE HOUSE ESPLANADE.

For the space nearest to the state apartments there has been ordered from India a splendid brilliant red rug seventy-two feet long.

Down to the floorway both long western windows open out on to the 165 foot long esplanade between the mansion proper and the new offices. This, with a three foot high wall about it, will be an ideal place to which Mrs. Roosevelt is already looking forward to giving teas and afternoon receptions in the early spring and summer.

At the far end from the house a fountain will leap high in air, while the entire length of wall all about will serve for most artistic effects in palms and tall growing plants, through which most enchanting vistas will be had in all directions and especially overlooking the monument grounds.

It is intended to heighten this present effect by having the south grounds assume the old world Italian garden plan, in which high box brushes and hedges, stone seats and fountains will play a leading part. The immediate foreground will be a massing of brilliant flowers.

This was Thomas Jefferson's idea in first designing the terraces which are now being restored at either side of the White House.

By the removal of the executive offices from the White House the mansion reverts to the uses for which it was intended—the residence of the chief executive and the social entertainment of his guests.

ORINOCO BLOCKADE.

British Want to Know Intentions of United States Regarding Manzanares.

VENEZUELA IS APPREHENSIVE.

Will Renew Diplomatic Relations With France, Which Have Been Ruptured Since 1894—President Castro Opening Prisons and Releasing Prisoners.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 1.—The United States is confronted with the question of declaring its attitude regarding the blockade of the Orinoco river, which has been declared by the Venezuelan government. The British authorities say they have asked United States Consul Smith what the intentions of the Washington government are regarding the steamer Manzanares, belonging to the Orinoco Steamship company, which is now here. Some days ago the British authorities announced their willingness to convey the Manzanares up the Orinoco, but withdrew their offer on the arrival of the United States gunboat Nashville, on the ground that the United States now has a warship in port and should convoy its own merchantmen. Consul Smith is conferring with Admiral Crowninshield and Admiral Sumner, it is believed, with regard to the Manzanares. The Nashville is suited to the purpose of convoying the Manzanares, but no action is possible until instructions have been received from Washington.

Embarrassing American Commerce.

The United States is the only nation which has not taken a decided stand regarding the blockade, and it is claimed that this situation is embarrassing American commerce, especially the Manzanares, which has been here since last June, her cargo spoiling and the delay involving a great loss to the company.

Since the proclamation of the blockade 1,875 ships of all nations, except the United States, and principally Venezuelan vessels have entered and left the Orinoco, and it is insisted that this fact constitutes the best evidence possible that the blockade is ineffective. Venezuelan gunboats have left the Orinoco unguarded for periods of two weeks at a time and the guns of the Fort Los Castillos, which were the only means of maintaining the blockade of Ciudad Bolivar after the withdrawal of the gunboats, have been removed.

Sends Minister to France.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—The Venezuelan General Antonio Velutini has been appointed minister plenipotentiary to France. He will renew the diplomatic relations between the countries, which have been ruptured since 1894. The precipitate nomination of General Velutini is due to the fears entertained by the Venezuelan government of complications with Germany. The newly appointed minister is of French descent.

The news that Germany will send three warships to reinforce the German squadron in Venezuelan waters, which already numbers three vessels, has produced a feeling of apprehension in this city, and especially in official circles.

President Castro has opened all the prisons in this city and at Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo and liberated the political offenders confined therein. Among the released prisoners are Olavarria, the brother-in-law of General Matos; Acelo, the latter's confidential agent, and the leading traders in Caracas named Travieso, Volcan and Nunez, who were arrested for complicity in the revolution. This act has produced a good impression, and it is reported that General J. M. Hernandez, called "El Mocho," and three others of the revolutionary leaders will also be liberated shortly.

THE MINE STRIKE COMMISSION.

Arbitrators Will Hold Conference Tomorrow, Prior to Resumption of Hearing on Wednesday.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1.—A conference of the mine strike commissioners will be held here tomorrow night, prior to the resumption of hearings Wednesday morning. Commissioners Clark, Watkins and Parker are here, but doing absolutely nothing besides waiting for the return of the other commissioners. At tomorrow night's conference it is expected the commission will prepare a statement setting forth the purposes and results, or, rather, lack of results, of the 10-day recess and define specifically the position of the commission regarding the recess.

Expert accountants of both sides are going over the company's books with a view of eliminating as far as possible the contentions regarding the mathematics of the controversy, particularly as to wage figures. This was the ostensibly primal purpose of the recess. The negotiations for amicable adjustment of all the matters in dispute set back the undertaking of this work five days. As a consequence the commission will have to busy itself for a week or so at some other feature of the case while awaiting a report from the belated accountants.

CAPE MAY IMPROVEMENTS.

Company Formed to Develop Summer Resort at Outlay of $11,000,000.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Announcement was made last night that documents were filed at Trenton Saturday incorporating the East Cape May company, having for its object the improvement and development of Cape May, the oldest seashore resort in the country. A gentleman interested in the project says capitalists have bought over 4,000 acres of land in and around the city and propose making changes that will revolutionize the resort. Their plans include the building of a new city, which, they say, they intend to make one of the finest all-around resorts in the world. In this they declare they will be aided by the United States government and the Pennsylvania and Reading railroad companies. Estimates of the cost of the project point to ultimate outlay of $11,000,000.

In order to attract owners of yachts deep waterways will be formed, and the company intends constructing a lake for yachts with a water surface covering hundreds of acres. Conferences with government officials at Washington have resulted in promises to deepen Cold Spring inlet so that the largest ocean-going yachts will be able to enter the lake. It is planned to build two and perhaps three of the most modern seaside hotels. This winter 100 cottages will be built, which will cost $10,000 each. The first hotel, for which plans have been completed, will cost $1,000,000. The projectors say 3,000 men will be employed all winter on the improvements.

YOUNG CLERK KILLED.

Interior of Bank Showed Evidences of Terrible Struggle.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 1.—Wesley Reynolds, aged 16, employed as clerk in the bank at Westville, in this county, was shot and killed at an early hour yesterday morning by robbers, who had broken into the place and were about to blow open the safe. The men escaped in a stolen rig. Adolph Koontz, passing the building early yesterday morning, discovered a broken window and called to Reynolds, but received no response. He reported the circumstance to E. S. Smith, owner of the bank, who investigated, finding his clerk dead in a pool of blood on the floor. At his side were an empty revolver and another partially empty. Examination showed evidences of a desperate battle. More than 20 shots had been exchanged. From the trail of blood left by the robbers it is believed one of the men was wounded. The rig in which they escaped was abandoned six miles south of Westville. Sheriff Small and a posse of men are scouring the country for the men. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the apprehension of the robbers. Pinkerton detectives, sent to the scene by the American Bankers' association, of which the Westville bank is a member, are also working on the case. Young Reynolds received three bullet wounds, one through the head, the second through the neck and the third through the heart.

Suspected Woman Suicides.

Dexter, Me., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Hattie L. Whitten, who was arrested Saturday on the charge of having poisoned her 9-year-old daughter, from whose funeral she had just returned, committed suicide yesterday by hanging while in the custody of the deputy sheriff. Mrs. Whitten is suspected also of having caused the death of an older daughter, aged 11, on Sept. 19 last, and this body had been exhumed. Both children died suddenly when previously they had appeared to be in the best of health. Mrs. Whitten's husband also died suddenly two years ago. The children were insured for $56 and $85, respectively. As a cause of death the physicians's certificate mentioned meningitis and heart failure. An autopsy on the body of the younger girl disclosed arsenic and strychnine.

Delicate Tact.

I watched them on the street car—the little mother and her manly boy of nine or ten.

Before them was seated a white haired man, whose almost entirely sightless eyes were hidden behind a pair of dark glasses. The man was trusting to instinct or intuition, whichever one may call it, more than to sight to tell him when he had reached his particular corner. Closely he bent his face to the glass and hesitatingly reached his hand toward the bell.

"Mother," whispered the manly boy, "may I not ask him where he wants to get off and help him too?"

One glance at the proud, pale face, and the little mother answered:

"No, son; I don't believe he would like to be made feel dependent."

Then as quick as thought she said in a loud tone:

"See, son; the next corner is Seventh street, then Sixth and Broadway. The hotel is on Broadway. Don't let mother miss it."

Promptly the man's hand went to the bell. Seventh was evidently the street he wanted.

I fancy that when that boy has grown to be a man any expression of the fine charity that is now latent in his heart will be accompanied by tact in action and that in looking back over the years he will remember the lessons; that they were good ones; that his mother taught him.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication.

Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion.

Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation.

Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition.

Without nutrition there cannot be health.

Without health what is life worth?

Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

Thus Spoke the Cynic.

"Curious thing about a man with a watch is that if you see him take it out and look at it and you ask him two seconds later what time it is he never remembers. He has to look at it again."

"Yes; I've noticed that he'll always do it—if his watch is a fine one."—Chicago Tribune.

Fully Competent.

"What we require," said the managing editor, "is the services of a man capable of taking full charge of our 'Query Box.' Are you capable of answering all kinds of questions?"

"Well, I rather think I ought to be," replied the applicant. "I'm the father of eleven children."

Stuffed With Food, Starved For Air.

You can live forty days without food, but you cannot live four minutes without air. These things being true, is it wise to stuff ourselves with food and starve ourselves for want of air?—Philistine.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind. "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventitive and cure for croup." A NEW WHITE HOUSE

IN EFFECT THAT IS THE RESULT OF THE RECENT CHANCES.

Executive Mansion Restored to Style of Architecture In Which It Was Originally Designed—The New Office Building and Esplanade.

When the doors of the rejuvenated White House are thrown open to the public, they will disclose practically a new interior in the historic home of the nation's chief executives.

Some adverse comment has been made concerning the new building erected south of the executive mansion for the president's offices, the objection being made that neither in its outlines nor general effect is it in keeping with the White House proper, whose exterior aspect remains unchanged.

The experts say this comment is ill advised, for when the grounds are rearranged and everything connected with the building operations is removed the entire effect of the new and the old buildings will be most attractive and harmonious.

With the new interior of the executive mansion, however, not the smallest criticism will have weight. With happiest effect it has been sought to restore the executive mansion as nearly as possible to the semblance of the early Italian renaissance, in which style it was originally designed.

The grand entrance to the east by which the public and invited guests will approach for receptions will not be completed before February, but the historic old white front portico will be in readiness before the end of this month, at which time the splendid state dining room will be completely finished.

On entering by the front portico, which after February will only be used by the president's immediate family, the effect is in its truest sense classic and stately. A Pompeiian effect has been imparted by the removal of the old stained glass screen and substitution of six white marble pillars.

The floor will be of marble, with the walls and high ceiling in white in simple yet classical treatment.

On the large wall space to the right of the entrance will be from floor to ceiling a plate glass mirror, the duplicate to which will face it from the opposite side. Before that on the right will be the colossal statue of Washington by Houdon now in the capitol at Richmond, while before the mirror at the left will, it is expected, be the St. Gaudens bronze statue of Lincoln, at present in one of the public parks in Chicago.

This placing of the statues will give an endless effect of vista and statuary. Immediately facing the entrance the spaces between two of the farther columns on either side will be marble Pompeiian vases filled with tall palms.

THE WHITE HOUSE ESPLANADE.

For the space nearest to the state apartments there has been ordered from India a splendid brilliant red rug seventy-two feet long.

Down to the floorway both long western windows open out on to the 165 foot long esplanade between the mansion proper and the new offices. This, with a three foot high wall about it, will be an ideal place to which Mrs. Roosevelt is already looking forward to giving teas and afternoon receptions in the early spring and summer.

At the far end from the house a fountain will leap high in air, while the entire length of wall all about will serve for most artistic effects in palms and tall growing plants, through which most enchanting vistas will be had in all directions and especially overlooking the monument grounds.

It is intended to heighten this present effect by having the south grounds assume the old world Italian garden plan, in which high box brushes and hedges, stone seats and fountains will play a leading part. The immediate foreground will be a massing of brilliant flowers.

This was Thomas Jefferson's idea in first designing the terraces which are now being restored at either side of the White House.

By the removal of the executive offices from the White House the mansion reverts to the uses for which it was intended—the residence of the chief executive and the social entertainment of its guests.

AN AWFUL EXPERIENCE IN THE OHIO'S ICY WATER FIGHTING TO REACH SHORE

To Avoid Being Carried to Pittsburg W. S. Allen Took a Leap That Might Have Cost His Life.

Struggling in the icy waters of the Ohio, W. S. Allen, a young man well known in the city, had an awful experience and a narrow escape from death yesterday morning at the foot of Market street. That he was not carried to a watery grave is due to the slowness of the current at that point and his expert ability as a swimmer.

Allen is an employe of the Pilgrim Coal company and was on the float anchored a short distance above the wharf boat when the Clipper, a pool towboat of Pittsburg, landed for a supply of fuel. After the boat's crew had placed a sufficient amount in the fire boxes the boat pulled out from the float and dropped down to Market street, where she had left her tow of empty barges which had been gathered up near Bellaire.

Allen accepted the chance for a free ride and boarded the boat for the short trip. In less time than he had anticipated the crew had the boat attached to the fleet and while he was slowly enjoying himself inspecting her machinery in the engine room he was much surprised and somewhat taken back upon feeling the boat in motion. He realized that she had cut loose from short and had started up the river.

Knowing that the boat would make no more landings before arriving at Pittsburg and not wishing to visit the Smoky City, Allen determined upon a plan to reach shore which undoubtedly might have cost him his life. Without any apparent study over the situation and after the boat had reached a point some distance from the shore, he daringly leaped into the air and fell with a big splash into the cold water. His clothing and heavy shoes being a handrance he had an undesirable proposition ahead of his in his endeavor to reach shore and safety.

Like a Trojan he battled with the angry waves and being an excellent swimmer finally touched shore. And although nearly exhausted after his strenuous efforts he quickly made for home and got a change of clothing, took some stimulating medicine and in a few hours was little the worse for his experience.

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

Arriving Passenger Could Not Believe That He Was in East Liverpool.

EVERYTHING WAS CHANGED

And the Surprised Man Said It All Reminded Him of a Fairy Tale — A Peculiar Man's Peculiar Experience in the Crockery City.

Wearing a plug hat, a necktie emblematic of the grand old stars and stripes, President Roosevelt's likeness over his heart and other conspicuous decorations, Frederick Vogel alighted at the depot yesterday morning from the west bound train. His makeup with peculiar actions at once made him the cynosure of all eyes.

For a moment he stood as if spellbound, gazing in an absent-minded way into space. Spectators were reminded of the cartoonist's picture of a rural man's first visit to New York city, looking with awe at some sky scraper. Officer McDermott was in the crowd and he at once decided that the man was laboring under the stress of insanity. Up to the stranger walked the officer and abruptly blurted:

"What are you looking for, old man?"

"What am I looking for? I am looking for Liverpool."

The officer was then more convinced that the man was demented when he continued.

"The conductor on that train told me that this was East Liverpool. I believed him because I thought he knew his business. And maybe he does, but there is one thing certain

HOMELESS GIRL HAS FALLEN ILL

Case of Scarlet Fever in a Broading House Develops Complications.

THE PATIENT'S REMOVAL

Is Desired By the Proprietress And the Township Trustees Have Been Consulted—Sad Plight of a Colored Domestic from Coraopolis.

Miss Genevieve Daniels, a young colored girl of Coraopolis, is in the city in a plight to be envied by none. She is seriously ill of scarlet fever and without friends or relatives here. She is 17 years of age and came to this city several weeks ago in search of employment. She was hired by a family as a domestic and was doing well and enjoying herself until the latter part of last week.

She began feeling indisposed on Friday and went to the home of Mrs. Hattie Minnis, Third street, and asked if she might lie down on a cot, stating that she felt sick. Mrs. Minnis allowed her to do so and when evening came she was so sick that she pleaded for further rest.

Mrs. Minnis through pity granted the request and yesterday a physician was called. He pronounced the girl sick with scarlet fever and ordered the house quarantined. Sanitary Policeman Burgess carried out the order and then objections on the part of Mrs. Minnis arose. She keeps boarders, and upon learning that the house was under quarantine, they decamped. She has no one but herself to depend upon for a livelihood, and in consideration of big rent, losing her boarders and other inconveniences she notified the health officer that she would not care for the sick girl and wanted her removed.

The township trustees were notified of the case and called upon Mrs. Minnis, assuring her that they would pay her for caring for the girl, but Mrs. Minnis feels that even if they do pay her that she will be greatly the loser and states that she will not accept the patient as hers. Some mutual agreement will likely be made this evening, but what it will be the officers are as yet not able to state.

BEGGING A CHEW CAUSED A FIGHT

Man Who Was Hungry For Tobacco Was Landed Behind Jail Bars.

STORY OF THE OTHER MAN

Differs From His In Several Particulars—Each Charges the Other With Having Provoked the Quarrel, Which Was a Spirited One.

Blood was spurting from an ugly cut on his upper lip, a black and blue mark was under his right eye and his general appearance led one at first sight to believe that he had been in a regular Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight, when J. G. Kauffman appeared at central station last evening and told a tale that resulted in a short time in the arrest of George Wolfe by Officers McDermott and Dawson.

Wolfe was not placed in jail, he furnishing $10 for his appearance before the mayor this morning. When arraigned he pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault and battery and the mayor set the date of trial for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Kauffman was present when Wolfe was arraigned and both men were given an opportunity to tell the story of the affair. Kauffman said:

"I had been at Wellsville and got off a street car at the Diamond and started up Sixth street toward my home. I was accosted by Wolfe, who asked me for a chew of tobacco. I told him that I did not have any and that I did not know why he should ask me for tobacco when he did not know me. I then started on my way and Wolfe, after beckoning for a partner, intercepted me before I got to Washington streets. Wolfe then without provocation struck me in the face."

Wolfe said: "I was standing on Sixth street talking to a friend when Kauffman came along. I thought he was a man that I know whose given name is Ed and I said: 'Hello, Ed! give me a chew.' Kauffman stopped and came up to me and said that I had insulted him. I told him that I did not think the simple asking for a chew was an insult. He got mad and called me 'one of the smart set' and several other names. I did not want any trouble and started up street. When I got near the Arcade restaurant I motioned for a friend to come over. Before he got to me Kauffman approached and when my friend did arrive Kauffman shoved him away, telling him not to mix up in the trouble. I did not know there was any trouble brewing and was surprised when Kauffman slapped me in the face. He struck me twice and then in self-defense I struck him."

Witnesses will be subpoenaed for both parties and the trial will be awaited with interest, inasmuch as both are well known in the city.

ROBBED BY GIRLS WHO CARESSED HIM

THE UNFORTUNATE EXPERIENCE OF A WELLSVILLE MAN.

Two Colored Damsels of This City Said to Have Relieved Him of $50.

While one woman was fondly caressing him, patting his cheeks in a loving manner and calling him sweet names, Peter Carsey, a laborer of Wellsville, was robbed of a pocketbook containing $50 in bills early Saturday evening by another woman, an accomplice of the first.

After being victimized by the clever pickpockets Carsey, between his loud outbursts of sobbing, told the story of his experience, disastrous from a pecuniary standpoint, to the police at central station. He is about 50 years of age and is employed at a mill in Wellsville, receiving $1.35 per day for his services, considering which fact he was certainly not able to lose the amount stolen. Saturday afternoon he came up from the neighboring city and after making a few purchases of necessaries thought he would make a friendly call on a friend at a saloon on Second street. To the friend he conversed pleasantly for a few minutes and in the meantime dank a glass or two of beer. He is not accustomed to drinking, and although he imbibed scantily his head was a little light, and when he started home by way of the rear exit he fell easy prey to the women who were in waiting for him. They are both colored and have bad reputations.

Warrants have been issued for their arrest, according to a statement made by Chief Thompson yesterday, and the entire police force have been detailed on a hunt for them. One of them is known as Mrs. Lee and the other as Mrs. Saunders. The latter was arrested several weeks ago by Officer McDermott and taken before the mayor as a suspicious person. She was accused of stealing $30 from a rather prominent man of the city. It is said that before she came to the city she had served several terms for similar offenses, and it was the intention of the mayor upon her arraignment to order her committed to the workhouse, but when she promised to correct her ways and live a respectable life the mayor had compassion and released her.

MANUFACTURERS LEAVE FOR NATIONAL MEETING

Almost all of the manufacturing potters or their representatives, of this city, to attend the annual convention of the United States Manufacturing Potters' association, to be held in Washington, D. C., will leave here this evening on a special car attached to the regular 6:40 C. & P. train. They will go direct to the Capitol City without change, and are due to arrive at 8:30 tomorrow morning. The convention is to be held in the new Hotel Willard, at the corner of Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. It is one of the finest hosteiries in the world and all local men will be its guests. The firs session of the convention will be held tomorrow, but it is not likely that any matters of importance will come up before until Wednesday.

While the matter has not been publicly discussed it would not be surprising to see the presidency of the organization fall to an East Liverpool manufacturer this year. Indeed, the News Review is able to state, with a fair degree of certainty, that Joseph G. Lee, of the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company, will be named and supported for this high office by a large number of the delegates to the convention.

Following is the list of those who are to leave this evening:

W. H. Phillips and J. T. Smith, of Smith & Phillips company; J. R. Warner, of the National; S. C. Williams, Electrical Supply company; L. I. Aaron and W. E. Wells, Laughlin China company; Will Louthan, Louthan Supply company; Will Vodrey, Vodrey Bros.' Pottery company; H. P. Knoblock, Dresden Pottery company; H. A. Keffer, Sevres China company; George C. Thompson, C. C. Thompson Pottery company; H. N. Harker, Harker Pottery company; W. S. Brunt, William Brunt Pottery company; W. L. Smith, D. E. McNicol Pottery company; Colonel John N. Taylor, Knowles, Taylor & Knowles; W. L. Taylor, Taylor, Smith & Taylor company; George C. Murphy, Fred Lawrence and N. A. Frederick, East Liverpool Potteries company; George Burford, Burford Bros.' Pottery company; E. M. Knowles, E. M. Knowles company, Chester.

The following parties will accompany the local delegation: T. R. Bradshaw, Niles, O.; Joseph Mayer, Beaver Falls, Pa.; H. M. Preston, National Lead & Oil company, Pittsburg, Pa.; J. T. Croxall, East Liverpool; W. H. Deidrick, Dresden China company, Salineville; Harry Winteringer, of Steubenville Pottery company.

TWO CHARGES FILED

GROWING OUT OF THE SLAUGHTER OF A PET DOG.

Edward McGavern Accused of Assault And Battery And Cruelty to Animals.

The affidavits issued in 'Squire McLane's court Saturday afternoon by William Humble charging Edward McGavern with carrying concealed weapons and needlessly mutilating and killing a dog, which belonged to Chas. Ipe, were withdrawn before warrants were made out and unless the mind of Mr. Ipe is chnged materially McGavern will be arrested and taken before Mayor Davidson to answer to two different charges.

Ipe, through his attorney, M. J. McGarry, has had two charges compiled and will prefer them before the mayor this afternoon. One of them is for assault and battery and the other for cruelty to animals. Since the particulars of the alleged dastardly deed of McGavern was made public he has been almost the one topic of conversation. Sentiment is strongly against him and many have been the words of censure spoken.

REDISTRICTING

A Problem In Which the Courts May Yet Have to Take a Hand.

At the meeting of the re-districting committee of council held late in the week, nothing was accomplished. The members of the committee will have difficulty in getting together upon the question, and it is just possible the common pleas court will be called upon to do the work.

There have been but two definite plans submitted in a complete form to the present, Dr. Marshall's and that of O. D. Nice. Of the two, the idea of Dr. Marshall is the more favored by the people at least, and they are parties who must be suited. It is probable Dr. Marshall's plan will be taken as a basis upon which to work.

Lisbon Potters' Social.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—The first annual social session of the Lisbon branch of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters will be held Wednesday evening in the K. G. E. hall. The program includes an entertainment at 7 o'clock, luncheon at 8 o'clock and dancing from 9 to 12.

FIRST PACKET SINCE AUGUST

Keystone State Reaches Here From Cincinnati With an Excellent Trip.

OTHER BOATS ARE RUNNING

Several Having Big Lists of Passengers For This Point—The River Likely to Remain Stationary For Some Days Now.

The first packet to reach this port from Cincinnati since the suspension of navigation last August was the Keystone State, of the Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet line. She touched the wharf last night at 8 o'clock with one of the best trips she ever carried, both as to freight and passengers. Most of her freight was for Pittsburg but 27 from her passenger list disembarked here. Captain Knox was in command, Dayton Randolph and William Anderson are her pilots, George Berridge, her stewar, Will Kimball, purser, and Eugene Morris, chief mate.

The Kanawha arrived from Charleston last evening at 7 o'clock with a big passenger and freight trip. Twenty-five of her passengers were for this point. She left here a consignment of 20,000 hoops.

The Ben Hur reached here at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon from down the river points with a big passenger list for this point. She was at the wharf at 4 o'clock this afternoon on her down trip.

The Keystone State is due at the wharf at 8 o'clock this evening bound for Cincinnati.

The three boats yesetrday all had a big passenger list for this point, the total aggregating 75.

Seven "movings" were received at the wharfboat yesterday from the different boats.

The rise in the Allegheny river will keep the river stationary for three or four days even if there is no more rain or snow. There was a drop of a few inches here since Saturday but it is stationary again today.

PROBATE COURT DIVORCES

Not Legal According to Judge Swing —This County Not Affected.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—A recent decision of Circuit Judge Swing, at Hamilton, decrees that persons who have secured divorces in probate court are not legally separated, holding that the law giving probate courts concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas courts is not constitutional.

Judge Hole says Columbiana county is not affected by this decision, the law never having been operated here.

I then started on my way and Wolfe, after beckoning for a partner, intercepted me before I got to Washington streets. Wolfe then without provocation struck me in the face."

Wolfe said: "I was standing on Sixth street talking to a friend when Kauffman came along. I thought he was a man that I know whose given name is Ed and I said: 'Hello, Ed! give me a chew.' Kauffman stopped and came up to me and said that I had insulted him. I told him that I did not think the simple asking for a chew was an insult. He got mad and called me 'one of the smart set' and several other names. I did not want any trouble and started up street. When I got near the Arcade restaurant I motioned for a friend to come over. Before he got to me Kauffman approached and when my friend did arrive Kauffman shoved him away, telling him not to mix up in the trouble. I did not know there was any trouble brewing and was surprised when Kauffman slapped me in the face. He struck me twice and then in self-defense I struck him."

Witnesses will be subpoenaed for both parties and the trial will be awaited with interest, inasmuch as both are well known in the city.

ROBBED BY GIRLS WHO CARESSED HIM

THE UNFORTUNATE EXPERIENCE OF A WELLSVILLE MAN.

Two Colored Damsels of This City Said to Have Relieved Him of $50.

While one woman was fondly caressing him, patting his cheeks in a loving manner and calling him sweet names, Peter Carsey, a laborer of Wellsville, was robbed of a pocketbook containing $50 in bills early Saturday evening by another woman, an accomplice of the first.

After being victimized by the clever pickpockets Carsey, between his loud outbursts of sobbing, told the story of his experience, disastrous from a pecuniary standpoint, to the police at central station. He is about 50 years of age and is employed at a mill in Wellsville, receiving $1.35 per day for his services, considering which fact he was certainly not able to lose the amount stolen. Saturday afternoon he came up from the neighboring city and after making a few purchases of necessaries thought he would make a friendly call on a friend at a saloon on Second street. To the friend he conversed pleasantly for a few minutes and in the meantime dank a glass or two of beer. He is not accustomed to drinking, and although he imbibed scantily his head was a little light, and when he started home by way of the rear exit he fell easy prey to the women who were in waiting for him. They are both colored and have bad reputations.

Warrants have been issued for their arrest, according to a statement made by Chief Thompson yesterday, and the entire police force have been detailed on a hunt for them. One of them is known as Mrs. Lee and the other as Mrs. Saunders. The latter was arrested several weeks ago by Officer McDermott and taken before the mayor as a suspicious person. She was accused of stealing $30 from a rather prominent man of the city. It is said that before she came to the city she had served several terms for similar offenses, and it was the intention of the mayor upon her arraignment to order her committed to the workhouse, but when she promised to correct her ways and live a respectable life the mayor had compassion and released her.

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

Arriving Passenger Could Not Believe That He Was in East Liverpool.

EVERYTHING WAS CHANGED

And the Surprised Man Said It All Reminded Him of a Fairy Tale — A Peculiar Man's Peculiar Experience in the Crockery City.

Wearing a plug hat, a necktie emblematic of the grand old stars and stripes, President Roosevelt's likeness over his heart and other conspicuous decorations, Frederick Vogel alighted at the depot yesterday morning from the west bound train. His makeup with peculiar actions at once made him the cynosure of all eyes.

For a moment he stood as if spellbound, gazing in an absent-minded way into space. Spectators were reminded of the cartoonist's picture of a rural man's first visit to New York city, looking with awe at some sky scraper. Officer McDermott was in the crowd and he at once decided that the man was laboring under the stress of insanity. Up to the stranger walked the officer and abruptly blurted:

"What are you looking for, old man?"

"What am I looking for? I am looking for Liverpool."

The officer was then more convinced that the man was demented when he continued.

"The conductor on that train told me that this was East Liverpool. I believed him because I thought he knew his business. And maybe he does, but there is one thing certain

HOMELESS GIRL HAS FALLEN ILL

Case of Scarlet Fever in a Broading House Develops Complications.

THE PATIENT'S REMOVAL

Is Desired By the Proprietress And the Township Trustees Have Been Consulted—Sad Plight of a Colored Domestic from Coraopolis.

Miss Genevieve Daniels, a young colored girl of Coraopolis, is in the city in a plight to be envied by none. She is seriously ill of scarlet fever and without friends or relatives here. She is 17 years of age and came to this city several weeks ago in search of employment. She was hired by a family as a domestic and was doing well and enjoying herself until the latter part of last week.

She began feeling indisposed on Friday and went to the home of Mrs. Hattie Minnis, Third street, and asked if she might lie down on a cot, stating that she felt sick. Mrs. Minnis allowed her to do so and when evening came she was so sick that she pleaded for further rest.

Mrs. Minnis through pity granted the request and yesterday a physician was called. He pronounced the girl sick with scarlet fever and ordered the house quarantined. Sanitary Policeman Burgess carried out the order and then objections on the part of Mrs. Minnis arose. She keeps boarders, and upon learning that the house was under quarantine, they decamped. She has no one but herself to depend upon for a livelihood, and in consideration of big rent, losing her boarders and other inconveniences she notified the health officer that she would not care for the sick girl and wanted her removed.

The township trustees were notified of the case and called upon Mrs. Minnis, assuring her that they would pay her for caring for the girl, but Mrs. Minnis feels that even if they do pay her that she will be greatly the loser and states that she will not accept the patient as hers. Some mutual agreement will likely be made this evening, but what it will be the officers are as yet not able to state.

MANUFACTURERS LEAVE FOR NATIONAL MEETING

Almost all of the manufacturing potters or their representatives, of this city, to attend the annual convention of the United States Manufacturing Potters' association, to be held in Washington, D. C., will leave here this evening on a special car attached to the regular 6:40 C. & P. train. They will go direct to the Capitol City without change, and are due to arrive at 8:30 tomorrow morning. The convention is to be held in the new Hotel Willard, at the corner of Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. It is one of the finest hosteiries in the world and all local men will be its guests. The firs session of the convention will be held tomorrow, but it is not likely that any matters of importance will come up before until Wednesday.

While the matter has not been publicly discussed it would not be surprising to see the presidency of the organization fall to an East Liverpool manufacturer this year. Indeed, the News Review is able to state, with a fair degree of certainty, that Joseph G. Lee, of the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company, will be named and supported for this high office by a large number of the delegates to the convention.

Following is the list of those who are to leave this evening:

W. H. Phillips and J. T. Smith, of Smith & Phillips company; J. R. Warner, of the National; S. C. Williams, Electrical Supply company; L. I. Aaron and W. E. Wells, Laughlin China company; Will Louthan, Louthan Supply company; Will Vodrey, Vodrey Bros.' Pottery company; H. P. Knoblock, Dresden Pottery company; H. A. Keffer, Sevres China company; George C. Thompson, C. C. Thompson Pottery company; H. N. Harker, Harker Pottery company; W. S. Brunt, William Brunt Pottery company; W. L. Smith, D. E. McNicol Pottery company; Colonel John N. Taylor, Knowles, Taylor & Knowles; W. L. Taylor, Taylor, Smith & Taylor company; George C. Murphy, Fred Lawrence and N. A. Frederick, East Liverpool Potteries company; George Burford, Burford Bros.' Pottery company; E. M. Knowles, E. M. Knowles company, Chester.

The following parties will accompany the local delegation: T. R. Bradshaw, Niles, O.; Joseph Mayer, Beaver Falls, Pa.; H. M. Preston, National Lead & Oil company, Pittsburg, Pa.; J. T. Croxall, East Liverpool; W. H. Deidrick, Dresden China company, Salineville; Harry Winteringer, of Steubenville Pottery company.

TWO CHARGES FILED

GROWING OUT OF THE SLAUGHTER OF A PET DOG.

Edward McGavern Accused of Assault And Battery And Cruelty to Animals.

The affidavits issued in 'Squire McLane's court Saturday afternoon by William Humble charging Edward McGavern with carrying concealed weapons and needlessly mutilating and killing a dog, which belonged to Chas. Ipe, were withdrawn before warrants were made out and unless the mind of Mr. Ipe is chnged materially McGavern will be arrested and taken before Mayor Davidson to answer to two different charges.

Ipe, through his attorney, M. J. McGarry, has had two charges compiled and will prefer them before the mayor this afternoon. One of them is for assault and battery and the other for cruelty to animals. Since the particulars of the alleged dastardly deed of McGavern was made public he has been almost the one topic of conversation. Sentiment is strongly against him and many have been the words of censure spoken.

REDISTRICTING

A Problem In Which the Courts May Yet Have to Take a Hand.

At the meeting of the re-districting committee of council held late in the week, nothing was accomplished. The members of the committee will have difficulty in getting together upon the question, and it is just possible the common pleas court will be called upon to do the work.

There have been but two definite plans submitted in a complete form to the present, Dr. Marshall's and that of O. D. Nice. Of the two, the idea of Dr. Marshall is the more favored by the people at least, and they are parties who must be suited. It is probable Dr. Marshall's plan will be taken as a basis upon which to work.

Lisbon, December 1. — (Special) — The first annual social session of the Lisbon branch of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters will be held Wednesday evening in the K. C. E. hall. The program includes an entertainment at 7 o'clock, luncheon at 8 o'clock and dancing from 9 to 12.

FIRST PACKET SINCE AUGUST

Keystone State Reaches Here From Cincinnati With an Excellent Trip.

OTHER BOATS ARE RUNNING

Several Having Big Lists of Passengers For This Point—The River Likely to Remain Stationary For Some Days Now.

The first packet to reach this port from Cincinnati since the suspension of navigation last August was the Keystone State, of the Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet line. She touched the wharf last night at 8 o'clock with one of the best trips she ever carried, both as to freight and passengers. Most of her freight was for Pittsburg but 27 from her passenger list disembarked here. Captain Knox was in command, Dayton Randolph and William Anderson are her pilots, George Berridge, her stewar, Will Kimball, purser, and Eugene Morris, chief mate.

The Kanawha arrived from Charleston last evening at 7 o'clock with a big passenger and freight trip. Twenty-five of her passengers were for this point. She left here a consignment of 20,000 hoops.

The Ben Hur reached here at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon from down the river points with a big passenger list for this point. She was at the wharf at 4 o'clock this afternoon on her down trip.

The Keystone State is due at the wharf at 8 o'clock this evening bound for Cincinnati.

The three boats yesetrday all had a big passenger list for this point, the total aggregating 75.

Seven "movings" were received at the wharfboat yesterday from the different boats.

The rise in the Allegheny river will keep the river stationary for three or four days even if there is no more rain or snow. There was a drop of a few inches here since Saturday but it is stationary again today.

PROBATE COURT DIVORCES

Not Legal According to Judge Swing —This County Not Affected.

Lisbon, December 1. — (Special) — A recent decision of Circuit Judge Swing, at Hamilton, decrees that persons who have secured divorces in probate court are not legally separated, holding that the law giving probate courts concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas courts is not constitutional.

Judge Hole says Columbiana county is not affected by this decision, the law never having been operated here.

The merger will take effect on January 1, at which time the property of the constituent companies will be taken possession of by the Wheeling Potteries company. The stock was not watered, the basis of consolidation being the intrinsic value of the respective properties. The new company is among the largest pottery corporations in the Uunited States. It is expected that quarterly dividends of seven or eight per cent. will be paid on the stock. The Riverside company will pay its customary quarterly dividend of two per cent. on January 1. There have been several important questions at issue during the past year which have a decided bearing upon pottery. These matters have been investigated and statistics gathered by special committees, which will file their reports with the association. The most important of these matters is tariff reform, which is now the subject of much contention. While it has not been officially announced, judging from the attitude of the manufacturers in the past, their ultimatum will be, regarding a revision of the duty on pottery imports, "to let the tariff alone." The recent exposures of the wholesale frauds which are being worked by large importers in getting crockery into this country without paying the full rate of duty will likely receive attention. For some time there has been a concerted movement on the part of the manufacturers to obtain cheaper freight rates. In all likelyhood measures will be taken to provide a remedy.

THE MINERVA POTTERY.

The proposed new pottery for Minerva is said to have been decided upon. A Canton dispatch says: Congressman R. W. Tayler, who is counsel for the pottery combine, met a delegation of Minerva citizens at the office of Tayler & Stewart, Friday morning, and while there are some minor details yet to be arranged, the matter was practically closed up. The citizens have agreed to make a loan of $75,000 to the pottery, which will be secured by a claim upon the plant, and the company has agreed to erect a pottery many times the value of the money loaned, which will employ not less than 300 men. The Minerva citizens who were in Canton were Edward S. Deford, A. J. Grunder, E. M. Jerome, John Starkey and James Stewart. They stated that all the money had been subscribed and that there is no doubt of the success of the scheme. The people of Minerva are very much interested, as the new plant means the restoring of the old-time activity to the town.

ANOTHER AKRON PLANT.

If present plans do not miscarry Akron will have another big factory added to its already long list. John Lamparter and E. R. Bathrick, the men who have been given a franchise for a universal heating plant, have purchased a tract of land in the southeastern part of the city on the proposed line of the Akron & Barberton belt line and will in all probability put up a very large clay manufacturing establishment. The land which was purchased is a part of what is known as the Bellows' farm and is situated near the Windsor Brick company's plant. It is 16 acres in area and is said to be all clay land. The clay is of an especially fine variety and it is said to be one of the finest and largest clay beds in the state. In regard to the size of the new plant and the kind of ware that would be manufactured Mr. Bathrick said that he would not now state whether the company would make sewer pipe or whether it would be pottery. He stated that at present all that could be said was that it would be a clay plant with the output in doubt. "We have the best kind of clay there to make anything in the line of clay products we want to, and as yet have not decided what it will be," was the way he referred to the matter.

JEWELED POTTERY.

The new jeweled pottery is odd and striking and reminds one of the gilded marbles of Italy and the modern bronzes which are so richly decorated and begemmed that little of the bronze is visible. We have had jeweled glass for many years, and lamp shades inset with sparkling mock gems have been active sellers for many seasons, but pottery inset with mock jewels is an innovation of note. This new idea is carried out in egg-shell china. This china is cut with various elaborate floral designs, the cuttings being filled in with mock rubies, topazes, rhinestones, emeralds and other gems. These jewels are not made of glass, but from a form of hard enamel which closely resembles the gems.

NEW SPECIALTIES.

The Laughlin No. 2 is introducing many new specialties, being after the holiday trade, and after it with a vengeance. There are 18 new specialties in the nature of fancy trays. A new jardiniere in six sizes is being placed on the pressing bench, a beautiful pedestal standing 3½ feet high and covered entirely with full blown roses of a heavy and beautiful pattern. The pedestal is very heavy, as it will require the services of at least two men to move it while it is being made. They are also making a new toilet set. The employes of this plant are working very steadily.

MORE CLAY DEPOSITS.

Valuable deposits of kaolin have been discovered in the vicinity of Glenwood, Wis. Recent interesting and costly experiments have been made, covering some 600 acres, and the owners are confident they have in their possession very valuable property. It has been secured by Chicago capitalists, including large sanitary ware manufacturers. The deposit comes in layers to a depth of 16 feet and is of fine quality with the exception that it contains small quantities of sand. The clay beds look like chalk and are in fact decomposed stone.

NEW LOCAL AT SEBRING.

A new local order of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters has been organized in Sebring, with a membership of about 150. The charter membership has been taken from local No. 44. This local, No. 44, donated the new branch $100, with which to begin its home. The new union is composed of printers and decorators, and will be known as No. 65, N. B. of O. P., of Sebring. It is the second local which has been organized in Sebring, whose membership has been taken from No. 44.

A NOVELTY JIGGER.

A new novelty jigger is being installed at the Brunt pottery, and when completed and ready for operation, will add materially to the capacity of the plant. No one has yet been hired to operate the new machine, but this will be attended to in time

AMONG THE POTTERS.

James Nolan has recently accepted a situation at the Dresden.

Thomas Hines has recently accepted a situation with the pottery plant at Crooksville.

Lawrence Welch, a handler at Burford's, has returned to work again after a week's serious illness.

John Ryan, of New Castle, was calling on his many friends among the operatives here over Sunday.

Thompson Wilson, of the decorating department at Thompson's, has resigned his position to accept a similar one at Burford's. He made the change today.

J. E. Sutcliffe, who was injured Thanksgiving night while alighting from a street car in the Diamond, has sufficiently recoverd to resume his work as sticker-up at the Sevres.

Samuel Thomas, a dishmaker for the French China company, Sebring, and well known among the operatives in this city, has accepted a situation at the Crooksville plant and went to that city one day last week to take up his work.

A FATAL HEAD-ON COLLISION.

Train Ran Into Open Switch and One Man Was Killed and Three Injured.

Youngstown, O., Dec. 1.—A Chicago and Baltimore express train on the Baltimore and Ohio railway, eastbound, ran into an open switch at Carbon, Pa., seven miles east of here, early yesterday morning, and collided head-on with a freight train. One man was killed and three others injured, one seriously.

The dead: Howard Bradley, Pittsburg, engineer passenger train.

The injured: Walter Miller, Pittsburg, express messenger, back injured; H. E. Townsend, Pittsburg, passenger train, ribs broken and head hurt, may die; Frank Miller, Chicago, fireman freight train, painfully scalded.

Both engines were wrecked and the express car telescoped. The passengers were considerably shaken up, but none was injured. The collision, it is alleged, was due to the failure of the freight brakeman to throw the switch on the main track after taking the siding.

The fate of the other four is unknown.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—If the number of people who visited the international live stock exposition yesterday may be taken as a criterion the attendance at this year's exposition will exceed that of last year by fully 100,000 persons. Notwithstanding that yesterday was Sunday, 20,000 people of Chicago and vicinity passed through the gates during the day and evening. The judging in the various departments began today.

GREAT BRITAIN WANTS THE GOLD

Endeavoring to Locate Bars Worth $650,000 Brought to Germany from South Africa.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—The British government is telegraphing to all the German ports making inquiries concerning Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which, it is supposed, have been brought to this country from South Africa within the past fortnight. The bars are destined for former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and, it is presumed, had been concealed in the Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located on the ground that she is entitled to all the assets of the Transvaal, because she has assumed responsibility for the debts of that country, including the bonds issued prior to the war.

General Botha's reply to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the late Boer government had no assets was strictly true as far as he knew, but since receiving Mr. Chamberlain's letter General Botha learned, according to seemingly trustworthy information here, that Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have in their possession $2,500,000. General Botha requested them to turn over this gold for the benefit of the Boer people, but Dr. Leyds refused averring that the money was to be used in upholding the Boer nationality in the future. General Botha has notified Dr. Leyds that unless the gold is given up legal proceedings will be brought against him.

ANALYSIS LEADS TO ARREST.

Parents Locked Up on Suspicion of Having Poisoned Children.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—After carrying on for a period of several weeks an investigation into the cause of the death of Annie Williams, aged 9 years, and her 3-year-old sister, Josephine, on Oct. 21 and 22, respectively, the police authorities have deemed it proper to detain at a police station the parents of the dead children. The father, John W. Williams, was taken into custody Saturday night and the wife was removed to a police station yesterday, along with her other three children. Annie and Josephine died of what the attending physician thinks was poison and notified the coroner. A chemical analysis made by direction of the coroner tended to prove the doctor's theory, and the arrest of the parents followed. It is said the dead children were insured, the elder one for $115 and the younger child for $30. Williams and his wife deny that they were the cause of the death of the two children.

Husband Charged With Murder.

Elwood, Ind., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Charles Dubois, a bride of but a few months, was found dead in her room late Saturday afternoon, with a bottle of carbolic acid lying at her side and a note, in which was stated her intention of taking her life. An autopsy was held Saturday night and no poison was found in her stomach. The side of her head was crushed, apparently by the blow of a blunt instrument. The coroner held an inquest yesterday, which led to the arrest of Charles Dubois, the husband of the dead woman, who is charged with murder.

The proposed new pottery for Minerva is said to have been decided upon. A Canton dispatch says: Congressman R. W. Tayler, who is counsel for the pottery combine, met a delegation of Minerva citizens at the office of Tayler & Stewart, Friday morning, and while there are some minor details yet to be arranged, the matter was practically closed up. The citizens have agreed to make a loan of $75,000 to the pottery, which will be secured by a claim upon the plant, and the company has agreed to erect a pottery many times the value of the money loaned, which will employ not less than 300 men. The Minerva citizens who were in Canton were Edward S. Deford, A. J. Grunder, E. M. Jerome, John Starkey and James Stewart. They stated that all the money had been subscribed and that there is no doubt of the success of the scheme The people of Minerva are very much interested, as the new plant means the restoring of the old-time activity to the town.

ANOTHER AKRON PLANT.

If present plans do not miscarry Akron will have another big factory added to its already long list. John Lamparter and E. R. Bathrick, the men who have been given a franchise for a universal heating plant, have purchased a tract of land in the southeastern part of the city on the proposed line of the Akron & Barberton belt line and will in all probability put up a very large clay manufacturing establishment. The land which was purchased is a part of what is known as the Bellows' farm and is situated near the Windsor Brick company's plant. It is 16 acres in area and is said to be all clay land. The clay is of an especially fine variety and it is said to be one of the finest and largest clay beds in the state. In regard to the size of the new plant and the kind of ware that would be manufactured Mr. Bathrick said that he would not now state whether the company would make sewer pipe or whether it would be pottery. He stated that at present all that could be said was that it would be a clay plant with the output in doubt. "We have the best kind of clay there to make anything in the line of clay products we want to, and as yet have not decided what it will be," was the way he referred to the matter.

JEWELED POTTERY.

The new jeweled pottery is odd and striking and reminds one of the gilded marbles of Italy and the modern bronzes which are so richly decorated and begemmed that little of the bronze is visible. We have had jeweled glass for many years, and lamp shades inset with sparkling mock gems have been active sellers for many seasons, but pottery inset with mock jewels is an innovation of note. This new idea is carried out in egg-shell china. This china is cut with various elaborate floral designs, the cuttings being filled in with mock rubies, topazes, rhinestones, emeralds and other gems. These jewels are not made of glass, but from a form of hard enamel which closely resembles the gems.

NEW SPECIALTIES.

The Laughlin No. 2 is introducing many new specialties, being after the holiday trade, and after it with a vengeance. There are 18 new specialties in the nature of fancy trays. A new jardiniere in six sizes is being placed on the pressing bench, a beautiful pedestal standing 3½ feet high and covered entirely with full blown roses of a heavy and beautiful pattern. The pedestal is very heavy, as it will require the services of at least two men to move it while it is being made. They are also making a new toilet set. The employes of this plant are working very steadily.

MORE CLAY DEPOSITS.

Valuable deposits of kaolin have been discovered in the vicinity of Glenwood, Wis. Recent interesting and costly experiments have been made, covering some 600 acres, and the owners are confident they have in their possession very valuable property. It has been secured by Chicago capitalists, including large sanitary ware manufacturers. The deposit comes in layers to a depth of 16 feet and is of fine quality with the exception that it contains small quantities of sand. The clay beds look like chalk and are in fact decomposed stone.

NEW LOCAL AT SEBRING.

A new local order of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters has been organized in Sebring, with a membership of about 150. The charter membership has been taken from local No. 44. This local, No. 44, donated the new branch $100, with which to begin its home. The new union is composed of printers and decorators, and will be known as No. 65, N. B. of O. P., of Sebring. It is the second local which has been organized in Sebring, whose membership has been taken from No. 44.

A NOVELTY JIGGER.

A new novelty jigger is being installed at the Brunt pottery, and when completed and ready for operation, will add materially to the capacity of the plant. No one has yet been hired to operate the new machine, but this will be attended to in time

AMONG THE POTTERS.

James Nolan has recently accepted a situation at the Dresden.

Thomas Hines has recently accepted a situation with the pottery plant at Crooksville.

Lawrence Welch, a handler at Burford's, has returned to work again after a week's serious illness.

John Ryan, of New Castle, was calling on his many friends among the operatives here over Sunday.

Thompson Wilson, of the decorating department at Thompson's, has resigned his position to accept a similar one at Burford's. He made the change today.

J. E. Sutcliffe, who was injured Thanksgiving night while alighting from a street car in the Diamond, has sufficiently recoverd to resume his work as sticker-up at the Sevres.

Samuel Thomas, a dishmaker for the French China company, Sebring, and well known among the operatives in this city, has accepted a situation at the Crooksville plant and went to that city one day last week to take up his work.

A FATAL HEAD-ON COLLISION.

Train Ran Into Open Switch and One Man Was Killed and Three Injured.

Youngstown, O., Dec. 1.—A Chicago and Baltimore express train on the Baltimore and Ohio railway, eastbound, ran into an open switch at Carbon, Pa., seven miles east of here, early yesterday morning, and collided head-on with a freight train. One man was killed and three others injured, one seriously.

The dead: Howard Bradley, Pittsburg, engineer passenger train.

The injured: Walter Miller, Pittsburg, express messenger, back injured; H. E. Townsend, Pittsburg, passenger train, ribs broken and head hurt, may die; Frank Miller, Chicago, fireman freight train, painfully scalded.

Both engines were wrecked and the express car telescoped. The passengers were considerably shaken up, but none was injured. The collision, it is alleged, was due to the failure of the freight brakeman to throw the switch on the main track after taking the siding.

Manila, Dec. 1.—Several columns of constabulary in the Zambales province had been chasing the Ladrones with the assistance of friendly natives. Five of the friendlies straggled from the column and were captured by Ladrones, who amputated the tongue and gouged out the eyes of one friendly and then sent him back to the constabulary. The fate of the other four is unknown.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—If the number of people who visited the international live stock exposition yesterday may be taken as a criterion the attendance at this year's exposition will exceed that of last year by fully 100,000 persons. Notwithstanding that yesterday was Sunday, 20,000 people of Chicago and vicinity passed through the gates during the day and evening. The judging in the various departments began today.

GREAT BRITAIN WANTS THE GOLD

Endeavoring to Locate Bars Worth $650,000 Brought to Germany from South Africa.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—The British government is telegraphing to all the German ports making inquiries concerning Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which, it is supposed, have been brought to this country from South Africa within the past fortnight. The bars are destined for former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and, it is presumed, had been concealed in the Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located on the ground that she is entitled to all the assets of the Transvaal, because she has assumed responsibility for the debts of that country, including the bonds issued prior to the war.

General Botha's reply to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the late Boer government had no assets was strictly true as far as he knew, but since receiving Mr. Chamberlain's letter General Botha learned, according to seemingly trustworthy information here, that Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have in their possession $2,500,000. General Botha requested them to turn over this gold for the benefit of the Boer people, but Dr. Leyds refused, averring that the money was to be used in upholding the Boer nationality in the future. General Botha has notified Dr. Leyds that unless the gold is given up legal proceedings will be brought against him.

ANALYSIS LEADS TO ARREST.

Parents Locked Up on Suspicion of Having Poisoned Children.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—After carrying on for a period of several weeks an investigation into the cause of the death of Annie Williams, aged 9 years, and her 3-year-old sister, Josephine, on Oct. 21 and 22, respectively, the police authorities have deemed it proper to detain at a police station the parents of the dead children. The father, John W. Williams, was taken into custody Saturday night and the wife was removed to a police station yesterday, along with her other three children. Annie and Josephine died of what the attending physician thinks was poison and notified the coroner. A chemical analysis made by direction of the coroner tended to prove the doctor's theory, and the arrest of the parents followed. It is said the dead children were insured, the elder one for $115 and the younger child for $30. Williams and his wife deny that they were the cause of the death of the two children.

Husband Charged With Murder.

Elwood, Ind., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Charles Dubois, a bride of but a few months, was found dead in her room late Saturday afternoon, with a bottle of carbolic acid lying at her side and a note, in which was stated her intention of taking her life. An autopsy was held Saturday night and no poison was found in her stomach. The side of her head was crushed, apparently by the blow of a blunt instrument. The coroner held an inquest yesterday, which led to the arrest of Charles Dubois, the husband of the dead woman, who is charged with murder.

DEFIED HIGHWAYMEN

Lisbon Football Player Compelled a Footpad to Stand Back.

Lisbon, December 1.— (Special) — Frank Steele, one of the Lisbon football players, was the intended victim of a hold-up the other night, but upon the presentation of two revolvers by him, the highwayman gave up his enterprise. The suspicious actions of three men, who have been loitering at night in the eastern part of the town, between the fair grounds and the more thickly settled portion, have attracted attention recently.

Mr. Steele, having occasion to pass that way, and noticing the movements of the fellows, carried two revolvers with him on Friday night. He was coming toward home about midnight, when, at a lonely place on Spruce street, he met a man whom he recognized as one of the three, who stepped out of a dark alley and said: "Stop! I want you." In an instant he was looking into the muzzles of Steele's revolvers and obliged with alacrity to stand aside. Steele thinks he has seen the fellow about town but could not positively identify him.

The story which abounds in thrilling situations and an abundance of wholesome comedy, embraces every element so necessary to success.

Edward "Ensemble" Rice is said to have made the triumph of his career in the selection of a chorus for the "Show Girl," "dainty, delicious and delirium provoking." Surely there must be a great treat in store for theatergoers. Don't miss it.

EAST END

SUPPLEE A CANDIDATE

The Formal Announcement of His Mayoralty Aspirations Made Publis This Morning.

The formal announcement of the candidacy of Walter C. Supplee for the Republican mayoralty nomination was made by him this morning. It will come as a big surprise to the major portion of the East End people, but his intimate friends, so they claim, have known of his intention for several weeks. The political situation in the East End is too chaotic and the announcement has been out too short a time to state definitely today how it will be received.

It has been known for some time that some concerted action had been determined up by the politicians and people of the East End on account of the Pennsylvania avenue assessments and the redistricting of the city, but it cannot be stated that Mr. Supplee's candidacy is a part of it. Personally Mr. Supplee is very popular. His friends are numbered by the hundred and are from all parts of the city. For a number of years he was a city policeman and won the reputation of being one of the very best ever on the force. He resigned to become a deputy sheriff under Sheriff Charley Gill and again he made an enviable record, both in the field and in the office. He has been eminently successful in all his undertakings.

NO GAS IN KLONDIKE

Break in Main Near Oakland Switch Shut off the Several for Several Hours.

The many people who live east of the Oakland switch and who depend upon the gas furnished by the Fort Pitt Light company for light and heat suffered very serious inconvenience and annoyance yesterday. A few days ago workmen from the water works in excavating for the extension of the water mains undermined the gas main near the Oakland switch. Evidently the filling-in was not properly accomplished for when the dirt settled the gas main was disturbed and a break followed. The break was soon discovered and repaired.

The gas was shut off all along the line yesterday morning while some repairs were being made, but this caused only a slight inconvenience as the patrons had been warned in advance. Today the supply is stronger than for some time.

The membership of Ben Hur is increasing steadily in the East End and the order is growing in popularity every day.

FINEST BUILDINGS ANY COLLEGE HAS

WOOSTER UNIVERSITY IS SPLENDIDLY BUILT UP IN A YEAR.

Anniversary of the Great Fire to Be Celebrated By Dedication of New Halls.

Wooster, December 1.—The twelve months which end December 11, 1902, will have been a most remarkable year in the history of the university of Wooster. On December 11, 1901, the institution was practically wiped out of existence by a fire, which destroyed the main structure with all the equipment, causing a loss of over $800,000, with but $60,000 insurance. On December 11, 1902, five magnificent structures, erected to take the place of the ones destroyed, are to be dedicated with imposing ceremonies.

It is ascertained that no institution of learning in the world has recovered so quickly from what threatened to put an end to its existence. Pittsburgers did much to bring this about. The princely gift of $100,000 by Andrew Carnegie was the stimulant that caused over $400,000 to be rolled into the treasury of the university in a little more than two months.

The structures are pronounced the very finest college buildings in the world and are equipped in the most modern style. The program to be carried out is as follows:

University Memorial chapel, 10:30 a. m., President Louis Edward Holden presiding—Organ prelude, hallelujah chorus, invocation by Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., LL. D.; address by Rev. James D. Moffat, D. D., LL. D., president of Washington and Jefferson college, Washington, Pa.; address by Prof. Charles F. Mabery, Ph. D., professor of chemistry in Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland; address by Rev. Simon J. McPherson, D. D., LL. D., president of Lawrencevine academy, Lawrenceville, Md.; solo, Miss Frances A. Glenn; presentation of the new building to the synod of Ohio by Rev. S. S. Palmer, D. D., president of the board of trustees of the new university; acceptance of the new building by Rev. Robert J. Thompson, D. D., moderator of the synod of Ohio, Lima; benediction by Rev. William McKibbin, D. D., Cincinnati.

Afternoon exercises, Kauke hall at 3 p. m.—Prayer of dedication at Kauke hall by Rev. Oscar A. Hills, D. D., Wooster; prayer of dedication at Severance hall by Rev. James A. Worden, D. D., LL. D., Philadelphia; prayer of delication at Scovel hall by Rev. Sylvester F. Scovel, Wooster; prayer of dedication at Taylor hall by Rev. A. E. Taylor, D. D., LL. D., Columbus; benediction.

COUNTY AND NEIGHBORHOOD

Sebring complains of a scarcity of houses.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wang, of North Georgetown, fell down a flight of stairs, broke an arm and was otherwise injured.

Thomas M. Reed, a prominent old resident, son of ex-County Commissioner James Reed, died near Bloomfield, Jefferson county, aged 65

The barn of Robert Lodon, whe reusides near Newgarden, was entirely destroyed by fire. The loss is $2,500, and is partly covered by insurance.

This fall Charles Wernet, of Hanover township, harvested 50 acres of wheat, which turned out 1,352 bushels, an average of 26½ bushels to the acre.

Ernest Sshmid, of Salem, who has served in the United States army, has been arrested at Alliance, charged with passing a counterfeit silver dollar.

The city building of Martin's Ferry, is in the hands of the St. Clairsville authorities to insure payment of judgment against the town for $400, granted recently in the Belmont county courts to Mrs. Caroline Meyers.

Another "English fortune" of several millions has vanished. The accountant of the bank of England states that the "Whitacre fortune," which Columbiana county people are after, amounts to less than 100 pounds.

Mrs. Jeannette R. Hunter is dead at Akron and another woman whose name is unknown is at the point of death as the result of morphine poison. It is believed the visitor gave Mrs. Hunter an overdose and becoming alarmed resolved to die herself.

Orders from headquarters have stopped improvements at the Salem plant of the American Steel & Wire company. The cause is the alleged hostility of the Salem city government. An engineer at the mill was arrested for running without a license.

EAST END

SUPPLEE A CANDIDATE

The Formal Announcement of His Mayoralty Aspirations Made Publis This Morning.

The formal announcement of the candidacy of Walter C. Supplee for the Republican mayoralty nomination was made by him this morning. It will come as a big surprise to the major portion of the East End people, but his intimate friends, so they claim, have known of his intention for several weeks. The political situation in the East End is too chaotic and the announcement has been out too short a time to state definitely today how it will be received.

It has been known for some time that some concerted action had been determined up by the politicians and people of the East End on account of the Pennsylvania avenue assessments and the redistricting of the city, but it cannot be stated that Mr. Supplee's candidacy is a part of it. Personally Mr. Supplee is very popular. His friends are numbered by the hundred and are from all parts of the city. For a number of years he was a city policeman and won the reputation of being one of the very best ever on the force. He resigned to become a deputy sheriff under Sheriff Charley Gill and again he made an enviable record, both in the field and in the office. He has been eminently successful in all his undertakings.

NO GAS IN KLONDIKE

Break in Main Near Oakland Switch Shut off the Several for Several Hours.

The many people who live east of the Oakland switch and who depend upon the gas furnished by the Fort Pitt Light company for light and heat suffered very serious inconvenience and annoyance yesterday. A few days ago workmen from the water works in excavating for the extension of the water mains undermined the gas main near the Oakland switch. Evidently the filling-in was not properly accomplished for when the dirt settled the gas main was disturbed and a break followed. The break was soon discovered and repaired.

The gas was shut off all along the line yesterday morning while some repairs were being made, but this caused only a slight inconvenience as the patrons had been warned in advance. Today the supply is stronger than for some time.

Ben Hur Meets Tonight.

The meeting of the order of Ben Hur that is to be take place this evening in the P. H. C. hall promises to be of unusual interest and importance. Fifteen persons have made application for initiation and they will be taken in, unless they are kept away by sickness or other causes. The membership of Ben Hur is increasing steadily in the East End and the order is growing in popularity every day.

Reception to Church Members.

FINEST BUILDINGS ANY COLLEGE HAS

WOOSTER UNIVERSITY IS SPLENDIDLY BUILT UP IN A YEAR.

Anniversary of the Great Fire to Be Celebrated By Dedication of New Halls.

Wooster, December 1.—The twelve months which end December 11, 1902, will have been a most remarkable year in the history of the university of Wooster. On December 11, 1901, the institution was practically wiped out of existence by a fire, which destroyed the main structure with all the equipment, causing a loss of over $800,000, with but $60,000 insurance. On December 11, 1902, five magnificent structures, erected to take the place of the ones destroyed, are to be dedicated with imposing ceremonies.

It is ascertained that no institution of learning in the world has recovered so quickly from what threatened to put an end to its existence. Pittsburgers did much to bring this about. The princely gift of $100,000 by Andrew Carnegie was the stimulant that caused over $400,000 to be rolled into the treasury of the university in a little more than two months.

The structures are pronounced the very finest college buildings in the world and are equipped in the most modern style. The program to be carried out is as follows:

University Memorial chapel, 10:30 a. m., President Louis Edward Holden presiding—Organ prelude, hallelujah chorus, invocation by Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., LL. D.; address by Rev. James D. Moffat, D. D., LL. D., president of Washington and Jefferson college, Washington, Pa.; address by Prof. Charles F. Mabery, Ph. D., professor of chemistry in Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland; address by Rev. Simon J. McPherson, D. D., LL. D., president of Lawrenceville academy, Lawrenceville, Md.; solo, Miss Frances A. Glenn; presentation of the new building to the synod of Ohio by Rev. S. S. Palmer, D. D., president of the board of trustees of the new university; acceptance of the new building by Rev. Robert J. Thompson, D. D., moderator of the synod of Ohio, Lima; benediction by Rev. William McKibbin, D. D., Cincinnati.

Afternoon exercises, Kauke hall at 3 p. m.—Prayer of dedication at Kauke hall by Rev. Oscar A. Hills, D. D., Wooster; prayer of dedication at Severance hall by Rev. James A. Worden, D. D., LL. D., Philadelphia; prayer of delication at Scovel hall by Rev. Sylvester F. Scovel, Wooster; prayer of dedication at Taylor hall by Rev. A. E. Taylor, D. D., LL. D., Columbus; benediction.

COUNTY AND NEIGHBORHOOD

Sebring complains of a scarcity of houses.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wang, of North Georgetown, fell down a flight of stairs, broke an arm and was otherwise injured.

Thomas M. Reed, a prominent old resident, son of ex-County Commissioner James Reed, died near Bloomfield, Jefferson county, aged 65

The barn of Robert Lodon, whe resides near Newgarden, was entirely destroyed by fire. The loss is $2,500, and is partly covered by insurance.

This fall Charles Wernet, of Hanover township, harvested 50 acres of wheat, which turned out 1,352 bushels, an average of 26½ bushels to the acre.

Ernest Sshmid, of Salem, who has served in the United States army, has been arrested at Alliance, charged with passing a counterfeit silver dollar.

The city building of Martin's Ferry, is in the hands of the St. Clairsville authorities to insure payment of judgment against the town for $400, granted recently in the Belmont county courts to Mrs. Caroline Meyers.

Another "English fortune" of several millions has vanished. The accountant of the bank of England states that the "Whitacre fortune," which Columbiana county people are after, amounts to less than 100 pounds.

Mrs. Jeannette R. Hunter is dead at Akron and another woman whose name is unknown is at the point of death as the result of morphine poison. It is believed the visitor gave Mrs. Hunter an overdose and becoming alarmed resolved to die herself.

Orders from headquarters have stopped improvements at the Salem plant of the American Steel & Wire company. The cause is the alleged hostility of the Salem city government. An engineer at the mill was arrested for running without a license.

TWELVE PAGES.

Drunkenness is decreasing in the United States, according to the testimony of expert observers. The consumption of malt, spiritous and vinous liquors is still enormous, and the social glass is tolerated in many circles, but the vice of drunkenness is universally frowned upon. Business requirements, education, home influence, physical and moral culture, are all directed toward its eradication. Business men will not entrust their interests to others who have not clear brains and steady hands. Sobriety and success go together. The men who rise in politics, in the business world, in professional life and those who obtain greatest prominence in athletic circles are the men who do not drink. The temperance reformers are learning that the surest way to banish the evil is to educate the young as to the dire effects of drunkenness. The counsel of a loving and wise parent is the most effective temperance lecture. The schools are doing their part nobly, and the world is learning and growing better.

This is the season when the shrewd advertiser places his holiday announcements. There are hundreds of people who like to do their buying before the rush begins, while the goods are new and fresh and unhandled by shoppers. Clerks and customers both have more time and satisfactory purchases are more easily made. No part of a newspaper is scanned with more interest at this season than the descriptions given by the merchants of what they have to sell. He who would reap a harvest from advertising should begin planting his crop early.

The commissioner's latest estimate for an isthmian canal is $184,000,000, for the Panama route and $189,000,000 for the Nicaragua route. Colombia has proved to be a greedy haggler and it may become necessary to try what can be done with Nivaragua. The difference in estimated cost is not serious.

Venezuela is in danger of getting into serious trouble through her quarrelsome habits. As long as her people fought among themselves there was no protest. But when they begin to bulldoze foreigners they are likely to learn that other nations have law if they have none.

According to Mr. Bryan, "The Democratic party does not need leaders so much as it needs voters." This is a profound truth. But where is it to get them as long as popular education flourishes and grows stronger?

President Roosevelt is a true civil service reformer, and he also believes in living up to the fourteenth amendment. In his appointments neither race nor color counts; only merit.

Congress will not meddle with the tariff question at the present session. The people rule, and the people have commanded congress to "let well enough alone."

Mrs. Bertha Krupp is henceforth to be the official gunmaker of Prussia.

Scrofula

Few are entirely free from it.

It may develop so slowly as to cause little if any disturbance during the whole period of childhood.

It may then produce irregularity of the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia, catarrh, and marked tendency to consumption before manifesting itself in much cutaneous eruption or glandular swelling.

It is best to be sure that you are quite free from it, and for its complete eradication you can rely on

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The best of all medicines for all humors.

She will be in a position to help enforce the laws, though denied any part in making them.

Andrew Carnegie would doubtless be willing to give several millions to get back his youthful health. But such a commodity is not purchaseable.

Oklahoma, with 600,000 population, needs a state government and ought to have it. The fact will doubtless be impressed upon congress.

The Mexican dollar, containing more silver than ours, is now down to 36½ cents. Where would our dollar be if it had been Bryanized?

A silver dollar is worth only 35 cents, and the Democratic party, which championed it, looks as if it were worth five cents less.

Out west they have taken to wearing sheetiron armor in football matches. This is reforming the sport backwards.

There is always something to be thankful for. Though congress is in session the state legislature is not.

The man who invented the modern flat is dead, but the evils that men do live after them.

Winter is well begun, but the old rule of half finished does not apply.

Ohio is 100 years old, but you'd never guess it from her looks.

Use These Spices.

If you have a recipe calling for a certain spice, it means that the best is needed to produce the desired flavor. The writer of the recipe you use, had in mind only perfect full flavored spices; if you use the ordinary ones, results must be unsatisfactory. We are agents for Gilpin, Langdon & Co's High Grade Spices—the very choicest the world produces—and that is the kind you should have. They cost a trifle more because they are all spice, but they go much farther and for that reason alone they are more economical than inferior grades, not to speak of their delicious flavor and wholesomeness.

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

if this is Liverpool a great transformation has taken place since I was last here."

The officer was prone to believe that he had made a mistake.

"This is my first visit here since '61," Mr. Vogel further stated. "I won't attempt to tell you how much different the city is from what it was way back in those years. In fact, it would be impossible for me to tell you all. I will make myself believe that it is East Liverpool, but it seems like a fairy story. You see, I came here to meet one of my boyhood playmates whom I have not seen since I left. The name is Mrs. Oella Reitz."

Officer McDermott then offered his services in assisting the man to find the friend and in a few minutes the two who had been apart and heard nothing of each other during the long span of years spent the remainder of the day most delightfully in bringing back to memory reminiscences of their youthful days. Use These Spices.

If you have a recipe calling for a certain spice, it means that the best is needed to produce the desired flavor. The writer of the recipe you use, had in mind only perfect full flavored spices; if you use the ordinary ones, results must be unsatisfactory. We are agents for Gilpin, Langdon & Co's High Grade Spices—the very choicest the world produces—and that is the kind you should have. They cost a trifle more because they are all spice, but they go much farther and for that reason alone they are more economical than inferior grades, not to speak of their delicious flavor and wholesomeness.

The officer was prone to believe that he had made a mistake.

"This is my first visit here since '61," Mr. Vogel further stated. "I won't attempt to tell you how much different the city is from what it was way back in those years. In fact, it would be impossible for me to tell you all. I will make myself believe that it is East Liverpool, but it seems like a fairy story. You see, I came here to meet one of my boyhood playmates whom I have not seen since I left. The name is Mrs. Oella Reitz."

Officer McDermott then offered his services in assisting the man to find the friend and in a few minutes the two who had been apart and heard nothing of each other during the long span of years spent the remainder of the day most delightfully in bringing back to memory reminiscences of their youthful days. STRUCK BY STREET CAR

Team of Valuable Work Horses Killed In Chester On Saturday.

Another street car accident occurred Saturday evening at about 6 o'clock. A team of horses owned by Arner & Bowers, the Chester liverymen, were so badly injured that they had to be shot an hour later. A Rock Springs car in charge of Motorman Reed and Conductor Azdell struck the horses near the corner of Third street and Carolina avenue. The horses were dragged some distance before the car came to a standstill, as the track was wet at the time. They were terribly bruised and mangled and their suffering was pitiful.

Motorman Reed said he saw nothing until he was upon them. Mr. Arner, who had been working the team, had unhitched them from the wagon and started home towards the barn. James Keevan, who was with Arner, started after them but did not reach them in time to get them off the tracks before the car hit them. The loss will be quite severe as the team was one of the best in the stables.

Some difference of opinion exists as to where the blame rests. Some think there is some blame attached on both sides. The team is said to be valued at $250. Arner & Bowers, it is said, will ask damages.

FIRST STREET BRIDGE

Agreement Reached Between Members of Council And Railroad Officials.

The officials of the Panhandle railroad came to Chester Saturday by special car to view the First street crossing. With the party was Supt. R. E. Carey, of the Pittsburg division of the Panhandle, and Engineer A. L. Morgan, of maintenance of way. The party alighted at First street, where the council awaited them.

They immediately took measurements and made plans of the proposed bridge. Council agreed that if the railroad company would put in a new steel bridge they would make the approaches. The members will report to council in time for final action upon it at their next regular meeting next Thursday evening.

The Coal Under the River.

Seventy thousand acres of coal land worth from $10 to $100 per acre, is involved in a question of title. The question is who owns the bed of the Ohio river, the United States, the state or the property owners abutting on the river. It is an old question, but is arose anew in the sale of coal lands a few days ago Unless the legislature enacts some law upon the subject it will probably be carried to the supreme court of the United States. The river is underlaid with coal, which can be mined by shafting.

STRUCK BY STREET CAR

Team of Valuable Work Horses Killed In Chester On Saturday.

Another street car accident occurred Saturday evening at about 6 o'clock. A team of horses owned by Arner & Bowers, the Chester liverymen, were so badly injured that they had to be shot an hour later. A Rock Springs car in charge of Motorman Reed and Conductor Azdell struck the horses near the corner of Third street and Carolina avenue. The horses were dragged some distance before the car came to a standstill, as the track was wet at the time. They were terribly bruised and mangled and their suffering was pitiful.

Motorman Reed said he saw nothing until he was upon them. Mr. Arner, who had been working the team, had unhitched them from the wagon and started home towards the barn. James Keevan, who was with Arner, started after them but did not reach them in time to get them off the tracks before the car hit them. The loss will be quite severe as the team was one of the best in the stables.

Some difference of opinion exists as to where the blame rests. Some think there is some blame attached on both sides. The team is said to be valued at $250. Arner & Bowers, it is said, will ask damages.

FIRST STREET BRIDGE

Agreement Reached Between Members of Council And Railroad Officials.

The officials of the Panhandle railroad came to Chester Saturday by special car to view the First street crossing. With the party was Supt. R. E. Carey, of the Pittsburg division of the Panhandle, and Engineer A. L. Morgan, of maintenance of way. The party alighted at First street, where the council awaited them.

They immediately took measurements and made plans of the proposed bridge. Council agreed that if the railroad company would put in a new steel bridge they would make the approaches. The members will report to council in time for final action upon it at their next regular meeting next Thursday evening.

The Coal Under the River.

Seventy thousand acres of coal land worth from $10 to $100 per acre, is involved in a question of title. The question is who owns the bed of the Ohio river, the United States, the state or the property owners abutting on the river. It is an old question, but is arose anew in the sale of coal lands a few days ago. Unless the legislature enacts some law upon the subject it will probably be carried to the supreme court of the United States. The river is underlaid with coal, which can be mined by shafting.

Church Organization.

The Presbyterians of Chester, who effected a temporary organization some time ago, will meet at the central school building tomorrow evening for the purpose of permanently organizing and taking other actions towards establishing and building a church. Rev. J. R. Hosick, of Hookstown, and Rev. D. A. Greene, of Fairview, will be present to assist in the work.

House Burned.

It was reported today that a house occupied by the family of Mrs. Rachel Cullen, had been destroyed by fire at New Cumberland Saturday night. The loss is estimated at $1,000. Children set fire to it while trying to pour oil into lighted lamp. No one was injured, but the loss falls very heavily on the woman, all of whose possessions were destroyed.

SECULAR THEMES ABLY DISCUSSED

Rev. C. G. Jordan Discourses on Trusts and Various Other Matters.

ARBITRATION SENTIMENT

In Dealing With Strikes Something to Be Devoutly Thankful for—Signs of the Times As Related to Progress. Other Excellent Sermons.

It is seldom that a church congregation is treated to a talk as practical and so full of everyday truths as that delivered by Rev. C. G. Jordan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning. The discourse was replete with telling hits, and showed in every topic touched upon the results of careful study and a thorough knowledge of state and government affairs.

The sermon was out of the ordinary, in that it treated on subjects and took up matters seldom touched upon by pulpit orators on Sunday. The pastor made no apology for his choice of theme, saying he was vitally interested and profoundly impressed by the importance of the several matters in mind and felt that it was altogether proper they should be aired.

Rev. Mr. Jordan read for his text the first verse of the 107th Psalm: "O, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever." In part the speaker said:

"When there is nothing transpires to excite or produce activity, affairs remains at a standstill. It is well for us to consider the question of whether there has been progress made or activity noted in the affairs of church and state during the past year for which we should be thankful. The moral enthusiasm has been manifest, and to this is due much of the success and forward move of the nation. In national affairs the idea of arbitration has gained a foothold, and if in no other way the year has brought forth transactions in which the government's highest officials have figured."

The growth of the trust was reviewed. Not many years ago a small amount of capital would suffice to establish a factory, the revenue from which would make an independent fortune for its owner in time. It was not long until other capital was called in and interests of the same character were combined so that establishment took on the proportions called trusts. The inventive genius of certain workmen had been employed and appliances installed which enabled one man to perform the work formerly requiring the time of three. In many ways these combinations of capital and industrial interests had been a benefit to the country, but there have been instances of where men had been robbed of the fruits of years of toil by having patents and improvements in mechanical appliances stolen or appropriated by his firm without his consent.

In this regard the trusts have been very wrong. However, the men who produced the great wealth saw the advantages of combination and they too organized for the common good. Both had a right to do this, in the opinion of the speaker, and the object was at once apparent. The farmer had combined interests in order that a solid front might be presented in the matter of competition, while the workmen organized that a just recompense might be asked for their services. Many reasons were cited showing that each had a perfect right to combine for their mutual good. The workmen had by concerted action secured shorter hours and better conditions, enabling himself and his employer to find more time for worship and other diversions calculated to benefit him morally and socially. The concessions, in the opinion of the speaker, had been of great and lasting benefit to both sides. The formation of these combinations had their bad effects, and in not a few cases unjust demands had been made which resulted disastrously to both employer and employe.

At this point the history of the late coal strike was recalled, or a comparison made in a similar manner. It was shown conclusively that this transaction had been disastrous, not only to the best interests of the parties directly involved, but to the whole people. Then the president of these United States interposed and asked why should these opposing forces not come together and reason this thing out. The suggestion was acted upon, and instead of prolonging a struggle that could not but end disastrously to both, besides causing a stagnation of every line of industry, the dispute had been submitted to a board of honest and conscientious men for settlement.

Rev. Mr. Jordan thanked God that the idea of arbitration had been adopted; that the time had come when differences could be adjusted in other ways than bloody battles and prolonged strikes. He hoped that the time would soon come when the navy yards would be blotted out and cannons would not be mounted on battle fields to shoot down our fellow beings. The time was fast approaching when men would meet at the high tribunal of reason and disputed questions would be submitted to arbitration.

Reference was made to one of the great curses of the land—that of intemperance, and considerable time was devoted to the subject. The pastor asserted that nineteen-twentieths of the convictions in our county and city courts could be traced to this cause. The Beal local option law recently enacted was touched upon, and the framers of that measure commended in no uncertain terms. It would if properly applied do much good. If in no other way the law would put a stigma upon the traffic and brand it as a curse.

In looking over the election returns the speaker noticed that the Prohibition vote had increased and was steadily gaining. He thanked God that the sentiment in favor of temperance and sobriety was growing. "Through the operation of this most beneficial of all temperance acts, I would to God that every hell hole in the city, state and nation could be closed forever." The increase in the temperance sentiment since last Thanksgiving had, he thought, been manifest.

Rev. Mr. Jordan was thankful for this awakening, and for the fact that there had been increased interest in the church and its work. Other interests had expanded—why not the church. The congregation was urged to prepare itself to receive this spirit of progressiveness which was everywhere manifested, and to thank God for the opportunity to join in the onward march toward the coveted goal.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Problem of Grading In East Liverpool Ably And Interestingly Discussed.

A 2-hour session of the City Sunday School association was held at the Christian church yesterday afternoon. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the interest shown indicates that the association will accomplish much good.

W. W. Sloan presided and the opening prapey was made by Rev. Mr. Steele. The chair was composed of the following persons:

Messrs. Craddock Reese, Edward Beardmore, Edgar Eagan; Misses Annie Beardmore, Laura Farrell, Nellie Lloyd, Bessie Stanley, Kitty Sinclair, Miss Clara Wagner presiding at the organ.

The topic for discussion yesterday was "Can the East Liverpool Sunday School Be Successfully Graded?" A paper was read by Charles Brown, of the Baptist church, who treated the subject in an able manner.

Discussion of the subject was participated in by Prof. R. E. Rayman, Dr. M. B. Pratt, E. D. Moore, Rev. J. W. Gorrell, William Morris, D. F. White and others. When it was ended the time of the meeting had expired, and two subjects were left for another time. They were "The Measure of the Teacher's Responsibility," and "When And Where Should Lesson Helps Be Used?"

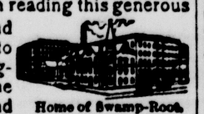
DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.



Home of Swamp-Root.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghampton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Impressive Exercises at St. John's Lutheran Church Were Held Yesterday.

The sixth anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church was celebrated yesterday in a fitting manner.

Rev. R. M. Zimmerman, late of Santiago, Cuba, was to have delivered the addressed, but he was unable to reach this city in time, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz, pastor of St. John's, was compelled to officiate.

The service was none the less interesting by reason of the change, as the discourse of Rev. Mr. Reinartz was a most interesting and instructive one. He took as his subject "The heaven declareth the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The theme was especially adapted to a service of this kind, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz treated his hearers to an unusually brilliant sermon.

Riches in Christ.

Services at the Methodist Protestant church yesterday morning were unusually interesting. Dr. Jones delivered an eloquent sermon from the text, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." The keynote of the sermon was the poverty of Christ, that through His poverty man might be saved. He came into the world to seek and save, and Christ could not do this unless He made Himself as one of the masses.

St. Andrew's Day Services.

St. Andrew's day was celebrated at St. Stephen's Episcopal church yesterday. The members of the society of St. Andrew attended the service in a body, and the sermon and special music were particularly designed for the benefit of the Brotherhood.

This brought about a crisis, and at meetings of the employes held yesterday it was decided to lay the matter before the executive board of the miners' union.

Parker, of Marine City, Mich., and the barge Mosher, owned by Captain David Hutchinson, of Port Huron, struck Starve island reef in Saturday night's gale, and it is feared that both vessels will be a total loss. The Rose was beached on the south shore of Put-in-Bay and the Mosher lies on the reef with her back broken. The Mosher is not insured. The barges Wawanash and Lyman Casey, which were with the Mosher in the Rose's tow, were able to leave for Port Huron yesterday, though leaking badly. An attempt will be made to release the Rose and Mosher.

ARBITRATION SENTIMENT

In Dealing With Strikes Something to Be Devoutly Thankful for—Signs of the Times As Related to Progress. Other Excellent Sermons.

It is seldom that a church congregation is treated to a talk as practical and so full of everyday truths as that delivered by Rev. C. G. Jordan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning. The discourse was replete with telling hits, and showed in every topic touched upon the results of careful study and a thorough knowledge of state and government affairs.

The sermon was out of the ordinary, in that it treated on subjects and took up matters seldom touched upon by pulpit orators on Sunday. The pastor made no apology for his choice of theme, saying he was vitally interested and profoundly impressed by the importance of the several matters in mind and felt that it was altogether proper they should be aired.

Rev. Mr. Jordan read for his text the first verse of the 107th Psalm: "O, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever." In part the speaker said:

"When there is nothing transpires to excite or produce activity, affairs remains at a standstill. It is well for us to consider the question of whether there has been progress made or activity noted in the affairs of church and state during the past year for which we should be thankful. The moral enthusiasm has been manifest, and to this is due much of the success and forward move of the nation. In national affairs the idea of arbitration has gained a foothold, and if in no other way the year has brought forth transactions in which the government's highest officials have figured."

The growth of the trust was reviewed. Not many years ago a small amount of capital would suffice to establish a factory, the revenue from which would make an independent fortune for its owner in time. It was not long until other capital was called in and interests of the same character were combined so that establishment took on the proportions called trusts. The inventive genius of certain workmen had been employed and appliances installed which enabled one man to perform the work formerly requiring the time of three. In many ways these combinations of capital and industrial interests had been a benefit to the country, but there have been instances of where men had been robbed of the fruits of years of toil by having patents and improvements in mechanical appliances stolen or appropriated by his firm without his consent.

In this regard the trusts have been very wrong. However, the men who produced the great wealth saw the advantages of combination and they too organized for the common good. Both had a right to do this, in the opinion of the speaker, and the object was at once apparent. The farmer had combined interests in order that a solid front might be presented in the matter of competition, while the workmen organized that a just recompense might be asked for their services. Many reasons were cited showing that each had a perfect right to combine for their mutual good. The workmen had by concerted action secured shorter hours and better conditions, enabling himself and his employer to find more time for worship and other diversions calculated to benefit him morally and socially. The concessions, in the opinion of the speaker, had been of great and lasting benefit to both sides. The formation of these combinations had their bad effects, and in not a few cases unjust demands had been made which resulted disastrously to both employer and employe.

At this point the history of the late coal strike was recalled, or a comparison made in a similar manner. It was shown conclusively that this transaction had been disastrous, not only to the best interests of the parties directly involved, but to the whole people. Then the president of these United States interposed and asked why should these opposing forces not come together and reason this thing out. The suggestion was acted upon, and instead of prolonging a struggle that could not but end disastrously to both, besides causing a stagnation of every line of industry, the dispute had been submitted to a board of honest and conscientious men for settlement.

Rev. Mr. Jordan thanked God that the idea of arbitration had been adopted; that the time had come when differences could be adjusted in other ways than bloody battles and prolonged strikes. He hoped that the time would soon come when the navy yards would be blotted out and cannons would not be mounted on battle fields to shoot down our fellow beings. The time was fast approaching when men would meet at the high tribunal of reason and disputed questions would be submitted to arbitration.

Reference was made to one of the great curses of the land—that of intemperance, and considerable time was devoted to the subject. The pastor asserted that nineteen-twentieths of the convictions in our county and city courts could be traced to this cause. The Beal local option law recently enacted was touched upon, and the framers of that measure commended in no uncertain terms. It would if properly applied do much good. If in no other way the law would put a stigma upon the traffic and brand it as a curse.

In looking over the election returns the speaker noticed that the Prohibition vote had increased and was steadily gaining. He thanked God that the sentiment in favor of temperance and sobriety was growing. "Through the operation of this most beneficial of all temperance acts, I would to God that every hell hole in the city, state and nation could be closed forever." The increase in the temperance sentiment since last Thanksgiving had, he thought, been manifest.

Rev. Mr. Jordan was thankful for this awakening, and for the fact that there had been increased interest in the church and its work. Other interests had expanded—why not the church. The congregation was urged to prepare itself to receive this spirit of progressiveness which was everywhere manifested, and to thank God for the opportunity to join in the onward march toward the coveted goal.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Problem of Grading In East Liverpool Ably And Interestingly Discussed.

A 2-hour session of the City Sunday School association was held at the Christian church yesterday afternoon. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the interest shown indicates that the association will accomplish much good.

W. W. Sloan presided and the opening prapey was made by Rev. Mr. Steele. The chair was composed of the following persons:

Messrs. Craddock Reese, Edward Beardmore, Edgar Eagan; Misses Annie Beardmore, Laura Farrell, Nellie Lloyd, Bessie Stanley, Kitty Sinclair, Miss Clara Wagner presiding at the organ.

The topic for discussion yesterday was "Can the East Liverpool Sunday School Be Successfully Graded?" A paper was read by Charles Brown, of the Baptist church, who treated the subject in an able manner.

Discussion of the subject was participated in by Prof. R. E. Rayman, Dr. M. B. Pratt, E. D. Moore, Rev. J. W. Gorrell, William Morris, D. F. White and others. When it was ended the time of the meeting had expired, and two subjects were left for another time. They were "The Measure of the Teacher's Responsibility," and "When And Where Should Lesson Helps Be Used?"

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Impressive Exercises at St. John's Lutheran Church Were Held Yesterday.

The sixth anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church was celebrated yesterday in a fitting manner.

Rev. R. M. Zimmerman, late of Santiago, Cuba, was to have delivered the addressed, but he was unable to reach this city in time, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz, pastor of St. John's, was compelled to officiate.

The service was none the less interesting by reason of the change, as the discourse of Rev. Mr. Reinartz was a most interesting and instructive one. He took as his subject "The heaven declareth the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The theme was especially adapted to a service of this kind, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz treated his hearers to an unusually brilliant sermon.

Riches in Christ.

Services at the Methodist Protestant church yesterday morning were unusually interesting. Dr. Jones delivered an eloquent sermon from the text, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." The keynote of the sermon was the poverty of Christ, that through His poverty man might be saved. He came into the world to seek and save, and Christ could not do this unless He made Himself as one of the masses.

St. Andrew's Day Services.

St. Andrew's day was celebrated at St. Stephen's Episcopal church yesterday. The members of the society of St. Andrew attended the service in a body, and the sermon and special music were particularly designed for the benefit of the Brotherhood.

Will Call in Executive Board.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 1.—The 2,500 employes of the Kindig Coal company have agreed to submit their grievances with the company to the executive board of the United Mine Workers. The company is opposed to the check weighmen employed by the miners and on the last pay day refused to deduct from the wages of the employes the amount necessary to pay monthly salaries of the weighmen. This brought about a crisis, and at meetings of the employes held yesterday it was decided to lay the matter before the executive board of the miners' union.

Barges Struck Reef.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 1.—A special to the Free Press from Put-in-Bay, O., says: The steam barge D. F. Rose, owned by L. B. Parker, of Marine City, Mich., and the barge Mosher, owned by Captain David Hutchinson, of Port Huron, struck Starve island reef in Saturday night's gale, and it is feared that both vessels will be a total loss. The Rose was beached on the south shore of Put-in-Bay and the Mosher lies on the reef with her back broken. The Mosher is not insured. The barges Wawanash and Lyman Casey, which were with the Mosher in the Rose's tow, were able to leave for Port Huron yesterday, though leaking badly. An attempt will be made to release the Rose and Mosher.

MORE HOSPITAL SCANDALS

Work of a Shady Character By the Old Board at Dayton State Hospital—The World's Fair Commissioners for Ohio.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 1.—The press at the state capital made many eulogistic references to the late Captain William T. Cope, former treasurer of state, who was born and reared in Columbiana county, and who was laid to rest in this city Saturday. Most of the state officials were present at the obsequies, which were simple and touching. The pall-bearers were close friends of the deceased and were as follows: Hon. I. B. Cameron, treasurer of state; Hon. Harry M. Daugherty, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the time Judge Nash was named for the place; Charles Wambaugh, Oliver Perry, Scott A. Webb, Charles Morris, Samuel P. Elliott and Charles Hain.

On Sunday the Ohio State Journal printed this: "In the death of Hon. William T. Cope Wednesday evening Ohio loses a citizen who served his state well for many years. Mr. Cope was elected to represent Columbiana county in the sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth general assemblies, and became almost from the inception of his first term one of the leaders of the house. At the beginning of his second term he was made chairman of the finance committee, a position which he filled with great credit to himself and the state. W. A. Thompson, treasurer of Columbiana county, a close friend of Mr. Cope, attended the funeral."

In appointing Senator Moore, of Athens, and Representative Hagenbuch, of Urbana, members of the commission to represent Ohio at the St. Louis exposition, Governor Nash acted upon advice given by Judge George B. Okey, a Democrat and one of the best lawyers in the state. Attorney General Sheets rendered an opinion informing the governor that the appointment of legislators on the committee would not be unconstitutional, but Judge Okey holds that as the commissionerships are but temporary and not permanent, they do not fall within the inhibition of the constitution, which prescribes that members of the legislature shall not serve in any office created by the legislature of which they are members, until one year after the expiration of the term of office of the member. The judge says the commissionerships are not civil offices as construed by the constitution.

A report filed with Governor Nash by the trustees of the Dayton State hospital brings to light transactions by the board appointed to manage the institution by the Bushnell administration and which Governor Nash ousted, of a very shady character. No charges are made, the facts as discovered by the present board merely being given. Among other things, a shortage of $4,600 was found. The report has been placed in the hands of the attorney general, and it is likely that legal proceedings will be instituted. The contents of the report are sensational in the extreme.

The strike assessments for the support of the anthracite miners have been discontinued in Ohio. The assessment was levied last July, and while it was in effect each miner gave 10 per cent of his wages to a fund which was used in maintaining the strike. About 150,000 Ohio miners paid assessments.

REALM OF SPORTS

ENDED IN A FIGHT

CHESTER INDIANS WANTED TO PUNISH THE B. A. C.

East Liverpool Boys Declared Winners, But Opponents Were Not Satisfied.

The foot ball game played at Rock Springs park Saturday afternoon by the Brewery Athletic club of this city and the Chester Indians, composed of tin mill employes, ended in a general fight, the result of the latter team refusing to abide by a decision of the referee on a ball which he declared dead, it having fallen to the ground after a fumble.

A member of the B. A. C. team, after the game said that, had not the East Liverpool team run from the park, every man would undoubtedly be today carrying a sore spot on his physiognomy. He said that the Indians were not satisfied to suffer fair defeat and to get even wanted to whip their opponents.

The halves played were of 15 minutes. In the first half Bridge scored a touchdown after a terrible run of 90 yards. Coleman made an advance of 10 yards and Brock, on a trick play, advanced 20 yards. Herbert, of the Indians, made a 10-yard run.

In the second half Bridge went through center for five yards and Coleman was thrown back five yards by the next rush. Brock figured conspicuously by running 10 yards around the end twice. Brock and Coleman fiercely tackled Herbert and succeeded in throwing him back five yards. The next rush was when the game ended. The ball was fumbled and fell to the ground. The referee immediately declared it dead and the Indians refused to stand for it. They were given 10 minutes by the referee to continue the game, and upon their refusing to again start the B. A. C. team was declared the winner by a score of 5 to 0.

Captain Brock claims his team to be the champion of eastern Ohio among all teams of 115 pounds in weight. He challenges any and all comers, and is willing to play for love or money. He is trying to arrange for a game with the Oakland team for next Saturday.

ANOTHER FAILURE

On the Part of the Columbian Juniors to Meet the C. F. Armours.

The C. F. Armour rugby team has about decided to give up meeting the Columbian Juniors this season. A second game was arranged between the teams for last Saturday, but as on the occasion of the Thanksgiving game the latter team failed to appear, and the Armours are now positive the Juniors are afraid of them.

The Armours would like to meet any reliable eleven in this section before the season closes. W. G. Dorf is the manager and communications addressed to him will receive consideration.

ORANGE GROVES FOR CUBA

Fruit Long Forbidden to Be Grown For Sale In That Prolific Isle.

Cuba, so long hampered and repressed by Spanish domination, now that she has become a republic and free to work her own will, is turning her attention to developing the immense fruit growing possibilities of her prolific soil.

Under Spanish rule the Cubans were not permitted to engage in orange growing as a business. Landholders were permitted to have half a dozen orange trees on their plantation, but they could not sell the fruit. If they tried to do so, their trees were chopped down and they were fined. It was the same way with pineapples and limes, and the reason for this law was that the fruit growers in Spain would not tolerate competition from the island.

Since Cuba has become a republic, however, the planters are free to grow what they please, and a number of those who are engaging in the orange growing business are Americans.

Tropical fruits of all kinds grow wild in great abundance in Cuba. But according to the Spanish idea it did not pay to cultivate them. Quicker returns were obtained from sugar and tobacco; besides the latter products did not compete with Spain's fruit orchards. So, although bananas, oranges, plums, lemons, limes, citron, grape fruit, pineapples and pears are found all over the island growing in a wild state, they have never been cultivated to any extent.

Fruit growers from Florida and California who have examined the Cuban soil report that it is the best and richest land they have ever seen, possessing many properties which have to be supplied artificially in the United States.

Another feature which impressed itself upon the experts who went over the ground was that there are no frosts in Cuba. In Florida, where frosts often destroy crops for several years in succession, the owner of groves has to cover his trees. There is none of this in Cuba, for frosts are unknown there. The temperature averages 73 degrees for the year, and it is said that the orange crop will be ready for the market several weeks before that of Florida.

HIGH TRIBUTES TO HIS MEMORY

Press and People Unite in Giving Praise to the Late Hon. W. T. Cope.

MORE HOSPITAL SCANDALS

Work of a Shady Character By the Old Board at Dayton State Hospital—The World's Fair Commissioners for Ohio.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 1.—The press at the state capital made many eulogistic references to the late Captain William T. Cope, former treasurer of state, who was born and reared in Columbiana county, and who was laid to rest in this city Saturday. Most of the state officials were present at the obsequies, which were simple and touching. The pall-bearers were close friends of the deceased and were as follows: Hon. I. B. Cameron, treasurer of state; Hon. Harry M. Daugherty, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the time Judge Nash was named for the place; Charles Wambaugh, Oliver Perry, Scott A. Webb, Charles Morris, Samuel P. Elliott and Charles Hain.

On Sunday the Ohio State Journal printed this: "In the death of Hon. William T. Cope Wednesday evening Ohio loses a citizen who served his state well for many years. Mr. Cope was elected to represent Columbiana county in the sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth general assemblies, and became almost from the inception of his first term one of the leaders of the house. At the beginning of his second term he was made chairman of the finance committee, a position which he filled with great credit to himself and the state. W. A. Thompson, treasurer of Columbiana county, a close friend of Mr. Cope, attended the funeral."

In appointing Senator Moore, of Athens, and Representative Hagenbuch, of Urbana, members of the commission to represent Ohio at the St. Louis exposition, Governor Nash acted upon advice given by Judge George B. Okey, a Democrat and one of the best lawyers in the state. Attorney General Sheets rendered an opinion informing the governor that the appointment of legislators on the committee would not be unconstitutional, but Judge Okey holds that as the commissionerships are but temporary and not permanent, they do not fall within the inhibition of the constitution, which prescribes that members of the legislature shall not serve in any office created by the legislature of which they are members, until one year after the expiration of the term of office of the member. The judge says the commissionerships are not civil offices as construed by the constitution.

A report filed with Governor Nash by the trustees of the Dayton State hospital brings to light transactions by the board appointed to manage the institution by the Bushnell administration and which Governor Nash ousted, of a very shady character. No charges are made, the facts as discovered by the present board merely being given. Among other things, a shortage of $4,000 was found. The report has been placed in the hands of the attorney general, and it is likely that legal proceedings will be instituted. The contents of the report are sensational in the extreme.

The strike assessments for the support of the anthracite miners have been discontinued in Ohio. The assessment was levied last July, and while it was in effect each miner gave 10 per cent of his wages to a fund which was used in maintaining the strike. About 150,000 Ohio miners paid assessments.

REALM OF SPORTS

ENDED IN A FIGHT

CHESTER INDIANS WANTED TO PUNISH THE B. A. C.

East Liverpool Boys Declared Winners, But Opponents Were Not Satisfied.

The foot ball game played at Rock Springs park Saturday afternoon by the Brewery Athletic club of this city and the Chester Indians, composed of tin mill employes, ended in a general fight, the result of the latter team refusing to abide by a decision of the referee on a ball which he declared dead, it having fallen to the ground after a fumble.

A member of the B. A. C. team, after the game said that, had not the East Liverpool team run from the park, every man would undoubtedly be today carrying a sore spot on his physiognomy. He said that the Indians were not satisfied to suffer fair defeat and to get even wanted to whip their opponents.

The halves played were of 15 minutes. In the first half Bridge scored a touchdown after a terrible run of 90 yards. Coleman made an advance of 10 yards and Brock, on a trick play, advanced 20 yards. Herbert, of the Indians, made a 10-yard run.

In the second half Bridge went through center for five yards and Coleman was thrown back five yards by the next rush. Brock figured conspicuously by running 10 yards around the end twice. Brock and Coleman fiercely tackled Herbert and succeeded in throwing him back five yards. The next rush was when the game ended. The ball was fumbled and fell to the ground. The referee immediately declared it dead and the Indians refused to stand for it. They were given 10 minutes by the referee to continue the game, and upon their refusing to again start the B. A. C. team was declared the winner by a score of 5 to 0.

Captain Brock claims his team to be the champion of eastern Ohio among all teams of 115 pounds in weight. He challenges any and all comers, and is willing to play for love or money. He is trying to arrange for a game with the Oakland team for next Saturday.

ANOTHER FAILURE

On the Part of the Columbian Juniors to Meet the C. F. Armours.

The C. F. Armour rugby team has about decided to give up meeting the Columbian Juniors this season. A second game was arranged between the teams for last Saturday, but as on the occasion of the Thanksgiving game the latter team failed to appear, and the Armours are now positive the Juniors are afraid of them.

The Armours would like to meet any reliable eleven in this section before the season closes. W. G. Dorf is the manager and communications addressed to him will receive consideration.

Sign of Cold Winter.

A local sportsman says the coming winter will be an extremely severe one. He bases his prediction on the fact that the hide of the squirrel in the nieghboring hills is so thick and tough that it can hardly be cut with a knife. He says he has hunted for many years and has yet failed to find squirrels with tough hides when a severe winter did not follow.

The prospective senator is but little over forty years of age and is wealthy. His father was one of the pioneers who crossed the plains with Brigham Young. He was one of the founders of the town of Provo, Mr. Smoot's present home.

Mr. Smoot's wife—unlike many leaders of the Mormon church, he has but

She brought him a fortune, which has been increased by wise investment until Mr. Smoot is now considered one of the richest men in Utah. Just 11 years ago today the East Liverpool Street railroad was put in actual operation in this city. It will be remembered by the older residents that the franchise was granted to Albert Johnson, Sidney Short and others 90 days previous to the placing in operation of the railway. Johnson promised the city that the road should be constructed and in running order within 90 days, and he kept his promise.

The line has been of great benefit to the citizens of this portion of the Ohio valley, and with extensions and improvements is likely to be of greater benefit in future years.

Owl on a Rampage.

William Dye, who has charge of the animal department at the Pleasure Palace, met with a misfortune this morning while engaged in handling a pet owl, which is nearly as large as a chicken. The owl suddenly started to fly, and it being daylight it was unable to see. It flew the whole length of the room, and when it reached the end it continued its course through a large glass window. Being stunned by the shock Mr. Dye was able to pick it up before it could fly again.

Comptroller Ridgely's Report Shows That Deposits Reach New High Point.

TROOPS SHOULD HAVE CANTEEN.

Its Absence Is Proving Bad for Army, Says Secretary of War—Recommends Passage of the Militia Bill Now Before Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The annual report of William B. Ridgely, comptroller of the currency, has been prepared for transmission to congress. The report starts with a table giving a detailed statement of the resources and liabilities of all the national banks of the United States, as shown by the five reports of condition made in response to the call of the comptroller.

From the table it appears that on Sept. 15, 1902, the date of the last call, 4,601 associations reported, with aggregate resources of $6,113,928,50. The loans and discounts amounted to $3,208,127,180.69, or more than 50 per cent of the total resources of the banks. The items of surplus and undivided profits amounted, respectively, to $326,393,953.66 and $169,216,512.03. The individual deposits reached the highest point in the existence of the national banking system, $3,209,273,893.93. There was due to approved reserve agents, other national banks, state banks and bankers, trust companies and savings banks, the sum of $1,200,341,233.39.

A Year's Growth.

From Sept. 30, 1901, to Sept. 15, 1902, there was an increase of $418,581,617.54 in the aggregate resources of the reporting banks, the principal items of interest being, loans and discounts, $261,511,562.29; United States bonds, $12,570,520; due from national and other banks, $35,217,372.29. There was an increase in capital stock of $50,193,527; in surplus and other profits of $65,048,357.81; and in individual deposits of $271,520,660.60.

During the year ended Oct. 31, 1902, 470 banks were chartered, with an aggregate capital of $[illegible],000,000, of which number 302, with capital of $[illegible],905,000, were of the smaller class, and 168, with capital of $23,225,000, had individual capital of $50,000 and over. There was an average of one and one-half banks organized on every secular day of the year.

The banking power of the world in 1850, that is, capital, surplus profits, note issues and deposits, as stated by the late M. G. Mulhall, was £3,197,000,000, as follows:

United Kingdom, £910,000,000; continental Europe, £1,037,000,000; Australia, Canada, Cape Colony, Argentina and Uruguay, £220,000,000, and United States, £1,030,000,000. In 1894 Maurice L. Muhleman calculated the banking power of the world at £3,915,000,000.

Mr. Ridgely discusses the needs of currency legislation at great length and gives a brief statement of the action taken and trend of discussion at meetings of bankers' associations.

Secretary Root's Report.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The report of Secretary of War Root, to be sent to congress, makes many recommendations somewhat in line with those of his last report. Perhaps the most interesting point is on the subject of canteens, in which the secretary says:

"I am convinced that the general effect of prohibiting the use of beer and light wines within the limited area of the of the army post is to lead the enlisted men to go out of the post, to frequent vile resorts which cluster in the neighborhood, to drink bad whisky to excess, and to associate intimately with abandoned men and more abandoned women; and that the operation of the law is to increase drunkenness, disease of the most loathsome kind, insubordination and desertion, and moral and physical degeneration."

On the disposition of the army in peace, he recommends large camps adjacent to, but beyond the limits of large cities, rather than many small camps, thus giving opportunity for increasing the efficiency of the army.

Militia System.

On the question of state militia, the secretary urges the passage of the bill now before congress, and says in part:

"It is really absurd that a nation which maintains but a small regular army and depends upon unprofessional citizen soldiery for its defense should run along as we have done for 110 years under a militia law which never worked satisfactorily in the beginning, and which was perfectly obsolete before any man now fit for military duty was born."

The secretary recommends the creation of a general staff for the army, with the commanding general as chief. This staff, however, would not be modeled after those of European armies.

The secretary estimates the needs of his department for the year ending June 30, 1904, as follows: Civil establishment, $2,020,896; military establishment, support of the army and of the military academy, $77,986,515.29; public works, including fortifications and river and harbor improvements, $40,175,613.03; miscellaneous, $5,806,411.10; [illegible] $125,989,435.42. The total estimate for the year ending June 30, 1903, was $157,999,836.26, and the appropriation by congress was $146,937,395.77.

ENGLAND'S ACTIVE FOE, THE MAD MOLLAH.

A small British army is now hard at work endeavoring to rout the forces of the Mad Mollah in Somaliland, Africa. The Mad Mollah and his 12,000 followers recently defeated a British force, inflicting considerable loss.

LOVE FOUND A WAY

Young Couple Had Trouble in Getting Married, But Finally Succeeded.

Charles Householder, of Sebring, and Miss Mamie McGuffin, of East Palestine, experienced much trouble in getting married on Thanksgiving day. They first visited Father Barth, of the Catholic church at East Palestine, who refused to perform the ceremony because the prospective groom was not a member of the church, and who further notified the couple that he would warn every Catholic priest in the vicinity not to perform the ceremony.

Not to be so easily discouraged the couple boarded the first train for Alliance and related their wishes to Father Farrell, who agreed to perform the ceremony after satisfying himself as to the ages of the parties and the publication of the bans. The last word of the ceremony had scarcely been spoken when Father Farrell was called to the telephone and received Father Barth's message of warning. The message came too late, however, and the couple departed for their home, happy in the thought of victory.

London, Dec. 1.—"Had not so many of our burghers proved false to their own colors, England, as the great Bismarck foretold, would have found her grave in South Africa." OHIO'S CENTENN'AL

ANNIVERSARY OF FIRST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Appropriate Exercises Held at Chillicothe on Saturday.

Chillicothe, December 1.—On Saturday this city, the original capital of the northwest territory, out of which was formed the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, celebrated the centennial anniversary of the assembling of the convention which framed the first constitution of Ohio. Advantage was taken of the occasion to place a tablet to mark the site of the building in which the constitutional convention assembled and which was also the capitol of the northwest territory as well as of the state of Ohio until the seat of government was removed to Columbus.

In the morning the tablet was presented to the city and county by Robert W. Manley, a great-grandson of Edward Tiffin, the first governor of Ohio. It was accepted by Wallace D. Yaple, mayor of the city, and was unveiled by Miss Effie Scott, a granddaughter of Governor William Allen and a great-granddaughter of Governor Duncan McArthur.

In the afternoon at Memorial hall the celebration was continued by an introductory address by Hon. W. T. McClintick, one of the oldest residents of the city. His address was full of delightful reminiscences of the city and its pioneers. Hon. Daniel J. Ryan spoke on "The Original Constitution and Its Effect on Ohio History."

At the close of the centennial exercises in the afternoon the members of the State Historical Society met to discuss the centennial celebration of Ohio's admission to the union, which is to be held here May 21 and 22, 1903. It was decided to make this celebration one of national interest, and the president and governors of all the states in the union will be invited to participate.

SETTLED AT $50 EACH

Panhandle Railroad Company Adjusts Claims Against It By Picnickers.

Steubenville, December 1.—It will cost the Pennsylvania Railroad company $1,150 because one of its conductors failed to stop a passenger train at Willow Springs last Fourth of July. The company late Wednesday compromised with the claimants in the 23 cases against it for $50 each. The agreements, therefore, will result in the dismissals of the suits now standing against the company in the circuit court.

A party of 23 people, Wheeling people, spent last Fourth of July at the springs some distance above the city, and made arrangements for the late train on the Panhandle to stop there and take them on for the return trip to the city.

The party was overlooked in a rush of business on the road that day, and suits were entered by each member of the party for $1,000 damages each.

In the trial of the first case, that of Lillian Poe vs. the Panhandle, the jury brought in a verdict of $60 for the plaintiff. This termination of the test case compelled the railroad company to sue for settlement in all of them. Prior to the trial of the Poe case the company had offered each member of the party $60, but it was refused. The company thus gets off for half the amount.

De Wet's Book.

London, Dec. 1.—"Had not so many of our burghers proved false to their own colors, England, as the great Bismarck foretold, would have found her grave in South Africa." This is the keynote of the Boer General De Wet's book, entitled "Three Years' War," published by Archibald Constable & Co., in London, and dedicated by the Boer general "To my fellow subjects of the British empire."

Hunting Fatalities.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 1.—The season for hunting deer in the northern woods closed yesterday. Fatalities have been unusually frequent in the woods this season, 14 men having been killed while hunting deer in the states of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. At least 11 others have been shot and seriously wounded.

OHIO'S CENTENN'AL

ANNIVERSARY OF FIRST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Appropriate Exercises Held at Chillicothe on Saturday.

Chillicothe, December 1.—On Saturday this city, the original capital of the northwest territory, out of which was formed the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, celebrated the centennial anniversary of the assembling of the convention which framed the first constitution of Ohio. Advantage was taken of the occasion to place a tablet to mark the site of the building in which the constitutional convention assembled and which was also the capitol of the northwest territory as well as of the state of Ohio until the seat of government was removed to Columbus.

In the morning the tablet was presented to the city and county by Robert W. Manley, a great-grandson of Edward Tiffin, the first governor of Ohio. It was accepted by Wallace D. Yaple, mayor of the city, and was unveiled by Miss Effie Scott, a granddaughter of Governor William Allen and a great-granddaughter of Governor Duncan McArthur.

In the afternoon at Memorial hall the celebration was continued by an introductory address by Hon. W. T. McClintick, one of the oldest residents of the city. His address was full of delightful reminiscences of the city and its pioneers. Hon. Daniel J. Ryan spoke on "The Original Constitution and Its Effect on Ohio History."

At the close of the centennial exercises in the afternoon the members of the State Historical Society met to discuss the centennial celebration of Ohio's admission to the union, which is to be held here May 21 and 22, 1903. It was decided to make this celebration one of national interest, and the president and governors of all the states in the union will be invited to participate.

SETTLED AT $50 EACH

Panhandle Railroad Company Adjusts Claims Against It By Picnickers.

Steubenville, December 1.—It will cost the Pennsylvania Railroad company $1,150 because one of its conductors failed to stop a passenger train at Willow Springs last Fourth of July. The company late Wednesday compromised with the claimants in the 23 cases against it for $50 each. The agreements, therefore, will result in the dismissals of the suits now standing against the company in the circuit court.

A party of 23 people, Wheeling people, spent last Fourth of July at the springs some distance above the city, and made arrangements for the late train on the Panhandle to stop there and take them on for the return trip to the city.

The party was overlooked in a rush of business on the road that day, and suits were entered by each member of the party for $1,000 damages each.

In the trial of the first case, that of Lillian Poe vs. the Panhandle, the jury brought in a verdict of $60 for the plaintiff. This termination of the test case compelled the railroad company to sue for settlement in all of them. Prior to the trial of the Poe case the company had offered each member of the party $60, but it was refused. The company thus gets off for half the amount.

CONGRESS CONVENES.

Territorial Bill, Trusts, Tariff and Cuban Reciprocity Will Take Time of Senate.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TUESDAY

Deluge of Bills Dealing With the Trust Question Poured Into the House on Opening of Final Session of the Fifty-Fifth Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The admission of the territories of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona as states of the Union was the subject of general importance to receive the attention of the senate in the session which began at noon today.

After the omnibus territorial bill passed the house last session its friends in the senate were so insistent on action by the senate and so strong in point of numbers that in the interest of other pending legislation a unanimous agreement was reached that in consideration of abatement by the friends of the measure during the last session the committee on territories would report on the bill on next Wednesday, Dec. 3, and that a week later the bill should become the unfinished business of the senate, which means that unless the measure shall be displaced by vote or by unanimous consent it will occupy the first place on the senate calendar until disposed of.

Change in Tariff Improbable.

Other questions which, in addition to the appropriation bills, are expected to receive attention of the senate at this session are the trusts, the tariff and Cuban reciprocity. Very few Republican senators admit the probability of any change of the tariff law during the present session, but some bills to modify present schedules may be introduced and speeches made thereon. Some senators speak of the creation of a tariff commission as a possibility, but there are differences of opinion as to the utility of such a body. There is quite a unanimity of opinion favorable to anti-trust legislation, and this opinion goes to the extent of predicting results along the lines indicated by Attorney General Knox for the amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law. The present week will barely witness the beginning of the three months' work. Today the usual committee of two senators was appointed to call on the president and resolutions of regret for the death of Senator McMillan of Michigan, brought the day's session to a close a few minutes after assemblage. Tomorrow the president's message will be read, and beyond this no business will be attempted. The sessions of Wednesday and Thursday also will be brief, with an adjournment from Thursday until the following Monday.

There will be an effort to confirm some of the numerous nominations expected to be sent in at the first opportunity.

A large number of bills will be introduced on Wednesday and Thursday and the foundation will be laid for what all predict will be a very crowded session.

Flood of Bills.

When the house convened today to enter on the final session of the fifty-fifth congress a perfect deluge of bills dealing with the trust question in all its phases were thrown into the legislative hopper. It is admitted on all hands that this will be the most important topic of discussion. Indeed, the leaders incline to the belief that beyond the appropriation bills and routine legislation it will be the only general subject on which there is a chance of action at the short session. The president's recommendations on the subject are waited with interest. The most conservative opinion among the Republican leaders seems to favor an application for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law. Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, is one of those who believe that the Sherman law, if enforced, is sufficient to meet the situation, and today he introduced a bill appropriating $500,000 to be used by the department of justice in prosecutions under the present law. Meantime the trust bills will be referred to the judiciary committee.

To Expedite Appropriations.

The leaders already have resolved to expedite the appropriation bills as much as possible in order to allow the largest margin of time for other matters. The appropriation committees will go to work at once and prepare the supply bills as rapidly as possible. The legislative and pension bills probably will be read before the end of the week. One of the first things the appropriation committee will be called on to do, however, is to prepare a bill to provide for the coal strike commission. The appropriations committee met today to adopt a bill which it is believed will be presented and passed this week. No opposition to it from the minority is anticipated. The session of the house today was brief. There was roll call and the announcement of the deaths that have occurred during the recent recess. The house adjourned until tomorrow, when the president's message will be read. There is no program for the remainder of the week beyond the bill to defray the expenses of the coal strike commission. If the regular order is demanded the London dock charge bill is the unfinished business.

THE COAST BEACONS

PERILS OF THE MEN WHO LIGHT THE MARINER ON HIS WAY.

Winter Vigil of Uncle Sam's Lightkeepers—Dangerous Spots on the Coasts—Treaded Diamond Shoals. When a Lightship Breaks Away.

This is the month when Uncle Sam's coast guardians begin their winter-long fight against storm and fog, those twin evils of the sailor, ever a menace, but particularly so from November to March.

The life of the lightkeeper is at best a lonely one, but when the beacon is built on ledges and rocky islands far from land the post becomes one of peril as well as isolation.

During the late fall and winter the gales become almost incessant, and frequently there may be a month or more when the sea is so rough that supply ships dare not approach the wave battered rocks on which many of the lighthouses perch. Then the keepers are as besieged men. They must save every drop of oil that their lights may be kept burning even should a new supply fail to arrive when due. They must watch their machinery every minute, for no help could reach them to repair it should it break down.

The famous Minot's Ledge light, off Boston harbor, for instance, stands eighty-five feet high from the level of the sea. The reef on which it is set is far below the surface in any except low tides even in ordinary weather. When the ocean roars around it in a winter storm, the mariner, looking at it from the sea, often can discern only its lantern above the spray. The entrance to this lighthouse is half way up the tower, and an iron ladder reaches from it to sea level. In the winter there are days after days and sometimes weeks when no man could venture into that doorway. He would be carried away by the rollers that break against the base and sweep the little balcony.

But it is in the lightship that the brave light keeper is subjected to the greatest hardships and peril. Anchored far out at sea to mark some dangerous rock or shoal, they are battered and tossed by furious storms.

While every year sees more or less damage to lighthouses and beacons, there is only one spot along the coast that has defied the lighthouse builders successfully, and that is Diamond shoals, off Cape Hatteras, the most dangerous place in the service.

Several attempts have been made to build a lighthouse on the shoals, but so far unsuccessfully. So this year, as in previous years, a lightship will mark this danger spot, dreaded by every mariner who sails the southern coast.

As showing the dangers of this station the department's directions for this year are conclusive: "Light vessels No. 71 and 72 will be used on this station alternately." Each of these ships is fitted so that she can move under her own steam, so she will not be an absolutely helpless hulk when she breaks away from her mooring in a howling gale, as she will more than once in this coming winter.

Lightship No. 69, also built to go under her own steam, was driven from her anchorage six times in four months, but managed to steam back to her position each time. The seventh time she failed. She fought against the hurricane for three days and then went up on the North Carolina beach near the Creeds Hill life station. The life savers got her crew off.

The value of the Diamond Shoals lightships is shown by the fact that during this vessel's last year on her station 2,570 steam vessels and 2,576 sailing vessels passed her.

The United States lightship that has had what is probably the most extraordinary experience is Columbia river light vessel No. 50. Her station is off the Columbia river, eight miles off shore, in the Pacific. One November day a gale began to blow from the sea. The chains snapped, and she moved toward the breakers. Sail was made, and she was worked twenty-five miles to sea. The next day two tenders steamed out to tow her in. Both failed. By dusk she was in the breakers. She was headed for the beach and struck. Her crew was taken off in the breeches buoy.

Such are the perils which the guardians of the coast are compelled to face each winter. Yet through it all they keep their lights burning except when overwhelmed by disaster. Without them navigation of Uncle Sam's coasts would be well nigh impossible.

Two Light Plays

Mrs. Le Moyne and James O'Neill In Vehicles Unworthy of Their Ability.

The Four Hundred will not enjoy "Among Those Present," because no one likes to have his corns trodden on. The ordinary world may like the play, because it lets them peep behind the curtains which hide the folly and emptiness of fashionable society from the gaping eyes of the uninitiated. Glen Macdonough has taken many bits from the printed doings of swell society and put them together to make a play. It is so nearly "nothing" for an actress like Mrs. Le Moyne, so trifling. It is like an artist doing well the regular work of an artisan. There is no credit to the actress. Any educated person can spell cat. So in this play of "Among Those Present." One recognizes Harry Lehr. There is a touch of familiarity in the sudden strike of the servants and a fresh lot being brought from an office in the city. A familiar odor greets the nostrils in the social fight over the entertainment of the crown prince at dinner and the hostess who succeeded in landing the fish, and we recognize the young man aspiring to get into this magic circle making his money on the exchange and suddenly being found dead in his rooms.

The amateur circus and all its belongings were well carried out and was possibly a faithful reproduction in a way of social circuses. Then a foreign personage on his first visit to America occasionally airs his views of the apparently peculiar things society "always does," such as "building a mansion and at its completion locking it up and going to Europe." Such things are strung together in the form of a play and offered as a vehicle for a really good star to show her worth. Wasted, and more's the pity. The play has some very bright, pretty young girl parts, nicely shown; some good men roles, well enacted, and some interest. Those who saw Mrs. Le Moyne in "In a Balcony" as the jealous woman and outraged queen will never doubt the great ability of the star, but it would be hard to persuade one who for the first time saw her in "Among Those Present" that she was more than "very good." There is no opportunity for so excellent an artist as Mrs. Le Moyne. As Mrs. Clinton, the successful social leader, we see her dominate by a love for society its hollow pomp and her sacrifice of home, husband and pride for money and social glory.

Tommy Dodd was well played by George Douglas Parker and Dr. Clinton by Harold Russell. Next to the star, the best work of the play was done by Olga Flinck. Whoever this lady may be, as her name is not familiar to me, she is undoubtedly talented. Her work as Mrs. Parker was admirable, and in her heavy scene with Mrs. Le Moyne she bore the test of juxtaposition well.

Another poor vehicle for an excellent actor is offered for public approval. James O'Neill is on tour as Rurik the Serf in an adaptation from the French called "The Honor of the Humble." I feel like apologizing whenever I write that title. It is a very bad one and alone would not sell a ticket.

James O'Neill as Rurik makes a strong, manly and convincing character and has the sympathy of the audience, but the actor is too good to be wasted on such a role. It is not powerful enough for a man who has won the worldwide commendation which his Count of Monte-Christo has deservedly brought him. James O'Neill's work as the adventurous count is superb and has ranked him in his line with the best in any other line of acting. "The Honor of the Humble" does not give enough opportunity, and while O'Neill does all that is possible with the part it is not up to his standard. The play is handsomely mounted and costumed, and the company is good.

May Buckley as leading woman and Helen Tracy in the role of the Countess Suvoroff are both admirable additions to any production. Miss Buckley's Rhoda is a charming piece of work. Small, graceful, beautiful and winning in her light work, she surprised me in her emotional moments. She gives a delightful performance.

The Countess Suvoroff, whose son, Count Paul, is the last of the name, plans a marriage for him with Princess Helene Goudonoff of Moscow and finds that he has long been madly in love with Rhoda, a former serf, who because of her beauty and refined appearance has been reared in the countess' household more like a daughter than an inferior. The girl has forgotten somewhat her humble birth or real bondage and unbidden returns the love of Count Paul. When this condition is revealed to the countess, her humiliation is great, but her anger and wounded pride are greater. After a violent scene with her son, whom she loves with the absorbing passion of her life, she agrees to send him to Moscow to remain for a year. During that time he is to try to love the princess. If at the expiration of the time he still loves Rhoda, he will return, and his mother's opposition will be ended. She adds that he must not mention this compact to any one, especially Rhoda.

He goes, happy in waiting one short year. Inside of an hour after his departure the countess summons Rurik, her coachman, and one of the serfs. He has once saved the life of her son, and the men have grown from boyhood like friends. Their true positions are master and serf. Annually marriages are arranged by the ruling head with a view of keeping a strong race of servitors in the family, and this is the time. To the horror of Rhoda, Rurik is ordered to marry her. She is appalled, while he is overcome with his good fortune, for he has always worshiped in silence the star he never hoped to reach. Though Rhoda is a serf like himself, she has become a cultured lady by her life in the palace.

When Rurik sees her sorrow and hears the countess' bitter words about her daring to aspire to be her daughter-in-law, he understands that to gain her ends the countess will force even a worse partner on poor Rhoda if he refuses to marry her. Rhoda does not dream of this, and while admiring Rurik as a serf is horrified at the thought of marrying one man while loving another. The marriage is then and there consummated, and the couple are left alone. Rhoda upbraids Rurik for marrying her. Then he tells her the bitter truth, that loving her dearly he is heartbroken to find she loves Paul and that love is returned; that he married her to save her from a humbler slave than himself and will devote himself to trying to win her love, and until then will protect her as a brother and friend, never demanding any rights as a husband.

Four months later we find that his efforts have been ineffectual, and she loves Paul as ever. She is grateful to Rurik and has lived in his home, as his sister would, loving his noble character and unselfish devotion, but never thinking of him as her husband. It seems impossible to love another man as she loves Paul.

At this time the countess visits Moscow really to find out if her plan is working and is horrified to find that all is with the count as before. He is keeping his word to his mother, not dreaming she has betrayed him. Rurik travels to Moscow to see Count Paul, not knowing of the countess' presence, to satisfy himself if Paul is to marry the princess. I forgot to add that Rurik and Rhoda were enfranchised at the time of their marriage and are therefore at liberty to act as they see fit.

In Moscow the countess enters during the scene between the men and finds that her vile work is now known to her son. Rurik has found that Paul still loves Rhoda and does not know of her marriage, and when it is told he is beside himself. Rurik returns to Rhoda, finds that the countess still dares to scheme to bring her son happiness and wishes to send Rurik away on a mission. Rhoda she will then try to bring to her son as his mistress. Rurik indignantly reminds her that he and his wife are now free and she has no control over them. To free Rhoda from himself Rurik seeks a divorce. This is prevented again through the countess, who realizes that if Rhoda were free Paul would marry her. The czar is therefore asked to refuse the divorce. Rurik seeing that Rhoda will never get her happiness in this way, determines to retire to a monastery, for thus the church annuls a marriage never consummated in the home life. When Rurik in the presence of Father Andree is about publicly to renounce the world and Rhoda realizes his wonderful sacrifice, she awakens to her love for him and declares that she will not permit it, as she is his wife and loves him. Final curtain.

The Princess, quite a difficult part, was well played by Adelaide Whytall, as was Henri du Cachet by Frank A. Connor. Count Paul was very poorly done by John W. Albaugh, Jr.

COMRADES YET!

Roguish eyed,
Daddy's pride;
Funny little chap he is!
Day or night, hugs me tight;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"
Throws his little arms around me,
With his kisses to impound me;
In my pockets after candy;
Daddy's always got some handy!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Fresh and bright,
Every night
When I leave my business care,
There he is, fair he is,
Pulling out his daddy's chair!
Laughing in his childish fancy,
As by some queer necromancy
He produces pipe, tobacco,
Slippers from behind his back, oh!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Happy he
Is with me
When we play some little game;
Rain or shine, fair or fine,
Skies to him are all the same.
Makes no difference what the weather
When we romp and play together;
Comrades both, nor serf nor master,
And the heart beats stronger, faster;
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

In the sky,
By and by,
Will I meet my comrade there?
Will he be still with me,
Our companionship as fair?
God that ruleth, my petition,
Humbly and in right contrition,
Let it reach thy gracious ear;
Keep us comrades there as here!
Faithful little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Several attempts have been made to build a lighthouse on the shoals, but so far unsuccessfully. So this year, as in previous years, a lightship will mark this danger spot, dreaded by every mariner who sails the southern coast.

As showing the dangers of this station the department's directions for this year are conclusive: "Light vessels No. 71 and 72 will be used on this station alternately." Each of these ships is fitted so that she can move under her own steam, so she will not be an absolutely helpless hulk when she breaks away from her mooring in a howling gale, as she will more than once in this coming winter.

Lightship No. 69, also built to go under her own steam, was driven from her anchorage six times in four months, but managed to steam back to her position each time. The seventh time she failed. She fought against the hurricane for three days and then went up on the North Carolina beach near the Creeds Hill life station. The life savers got her crew off.

The value of the Diamond Shoals lightships is shown by the fact that during this vessel's last year on her station 2,570 steam vessels and 2,576 sailing vessels passed her.

The United States lightship that has had what is probably the most extraordinary experience is Columbia river light vessel No. 50. Her station is off the Columbia river, eight miles off shore, in the Pacific. One November day a gale began to blow from the sea. The chains snapped, and she moved toward the breakers. Sail was made, and she was worked twenty-five miles to sea. The next day two tenders steamed out to tow her in. Both failed. By dusk she was in the breakers. She was headed for the beach and struck. Her crew was taken off in the breeches buoy.

Such are the perils which the guardians of the coast are compelled to face each winter. Yet through it all they keep their lights burning except when overwhelmed by disaster. Without them navigation of Uncle Sam's coasts would be well nigh impossible.

Two Light Plays

Mrs. Le Moyne and James O'Neill In Vehicles Unworthy of Their Ability.

The Four Hundred will not enjoy "Among Those Present," because no one likes to have his corns trodden on. The ordinary world may like the play, because it lets them peep behind the curtains which hide the folly and emptiness of fashionable society from the gaping eyes of the uninitiated. Glen Macdonough has taken many bits from the printed doings of swell society and put them together to make a play. It is so nearly "nothing" for an actress like Mrs. Le Moyne, so trifling. It is like an artist doing well the regular work of an artisan. There is no credit to the actress. Any educated person can spell cat. So in this play of "Among Those Present." One recognizes Harry Lehr. There is a touch of familiarity in the sudden strike of the servants and a fresh lot being brought from an office in the city. A familiar odor greets the nostrils in the social fight over the entertainment of the crown prince at dinner and the hostess who succeeded in landing the fish, and we recognize the young man aspiring to get into this magic circle making his money on the exchange and suddenly being found dead in his rooms.

MRS. W. J. LE MOYNE.

The amateur circus and all its belongings were well carried out and was possibly a faithful reproduction in a way of social circuses. Then a foreign personage on his first visit to America occasionally airs his views of the apparently peculiar things society "always does," such as "building a mansion and at its completion locking it up and going to Europe." Such things are strung together in the form of a play and offered as a vehicle for a really good star to show her worth. Wasted, and more's the pity. The play has some very bright, pretty young girl parts, nicely shown; some good men roles, well enacted, and some interest. Those who saw Mrs. Le Moyne in "In a Balcony" as the jealous woman and outraged queen will never doubt the great ability of the star, but it would be hard to persuade one who for the first time saw her in "Among Those Present" that she was more than "very good." There is no opportunity for so excellent an artist as Mrs. Le Moyne. As Mrs. Clinton, the successful social leader, we see her dominate by a love for society its hollow pomp and her sacrifice of home, husband and pride for money and social glory.

Tommy Dodd was well played by George Douglas Parker and Dr. Clinton by Harold Russell. Next to the star, the best work of the play was done by Olga Flinck. Whoever this lady may be, as her name is not familiar to me, she is undoubtedly talented. Her work as Mrs. Parker was admirable, and in her heavy scene with Mrs. Le Moyne she bore the test of juxtaposition well.

Another poor vehicle for an excellent actor is offered for public approval. James O'Neill is on tour as Rurik the Serf in an adaptation from the French called "The Honor of the Humble." I feel like apologizing whenever I write that title. It is a very bad one and alone would not sell a ticket.

James O'Neill as Rurik makes a strong, manly and convincing character and has the sympathy of the audience, but the actor is too good to be wasted on such a role. It is not powerful enough for a man who has won the worldwide commendation which his Count of Monte-Christo has deservedly brought him. James O'Neill's work as the adventurous count is superb and has ranked him in his line with the best in any other line of acting. "The Honor of the Humble" does not give enough opportunity, and while O'Neill does all that is possible with the part it is not up to his standard. The play is handsomely mounted and costumed, and the company is good.

May Buckley as leading woman and Helen Tracy in the role of the Countess Suvoroff are both admirable additions to any production. Miss Buckley's Rhoda is a charming piece of work. Small, graceful, beautiful and winning in her light work, she surprised me in her emotional moments. She gives a delightful performance.

The Countess Suvoroff, whose son, Count Paul, is the last of the name, plans a marriage for him with Princess Helene Goudonoff of Moscow and finds that he has long been madly in love with Rhoda, a former serf, who because of her beauty and refined appearance has been reared in the countess' household more like a daughter than an inferior. The girl has forgotten somewhat her humble birth or real bondage and unbidden returns the love of Count Paul. When this condition is revealed to the countess, her humiliation is great, but her anger and wounded pride are greater. After a violent scene with her son, whom she loves with the absorbing passion of her life, she agrees to send him to Moscow to remain for a year. During that time he is to try to love the princess. If at the expiration of the time he still loves Rhoda, he will return, and his mother's opposition will be ended. She adds that he must not mention this compact to any one, especially Rhoda.

He goes, happy in waiting one short year. Inside of an hour after his departure the countess summons Rurik, her coachman, and one of the serfs. He has once saved the life of her son, and the men have grown from boyhood like friends. Their true positions are master and serf. Annually marriages are arranged by the ruling head with a view of keeping a strong race of servitors in the family, and this is the time. To the horror of Rhoda, Rurik is ordered to marry her. She is appalled, while he is overcome with his good fortune, for he has always worshiped in silence the star he never hoped to reach. Though Rhoda is a serf like himself, she has become a cultured lady by her life in the palace.

When Rurik sees her sorrow and hears the countess' bitter words about her daring to aspire to be her daughter-in-law, he understands that to gain her ends the countess will force even a worse partner on poor Rhoda if he refuses to marry her. Rhoda does not dream of this, and while admiring Rurik as a serf is horrified at the thought of marrying one man while loving another. The marriage is then and there consummated, and the couple are left alone. Rhoda upbraids Rurik for marrying her. Then he tells her the bitter truth, that loving her dearly he is heartbroken to find she loves Paul and that love is returned; that he married her to save her from a humbler slave than himself and will devote himself to trying to win her love, and until then will protect her as a brother and friend, never demanding any rights as a husband.

Four months later we find that his efforts have been ineffectual, and she loves Paul as ever. She is grateful to Rurik and has lived in his home, as his sister would, loving his noble character and unselfish devotion, but never thinking of him as her husband. It seems impossible to love another man as she loves Paul.

At this time the countess visits Moscow really to find out if her plan is working and is horrified to find that all is with the count as before. He is keeping his word to his mother, not dreaming she has betrayed him. Rurik travels to Moscow to see Count Paul, not knowing of the countess' presence, to satisfy himself if Paul is to marry the princess. I forgot to add that Rurik and Rhoda were enfranchised at the time of their marriage and are therefore at liberty to act as they see fit.

In Moscow the countess enters during the scene between the men and finds that her vile work is now known to her son. Rurik has found that Paul still loves Rhoda and does not know of her marriage, and when it is told he is beside himself. Rurik returns to Rhoda, finds that the countess still dares to scheme to bring her son happiness and wishes to send Rurik away on a mission. Rhoda she will then try to bring to her son as his mistress. Rurik indignantly reminds her that he and his wife are now free and she has no control over them. To free Rhoda from himself Rurik seeks a divorce. This is prevented again through the countess, who realizes that if Rhoda were free Paul would marry her. The czar is therefore asked to refuse the divorce. Rurik seeing that Rhoda will never get her happiness in this way, determines to retire to a monastery, for thus the church annuls a marriage never consummated in the home life. When Rurik in the presence of Father Andree is about publicly to renounce the world and Rhoda realizes his wonderful sacrifice, she awakens to her love for him and declares that she will not permit it, as she is his wife and loves him. Final curtain.

The Princess, quite a difficult part, was well played by Adelaide Whytall, as was Henri du Cachet by Frank A. Connor. Count Paul was very poorly done by John W. Albaugh, Jr.

COMRADES YET!

Roguish eyed,
Daddy's pride;
Funny little chap he is!
Day or night, hugs me tight;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"
Throws his little arms around me,
With his kisses to impound me;
In my pockets after candy;
Daddy's always got some handy!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Fresh and bright,
Every night
When I leave my business care,
There he is, fair he is,
Pulling out his daddy's chair!
Laughing in his childish fancy,
As by some queer necromancy
He produces pipe, tobacco,
Slippers from behind his back, oh!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Happy he
Is with me
When we play some little game;
Rain or shine, fair or fine,
Skies to him are all the same.
Makes no difference what the weather
When we romp and play together;
Comrades both, nor serf nor master,
And the heart beats stronger, faster;
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

In the sky,
By and by,
Will I meet my comrade there?
Will he be still with me,
Our companionship as fair?
God that ruleth, my petition,
Humbly and in right contrition,
Let it reach thy gracious ear;
Keep us comrades there as here!
Faithful little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,
Professor of Botany, Iowa State University.

X.—Trees For Ornamental Purposes.

THUS far we have discussed trees chiefly in their broader economic aspects. We have thought of them as aggregated in forests either indigenous or artificial and as affecting the larger problems of human living and human happiness. Let us now consider the more simple relations which trees in smaller numbers bear to our enjoyment or comfort. Although as a people we destroy forests in a fashion for which history offers no precedent, we are nevertheless almost without exception tree planters. In our northern states at least a treeless yard or homestead is an exception so unusual as to be a matter of general comment. So strong is the tendency to plant trees about the house that the traveler may often find abundant attempts in this direction far out on the plains, where on account of continued dryness a tree cannot possibly grow. The pioneer in such a region will sometimes haul water for miles to pour around some transplanted cottonwood, watch it grow green for a season, only at length to see it perish in a day when the hot wind sweeps up across the desert. Our zeal is not according to knowledge, or, to put it the other way, our knowledge by no means equals our zeal.

To be reasonably successful tree planters there are several matters to which we must give heed. We must consider first of all the locality and its climatic conditions; second, the habit and history of the various species of trees from which selection must in any case be made, and, third, we must attend to the special purpose we have in view in making the particular plantations. This is all apart from the mere matter of setting the tree in the ground, pruning it, mulching it, etc., concerning which we may have something to say in the next chapter. Let us now study in the order named these several prerequisites to success. In the first place, it is evident that in tree planting much depends on having due regard to climatic and other local conditions. We must select species adapted to these conditions or our labor is in vain. In making such selection the flora of the locality or of the region round about is the absolute criterion. People in Iowa, for instance, need not put themselves to the trouble, as they have often done, to plant tulip trees in long rows about their holdings. Tulip trees were never an element of the Iowa forest or of any part of it. Neither do people of Ohio, though favored with the tulip trees, wisely attempt the several magnolias or the bald cypress, though these may find place in Kentucky or farther south. We must have respect to the natural distribution of these things or suffer the consequences. Beneficent nature has worked all this out for us, and, while for variety's sake we may introduce some novelties in her original scheme, we shall find ourselves everywhere, in the main, largely restricted to the results in her husbandry. As we go west in this latitude the number of arboreous species rapidly diminishes, as we have already stated, although by no means so rapidly as some have supposed. There are, for example, at least twenty-five species of trees and shrubs in the valley of the Missouri river where it begins to form the boundary of the state of Iowa. Farther west the number is of course smaller. The higher grounds are too dry to support trees at all. The few forms listed are limited to the water courses, diminished, dwarfed in size, until at last we begin to find the coniferous outliers of the Rocky mountain forests.

Over all this region, then, in general, trees native to the region may be successfully planted. But the second consideration mentioned, above all, now calls for remark. We must not only have regard to original distribution, but we must also study the habit, the habitat, of our different sorts of trees. This means simply a more exact examination of the particular case. Our native trees affect different situations, different soils, habitats we say, and, while many of them will grow almost anywhere if sufficient moisture is at hand, yet after all each does best in natural soil and surroundings. Thus willows grow by the water courses only. One common species is found generally on the driest hillsides. The black walnut rises to splendid perfection in rich alluvial soil; the beech and pine will flourish on a soil of sand and gravel; the white oak affects the loess capped ridge; the basswood and the hard maple, in the west at least, love the cool limestone ridge, the rocky bank; knee deep in the swamp stands the tamarack of the north, the cypress of the south; the bur oak lives in the sand, on sunny slopes, on dry, thin soils on the prairie, braving the prairie fires, even invading the desert in stunted, dwarfish growth to form the farthest western skirmish line of the Atlantic forest. These are only illustrations of how trees love special habitats. Nevertheless within their natural limits almost all trees flourish well in good, rich soil—not all. The expert forester knows his tree and knows exactly where it may be placed to best advantage. In general, as rainfall is less we need better soil and better cultivation.

In the third place, in selecting trees to plant the planter must have respect to his own ultimate purpose. If a prairie farmer desires to secure quick results, early protection, he will plant cottonwoods, white maples, box elders almost surely these because of their hardiness, ease of cultivation and rapidity of growth. Among them he will plant the larch, the Austrian pine, various evergreens, and if sufficiently farsighted he will intersperse seeds or seedlings of better varieties for the establishment of a permanent wood lot. If our tree planter is an eastern landholder desiring to restore a forest cover to the denuded farm, he will consult the species formerly occupants of the soil and be guided by the ordinary rules of reforestation, too extended to be here discussed.

But probably the greater number of those who read these columns are interested in tree planting chiefly as the art contributes to the adornment of street and park and lawn, to the decoration of the homestead, and precisely along these lines there seems to be everywhere room for improvement. In how many towns, not to say cities, in the United States have the trees been properly selected and regularly planted? In how many towns is the matter considered and systematically controlled? We have planted trees, but is it not true that each individual has obeyed his own individual impulse and as a result we have individualism run wild? In order to build a home for himself a man has been known to grub out or destroy a fine colony of young oaks or hickories, grade the surface from his lot and then in front of his premises plant a row of white maples or equally unsuitable species, having no regard to similar plantings on the part of his neighbors, but consulting some fancied convenience of his own, and that alone. Of course, the remedy for this is municipal control. The man who succeeds at last in surrounding his home with vistas of beauty effects it by carefully studying the situation as a whole, taking advantage of all that nature contributes, allowing art to supplement nature only where modification or addition is positively necessary. In the same way, if the city is to be properly planted and adorned, the entire property of the public must be treated as a unit, managed and planted as a single holding. A plan rapidly growing in popularity is to put all the tree planting of the town under control of a competent commission. When this is wisely done, we get system and may reasonably expect the very highest results.

In the city of Minneapolis every tree is under control of a committee having almost absolute power. The city plants and cares for all the trees within the municipality. A similar rule holds in Boston, Passaic, N. J., and several other American cities, to say nothing of the capitals of the old world.

It is said that such a commission is impracticable in our thousand smaller towns and villages. The reply is obvious that in such situation the problem is of proportionate simplicity, and it can be brought about by the people themselves if only they can be organized and in serious earnest. A village improvement society or simply a village committee is all we need. For instance, there is no better street tree in all the world than our American elm, fortunately the most common tree throughout the northern states, most easily transplanted, most certain to afford a symmetrical growth if simply let alone. Now, it ought to be possible even in the small village to plant the principal street with elms, a row on each side, all appropriately spaced and all in one straight line. We admit that if we were to judge by what is shown today such a thing would seem an impossibility, but it is possible all the same. In any village let such trees be today so planted, and in thirty years they will be the pride of the town, in a century its glory. The famous elms of Yale are the American elms, so nearly universal as to be practically free to the poorest corner from Connecticut to the Dakotas. In all our towns the white or soft maple has been too often made to do duty in lieu of the elm. It grows perhaps more rapidly, but nevertheless to less advantage. Soft maples have their use, but not along the streets, the peculiar branching giving the tree as it grows older a top more and more open. The principal branches lengthen rather stiffly and become presently easy victims of the storm. The hard maple is also objectionable along the streets, not that it is not an exceedingly beautiful tree, equally attractive by the dense shade of its summer green and by the richness of its autumn glory, but it lacks endurance in isolated situations.

But it is said that the elms are monotonous; we must have variety. Let it be so. Ample variety is easily within our reach. There are many other natives of our forests waiting our disposal. The linden is a beautiful tree and will make, where properly cared for, a most handsome row, its foliage rich and umbrageous, its flowers odorous and honey laden, a gift to the bees. The honey locust is by no means to be despised. The thornless variety is a lovely tree, perfectly healthy and hardy, the wood heavy and strong, the foliage feathery and graceful, the rather abundant fruit the only objection. The sycamore in some places makes beautiful rows, but seems not to thrive very well far from its favorite alluvial habitat. The horse chestnut is an exceedingly ornamental tree, generally hardy, unrivaled in its pyramids of tinted bloom. Nor should the catalpa, our native species, be forgotten. The hackberry makes a rounded head of soft, pale leaves, a clean, straight, elegant stem, and may well on cross streets supplant its more vigorous cousin, the elm.

Substitute For Quinine.

You think you are bilious. Well, I should think you would be! What did you expect your stomach and liver could stand? You ought to be thankful that you got off with simply being bilious. The wonder is that you have any stomach or liver left at all, says Medical Talk.

What would I advise? Well, in order to stir up your liver a little and give you a slight gymnastic exercise I would advise you to go and find the doctor who gave you 100 grains of quinine and give him a good licking. Hit him with your hands. Don't hit with a club or shoot him. Just use your open hand. After you have done this right I would quit using tobacco, if not entirely at least nearly so, say a little after supper each day. Use no alcoholic stimulants of any sort. Let your diet be simple and plain. Avoid excesses. Avoid everything fried during the hot season. Eat much fruit; drink much water. Take long nights' sleep. Behave yourself. Keep away from the doctors.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Anxious Daughter—Mother, did papa have his salary increased when he was married?

Mother—No, my child.

Anxious Daughter—I don't suppose he had any money saved up, had he?

Mother—Not a penny. He spent all he earned.

Anxious Daughter—Did you get along comfortably?

Mother—We were very happy.

Anxious Daughter—Well, you know, George hasn't been able to save a penny, but—

Mother—Now, Maria, if that poverty stricken fellow dares to show his face here again I'll get your father to turn him out!

DARK SOMALILAND

BUT LITTLE KNOWN OF THIS ODD CORNER OF EASTERN AFRICA.

Inhabited by a Nomadic Race Descended From the Arabs—Their Strange Religious Beliefs—Why England Must Crush the Mollah.

England seems never to be entirely at peace. Always there appears to be fighting in some one of her colonies or dependencies. Her latest trouble with the Mad Mollah, by which two British officers and a hundred men were slain, has aroused the foreign office, and a punishing force has been sent to crush that troublesome individual.

General W. H. Manning, who will have charge of affairs in Somaliland, is the principal military officer in the foreign office and secretary of the protectorate of Somaliland. His familiarity with the land of the Mad Mollah augurs ill for the welfare of that fanatic.

Arabs describe as "Bar Agan," or the "Unknown Land," that particular horn of Africa's eastern coast which lies directly opposite Aden, called Somali, and which from time immemorial has enjoyed so evil a reputation that not only has it been avoided by the vast majority of explorers of the Dark Continent, but has likewise in the partition of the latter by the great powers of Europe been left untouched save as regards the coast line, none of them caring to assume the responsibilities of the sovereignty of the hinterland.

There is an Italian, an English, an Abyssinian and a French Somaliland. But the rule of none of these four nations extends beyond the littoral, and as long as there is no undue attempt on the part of the natives of the hinterland to interfere with the trade that finds its outlet and inlet at the various stations on the coast the tribes of the interior are left to fight among themselves as much as they please, and no attempt is made to bring them under subjection.

The Somalis are a nomadic race and claim to be descended from fugitive Arabs who, abandoning their own country, landed on the Somali coast, subsequently intermarrying with the local tribes. The dawn of the Somali people coincides with the rise of Mohammed some 1,200 or 1,300 years ago. They, however, do not belong to the true African race, for they reveal no signs of the negroid type and from a slight resemblance in language are believed to be allied to the races of Hindustan.

The religion professed by the Somalis—that is to say, the most fanatical type of Islam—has the effect of keeping them engaged in constant warfare with their neighbors, the Abyssinians, who profess what is probably the lowest class of Christianity. Indeed, one of the most cherished objects of the Somali and, in fact, of all the warlike Mohammedan tribes of that portion of Africa, has been to prevent Abyssinia from securing or retaining possession of a seaport on the northeast coast of the Dark Continent.

This is due to an ancient Mohammedan prophecy, according to which Mecca, the most holy place of Islam, will one day be razed to the ground by the Abyssinians, an event which will be attended by the most disastrous consequences for the whole of the Moslem world.

It is owing to this belief that the British must crush the Mad Mollah, since to leave him unconquered would place them in bad light not only with the Egyptian army, but also in the eyes of the 80,000,000 Mohammedans in India.

To abandon Somaliland to his sway would work incalculable damage to her power and prestige in all other Mohammedan countries under her rule. Not only must he be defeated, but crushed absolutely. For in the case of Islam more than in that of any other creed the authenticity of the mahdis and prophets is gauged by the degree of their success against the infidels, and the leaders of any armed religious movement are not relegated to the ranks of false prophets until defeat, capture or death has convinced their coreligionists that they were frauds.

This is the task assigned to General Manning. To assist him he will have the troops already in Somaliland and an extra brigade from India. That he will eventually succeed is certain, but at what cost remains to be seen.

OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,
Professor of Botany, Iowa State University.

X.—Trees For Ornamental Purposes.

THUS far we have discussed trees chiefly in their broader economic aspects. We have thought of them as aggregated in forests either indigenous or artificial and as affecting the larger problems of human living and human happiness. Let us now consider the more simple relations which trees in smaller numbers bear to our enjoyment or comfort. Although as a people we destroy forests in a fashion for which history offers no precedent, we are nevertheless almost without exception tree planters. In our northern states at least a treeless yard or homestead is an exception so unusual as to be a matter of general comment. So strong is the tendency to plant trees about the house that the traveler may often find abundant attempts in this direction far out on the plains, where on account of continued dryness a tree cannot possibly grow. The pioneer in such a region will sometimes haul water for miles to pour around some transplanted cottonwood, watch it grow green for a season, only at length to see it perish in a day when the hot wind sweeps up across the desert. Our zeal is not according to knowledge, or, to put it the other way, our knowledge by no means equals our zeal.

To be reasonably successful tree planters there are several matters to which we must give heed. We must consider first of all the locality and its climatic conditions; second, the habit and history of the various species of trees from which selection must in any case be made, and, third, we must attend to the special purpose we have in view in making the particular plantations. This is all apart from the mere matter of setting the tree in the ground, pruning it, mulching it, etc., concerning which we may have something to say in the next chapter. Let us now study in the order named these several prerequisites to success. In the first place, it is evident that in tree planting much depends on having due regard to climatic and other local conditions. We must select species adapted to these conditions or our labor is in vain. In making such selection the flora of the locality or of the region round about is the absolute criterion. People in Iowa, for instance, need not put themselves to the trouble, as they have often done, to plant tulip trees in long rows about their holdings. Tulip trees were never an element of the Iowa forest or of any part of it. Neither do people of Ohio, though favored with the tulip trees, wisely attempt the several magnolias or the bald cypress, though these may find place in Kentucky or farther south. We must have respect to the natural distribution of these things or suffer the consequences. Beneficent nature has worked all this out for us, and, while for variety's sake we may introduce some novelties in her original scheme, we shall find ourselves everywhere, in the main, largely restricted to the results in her husbandry. As we go west in this latitude the number of arborcous species rapidly diminishes, as we have already stated, although by no means so rapidly as some have supposed. There are, for example, at least twenty-five species of trees and shrubs in the valley of the Missouri river where it begins to form the boundary of the state of Iowa. Farther west the number is of course smaller. The higher grounds are too dry to support trees at all. The few forms listed are limited to the water courses, diminished, dwarfed in size, until at last we begin to find the coniferous outliers of the Rocky mountain forests.

Over all this region, then, in general, trees native to the region may be successfully planted. But the second consideration mentioned, above all, now calls for remark. We must not only have regard to original distribution, but we must also study the habit, the habitat, of our different sorts of trees. This means simply a more exact examination of the particular case. Our native trees affect different situations, different soils, habitats we say, and, while many of them will grow almost anywhere if sufficient moisture is at hand, yet after all each does best in natural soil and surroundings. Thus willows grow by the water courses only. One common species is found generally on the driest hillsides. The black walnut rises to splendid perfection in rich alluvial soil; the beech and pine will flourish on a soil of sand and gravel; the white oak affects the loess capped ridge; the basswood and the hard maple, in the west at least, love the cool limestone ridge, the rocky bank; knee deep in the swamp stands the tamarack of the north, the cypress of the south; the bur oak lives in the sand, on sunny slopes, on dry, thin soils on the prairie, braving the prairie fires, even invading the desert in stunted, dwarfish growth to form the farthest western skirmish line of the Atlantic forest. These are only illustrations of how trees love special habitats. Nevertheless within their natural limits almost all trees flourish well in good, rich soil—not all. The expert forester knows his tree and knows exactly where it may be placed to best advantage. In general, as rainfall is less we need better soil and better cultivation.

In the third place, in selecting trees to plant the planter must have respect to his own ultimate purpose. If a prairie farmer desires to secure quick results, early protection, he will plant cottonwoods, white maples, box elders almost surely these because of their hardiness, ease of cultivation and rapidity of growth. Among them he will plant the larch, the Austrian pine, various evergreens, and if sufficiently farsighted he will intersperse seeds or seedlings of better varieties for the establishment of a permanent wood lot. If our tree planter is an eastern landholder desiring to restore a forest cover to the denuded farm, he will consult the species formerly occupants of the soil and be guided by the ordinary rules of reforestation, too extended to be here discussed.

But probably the greater number of those who read these columns are interested in tree planting chiefly as the art contributes to the adornment of street and park and lawn, to the decoration of the homestead, and precisely along these lines there seems to be everywhere room for improvement. In how many towns, not to say cities, in the United States have the trees been properly selected and regularly planted? In how many towns is the matter considered and systematically controlled? We have planted trees, but is it not true that each individual has obeyed his own individual impulse and as a result we have individualism run wild? In order to build a home for himself a man has been known to grub out or destroy a fine colony of young oaks or hickories, grade the surface from his lot and then in front of his premises plant a row of white maples or equally unsuitable species, having no regard to similar plantings on the part of his neighbors, but consulting some fancied convenience of his own, and that alone. Of course, the remedy for this is municipal control. The man who succeeds at last in surrounding his home with vistas of beauty effects it by carefully studying the situation as a whole, taking advantage of all that nature contributes, allowing art to supplement nature only where modification or addition is positively necessary. In the same way, if the city is to be properly planted and adorned, the entire property of the public must be treated as a unit, managed and planted as a single holding. A plan rapidly growing in popularity is to put all the tree planting of the town under control of a competent commission. When this is wisely done, we get system and may reasonably expect the very highest results.

In the city of Minneapolis every tree is under control of a committee having almost absolute power. The city plants and cares for all the trees within the municipality. A similar rule holds in Boston, Passaic, N. J., and several other American cities, to say nothing of the capitals of the old world.

It is said that such a commission is impracticable in our thousand smaller towns and villages. The reply is obvious that in such situation the problem is of proportionate simplicity, and it can be brought about by the people themselves if only they can be organized and in serious earnest. A village improvement society or simply a village committee is all we need. For instance, there is no better street tree in all the world than our American elm, fortunately the most common tree throughout the northern states, most easily transplanted, most certain to afford a symmetrical growth if simply let alone. Now, it ought to be possible even in the small village to plant the principal street with elms, a row on each side, all appropriately spaced and all in one straight line. We admit that if we were to judge by what is shown today such a thing would seem an impossibility, but it is possible all the same. In any village let such trees be today so planted, and in thirty years they will be the pride of the town, in a century its glory. The famous elms of Yale are the American elms, so nearly universal as to be practically free to the poorest corner from Connecticut to the Dakotas. In all our towns the white or soft maple has been too often made to do duty in lieu of the elm. It grows perhaps more rapidly, but nevertheless to less advantage. Soft maples have their use, but not along the streets, the peculiar branching giving the tree as it grows older a top more and more open. The principal branches lengthen rather stiffly and become presently easy victims of the storm. The hard maple is also objectionable along the streets, not that it is not an exceedingly beautiful tree, equally attractive by the dense shade of its summer green and by the richness of its autumn glory, but it lacks endurance in isolated situations.

But it is said that the elms are monotonous; we must have variety. Let it be so. Ample variety is easily within our reach. There are many other natives of our forests waiting our disposal. The linden is a beautiful tree and will make, where properly cared for, a most handsome row, its foliage rich and umbrageous, its flowers odorous and honey laden, a gift to the bees. The honey locust is by no means to be despised. The thornless variety is a lovely tree, perfectly healthy and hardy, the wood heavy and strong, the foliage feathery and graceful, the rather abundant fruit the only objection. The sycamore in some places makes beautiful rows, but seems not to thrive very well far from its favorite alluvial habitat. The horse chestnut is an exceedingly ornamental tree, generally hardy, unrivaled in its pyramids of tinted bloom. Nor should the catalpa, our native species, be forgotten. The hackberry makes a rounded head of soft, pale leaves, a clean, straight, elegant stem, and may well on cross streets supplant its more vigorous cousin, the elm.

Substitute For Quinine.

You think you are bilious. Well, I should think you would be! What did you expect your stomach and liver could stand? You ought to be thankful that you got off with simply being bilious. The wonder is that you have any stomach or liver left at all, says Medical Talk.

What would I advise? Well, in order to stir up your liver a little and give you a slight gymnastic exercise I would advise you to go and find the doctor who gave you 100 grains of quinine and give him a good licking. Hit him with your hands. Don't hit with a club or shoot him. Just use your open hand. After you have done this right I would quit using tobacco, if not entirely at least nearly so, say a little after supper each day. Use no alcoholic stimulants of any sort. Let your diet be simple and plain. Avoid excesses. Avoid everything fried during the hot season. Eat much fruit; drink much water. Take long nights' sleep. Behave yourself. Keep away from the doctors.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Anxious Daughter—Mother, did papa have his salary increased when he was married?

Mother—No, my child.

Anxious Daughter—I don't suppose he had any money saved up, had he?

Mother—Not a penny. He spent all he earned.

Anxious Daughter—Did you get along comfortably?

Mother—We were very happy.

Anxious Daughter—Well, you know, George hasn't been able to save a penny, but—

Mother—Now, Maria, if that poverty stricken fellow dares to show his face here again I'll get your father to turn him out!

DARK SOMALILAND

BUT LITTLE KNOWN OF THIS ODD CORNER OF EASTERN AFRICA.

Inhabited by a Nomadic Race Descended From the Arabs—Their Strange Religious Beliefs—Why England Must Crush the Mollah.

England seems never to be entirely at peace. Always there appears to be fighting in some one of her colonies or dependencies. Her latest trouble with the Mad Mollah, by which two British officers and a hundred men were slain, has aroused the foreign office, and a punishing force has been sent to crush that troublesome individual.

General W. H. Manning, who will have charge of affairs in Somaliland, is the principal military officer in the foreign office and secretary of the protectorate of Somaliland. His familiarity with the land of the Mad Mollah augurs ill for the welfare of that fanatic.

Arabs describe as "Bar Agan," or the "Unknown Land," that particular horn of Africa's eastern coast which lies directly opposite Aden, called Somali, and which from time immemorial has enjoyed so evil a reputation that not only has it been avoided by the vast majority of explorers of the Dark Continent, but has likewise in the partition of the latter by the great powers of Europe been left untouched save as regards the coast line, none of them caring to assume the responsibilities of the sovereignty of the hinterland.

There is an Italian, an English, an Abyssinian and a French Somaliland. But the rule of none of these four nations extends beyond the littoral, and as long as there is no undue attempt on the part of the natives of the hinterland to interffere with the trade that finds its outlet and inlet at the various stations on the coast the tribes of the interior are left to fight among themselves as much as they please, and no attempt is made to bring them under subjection.

The Somalis are a nomadic race and claim to be descended from fugitive Arabs who, abandoning their own country, landed on the Somali coast, subsequently intermarrying with the local tribes. The dawn of the Somali people coincides with the rise of Mohammed some 1,200 or 1,300 years ago. They, however, do not belong to the true African race, for they reveal no signs of the negroid type and from a slight resemblance in language are believed to be allied to the races of Hindustan.

The religion professed by the Somalis—that is to say, the most fanatical type of Islam—has the effect of keeping them engaged in constant warfare with their neighbors, the Abyssinians, who profess what is probably the lowest class of Christianity. Indeed, one of the most cherished objects of the Somali and, in fact, of all the warlike Mohammedan tribes of that portion of Africa, has been to prevent Abyssinia from securing or retaining possession of a seaport on the northeast coast of the Dark Continent.

This is due to an ancient Mohammedan prophecy, according to which Mecca, the most holy place of Islam, will one day be razed to the ground by the Abyssinians, an event which will be attended by the most disastrous consequences for the whole of the Moslem world.

It is owing to this belief that the British must crush the Mad Mollah, since to leave him unconquered would place them in bad light not only with the Egyptian army, but also in the eyes of the 80,000,000 Mohammedans in India.

To abandon Somaliland to his sway would work incalculable damage to her power and prestige in all other Mohammedan countries under her rule. Not only must he be defeated, but crushed absolutely. For in the case of Islam more than in that of any other creed the authenticity of the mahdis and prophets is gauged by the degree of their success against the infidels, and the leaders of any armed religious movement are not relegated to the ranks of false prophets until defeat, capture or death has convinced their coreligionists that they were frauds.

ORINOCO BLOCKADE.

British Want to Know Intentions of United States Regarding Manzanares.

VENEZUELA IS APPREHENSIVE.

Will Renew Diplomatic Relations With France, Which Have Been Ruptured Since 1894—President Castro Opening Prisons and Releasing Prisoners.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 1.—The United States is confronted with the question of declaring its attitude regarding the blockade of the Orinoco river, which has been declared by the Venezuelan government. The British authorities say they have asked United States Consul Smith what the intentions of the Washington government are regarding the steamer Manzanares, belonging to the Orinoco Steamship company, which is now here. Some days ago the British authorities announced their willingness to convey the Manzanares up the Orinoco, but withdrew their offer on the arrival of the United States gunboat Nashville, on the ground that the United States now has a warship in port and should convoy its own merchantmen. Consul Smith is conferring with Admiral Crowninshield and Admiral Sumner, it is believed, with regard to the Manzanares. The Nashville is suited to the purpose of convoying the Manzanares, but no action is possible until instructions have been received from Washington.

Embarrassing American Commerce.

The United States is the only nation which has not taken a decided stand regarding the blockade, and it is claimed that this situation is embarrassing American commerce, especially the Manzanares, which has been here since last June, her cargo spoiling and the delay involving a great loss to the company.

Since the proclamation of the blockade 1,375 ships of all nations, except the United States, and principally Venezuelan vessels have entered and left the Orinoco, and it is insisted that this fact constitutes the best evidence possible that the blockade is ineffective. Venezuelan gunboats have left the Orinoco unguarded for periods of two weeks at a time and the guns of the Fort Los Castillos, which were the only means of maintaining the blockade of Ciudad Bolivar after the withdrawal of the gunboats, have been removed.

Sends Minister to France.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—The Venezuelan General Antonio Velutini has been appointed minister plenipotentiary to France. He will renew the diplomatic relations between the countries, which have been ruptured since 1894. The precipitate nomination of General Velutini is due to the fears entertained by the Venezuelan government of complications with Germany. The newly appointed minister is of French descent.

The news that Germany will send three warships to reinforce the German squadron in Venezuelan waters, which already numbers three vessels, has produced a feeling of apprehension in this city, and especially in official circles.

President Castro has opened all the prisons in this city and at Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo and liberated the political offenders confined therein. Among the released prisoners are Olavarria, the brother-in-law of General Matos; Acedo, the latter's confidential agent, and the leading traders in Caracas named Travieso, Volcan and Nunez, who were arrested for complicity in the revolution. This act has produced a good impression, and it is reported that General J. M. Hernandez, called "El Mocho," and three others of the revolutionary leaders will also be liberated shortly.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

THE MINE STRIKE COMMISSION.

Arbitrators Will Hold Conference Tomorrow, Prior to Resumption of Hearing on Wednesday.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1.—A conference of the mine strike commissioners will be held here tomorrow night, prior to the resumption of hearings Wednesday morning. Commissioners Clark, Watkins and Parker are here, but doing absolutely nothing besides waiting for the return of the other commissioners. At tomorrow night's conference it is expected the commission will prepare a statement setting forth the purposes and results, or, rather, lack of results, of the 10-day recess and define specifically the position of the commission regarding the recess.

Expert accountants of both sides are going over the company's books with a view of eliminating as far as possible the contentions regarding the mathematics of the controversy, particularly as to wage figures. This was the ostensibly primal purpose of the recess. The negotiations for amicable adjustment of all the matters in dispute set back the undertaking of this work five days. As a consequence the commission will have to busy itself for a week or so at some other feature of the case while awaiting a report from the belated accountants.

CAPE MAY IMPROVEMENTS.

Company Formed to Develop Summer Resort at Outlay of $11,000,000.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Announcement was made last night that documents were filed at Trenton Saturday incorporating the East Cape May company, having for its object the improvement and development of Cape May, the oldest seashore resort in the country. A gentleman interested in the project says capitalists have bought over 4,000 acres of land in and around the city and propose making changes that will revolutionize the resort. Their plans include the building of a new city, which, they say, they intend to make one of the finest all-around resorts in the world. In this they declare they will be aided by the United States government and the Pennsylvania and Reading railroad companies. Estimates of the cost of the project point to ultimate outlay of $11,000,000.

In order to attract owners of yachts deep waterways will be formed, and the company intends constructing a lake for yachts with a water surface covering hundreds of acres. Conferences with government officials at Washington have resulted in promises to deepen Cold Spring inlet so that the largest ocean-going yachts will be able to enter the lake. It is planned to build two and perhaps three of the most modern seaside hotels. This winter 100 cottages will be built, which will cost $10,000 each. The first hotel, for which plans have been completed, will cost $1,000,000. The projectors say 3,000 men will be employed all winter on the improvements.

YOUNG CLERK KILLED.

Interior of Bank Showed Evidences of Terrible Struggle.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 1.—Wesley Reynolds, aged 16, employed as clerk in the bank at Westville, in this county, was shot and killed at an early hour yesterday morning by robbers, who had broken into the place and were about to blow open the safe. The men escaped in a stolen rig. Adolph Koontz, passing the building early yesterday morning, discovered a broken window and called to Reynolds, but received no response. He reported the circumstance to E. S. Smith, owner of the bank, who investigated, finding his clerk dead in a pool of blood on the floor. At his side were an empty revolver and another partially empty. Examination showed evidences of a desperate battle. More than 20 shots had been exchanged. From the trail of blood left by the robbers it is believed one of the men was wounded. The rig in which they escaped was abandoned six miles south of Westville. Sheriff Small and a posse of men are scouring the country for the men. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the apprehension of the robbers. Pinkerton detectives, sent to the scene by the American Bankers' association, of which the Westville bank is a member, are also working on the case. Young Reynolds received three bullet wounds, one through the head, the second through the neck and the third through the heart.

Suspected Woman Suicides.

Dexter, Me., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Hattie L. Whitten, who was arrested Saturday on the charge of having poisoned her 9-year-old daughter, from whose funeral she had just returned, committed suicide yesterday by hanging while in the custody of the deputy sheriff. Mrs. Whitten is suspected also of having caused the death of an older daughter, aged 11, on Sept. 19 last, and this body had been exhumed. Both children died suddenly when previously they had appeared to be in the best of health. Mrs. Whitten's husband also died suddenly two years ago. The children were insured for $56 and $85, respectively. As a cause of death the physicians's certificate mentioned meningitis and heart failure. An autopsy on the body of the younger girl disclosed arsenic and strychnine.

Fon du Lac, Wis., Dec. 1.—All the telegraph operators on the Wisconsin Central railroad have been granted an increase in salary, amounting to $5 a month for every employe in that department. Delicate Tact.

I watched them on the street car—the little mother and her manly boy of nine or ten.

Before them was seated a white haired man, whose almost entirely sightless eyes were hidden behind a pair of dark glasses. The man was trusting to instinct or intuition, whichever one may call it, more than to sight to tell him when he had reached his particular corner. Closely he bent his face to the glass and hesitatingly reached his hand toward the bell.

"Mother," whispered the manly boy, "may I not ask him where he wants to get off and help him too?"

One glance at the proud, pale face, and the little mother answered:

"No, son; I don't believe he would like to be made feel dependent."

Then as quick as thought she said in a loud tone:

"See, son; the next corner is Seventh street, then Sixth and Broadway. The hotel is on Broadway. Don't let mother miss it."

Promptly the man's hand went to the bell. Seventh was evidently the street he wanted.

I fancy that when that boy has grown to be a man any expression of the fine charity that is now latent in his heart will be accompanied by tact in action and that in looking back over the years he will remember the lessons; that they were good ones; that his mother taught him.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication.

Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion.

Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation.

Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition.

Without nutrition there cannot be health.

Without health what is life worth?

Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

Thus Spoke the Cynic.

"Curious thing about a man with a watch is that if you see him take it out and look at it and you ask him two seconds later what time it is he never remembers. He has to look at it again."

"Yes; I've noticed that he'll always do it—if his watch is a fine one."—Chicago Tribune.

Fully Competent.

"What we require," said the managing editor, "is the services of a man capable of taking full charge of our 'Query Box.' Are you capable of answering all kinds of questions?"

"Well, I rather think I ought to be," replied the applicant. "I'm the father of eleven children."

Stuffed With Food, Starved For Air.

You can live forty days without food, but you cannot live four minutes without air. These things being true, is it wise to stuff ourselves with food and starve ourselves for want of air?—Philistine.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind. "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventitive and cure for croup." A NEW WHITE HOUSE

IN EFFECT THAT IS THE RESULT OF THE RECENT CHANGES.

Executive Mansion Restored to Style of Architecture In Which It Was Originally Designed—The New Office Building and Esplanade.

When the doors of the rejuvenated White House are thrown open to the public, they will disclose practically a new interior in the historic home of the nation's chief executives.

Some adverse comment has been made concerning the new building erected south of the executive mansion for the president's offices, the objection being made that neither in its outlines nor general effect is it in keeping with the White House proper, whose exterior aspect remains unchanged.

The experts say this comment is ill advised, for when the grounds are rearranged and everything connected with the building operations is removed the entire effect of the new and the old buildings will be most attractive and harmonious.

With the new interior of the executive mansion, however, not the smallest criticism will have weight. With happiest effect it has been sought to restore the executive mansion as nearly as possible to the semblance of the early Italian renaissance, in which style it was originally designed.

The grand entrance to the east by which the public and invited guests will approach for receptions will not be completed before February, but the historic old white front portico will be in readiness before the end of this month, at which time the splendid state dining room will be completely finished.

On entering by the front portico, which after February will only be used by the president's immediate family, the effect is in its truest sense classic and stately. A Pompeiian effect has been imparted by the removal of the old stained glass screen and substitution of six white marble pillars.

The floor will be of marble, with the walls and high ceiling in white in simple yet classical treatment.

On the large wall space to the right of the entrance will be from floor to ceiling a plate glass mirror, the duplicate to which will face it from the opposite side. Before that on the right will be the colossal statue of Washington by Houdon now in the capitol at Richmond, while before the mirror at the left will, it is expected, be the St. Gaudens bronze statue of Lincoln, at present in one of the public parks in Chicago.

This placing of the statues will give an endless effect of vista and statuary. Immediately facing the entrance the spaces between two of the farther columns on either side will be marble Pompeiian vases filled with tall palms.

THE WHITE HOUSE ESPLANADE.

For the space nearest to the state apartments there has been ordered from India a splendid brilliant red rug seventy-two feet long.

Down to the floorway both long western windows open out on to the 165 foot long esplanade between the mansion proper and the new offices. This, with a three foot high wall about it, will be an ideal place to which Mrs. Roosevelt is already looking forward to giving teas and afternoon receptions in the early spring and summer.

At the far end from the house a fountain will leap high in air, while the entire length of wall all about will serve for most artistic effects in palms and tall growing plants, through which most enchanting vistas will be had in all directions and especially overlooking the monument grounds.

It is intended to heighten this present effect by having the south grounds assume the old world Italian garden plan, in which high box brushes and hedges, stone seats and fountains will play a leading part. The immediate foreground will be a massing of brilliant flowers.

This was Thomas Jefferson's idea in first designing the terraces which are now being restored at either side of the White House.

By the removal of the executive offices from the White House the mansion reverts to the uses for which it was intended—the residence of the chief executive and the social entertainment of his guests.

ORINOCO BLOCKADE.

British Want to Know Intentions of United States Regarding Manzanares.

VENEZUELA IS APPREHENSIVE.

Will Renew Diplomatic Relations With France, Which Have Been Ruptured Since 1894—President Castro Opening Prisons and Releasing Prisoners.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 1.—The United States is confronted with the question of declaring its attitude regarding the blockade of the Orinoco river, which has been declared by the Venezuelan government. The British authorities say they have asked United States Consul Smith what the intentions of the Washington government are regarding the steamer Manzanares, belonging to the Orinoco Steamship company, which is now here. Some days ago the British authorities announced their willingness to convey the Manzanares up the Orinoco, but withdrew their offer on the arrival of the United States gunboat Nashville, on the ground that the United States now has a warship in port and should convoy its own merchantmen. Consul Smith is conferring with Admiral Crowninshield and Admiral Sumner, it is believed, with regard to the Manzanares. The Nashville is suited to the purpose of convoying the Manzanares, but no action is possible until instructions have been received from Washington.

Embarrassing American Commerce.

The United States is the only nation which has not taken a decided stand regarding the blockade, and it is claimed that this situation is embarrassing American commerce, especially the Manzanares, which has been here since last June, her cargo spoiling and the delay involving a great loss to the company.

Since the proclamation of the blockade 1,375 ships of all nations, except the United States, and principally Venezuelan vessels have entered and left the Orinoco, and it is insisted that this fact constitutes the best evidence possible that the blockade is ineffective. Venezuelan gunboats have left the Orinoco unguarded for periods of two weeks at a time and the guns of the Fort Los Castillos, which were the only means of maintaining the blockade of Ciudad Bolivar after the withdrawal of the gunboats, have been removed.

Sends Minister to France.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—The Venezuelan General Antonio Velutini has been appointed minister plenipotentiary to France. He will renew the diplomatic relations between the countries, which have been ruptured since 1894. The precipitate nomination of General Velutini is due to the fears entertained by the Venezuelan government of complications with Germany. The newly appointed minister is of French descent.

The news that Germany will send three warships to reinforce the German squadron in Venezuelan waters, which already numbers three vessels, has produced a feeling of apprehension in this city, and especially in official circles.

President Castro has opened all the prisons in this city and at Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo and liberated the political offenders confined therein. Among the released prisoners are Olavarria, the brother-in-law of General Matos; Acedo, the latter's confidential agent, and the leading traders in Caracas named Travieso, Volcan and Nunez, who were arrested for complicity in the revolution. This act has produced a good impression, and it is reported that General J. M. Hernandez, called "El Mocho," and three others of the revolutionary leaders will also be liberated shortly.

THE MINE STRIKE COMMISSION.

Arbitrators Will Hold Conference Tomorrow, Prior to Resumption of Hearing on Wednesday.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1.—A conference of the mine strike commissioners will be held here tomorrow night, prior to the resumption of hearings Wednesday morning. Commissioners Clark, Watkins and Parker are here, but doing absolutely nothing besides waiting for the return of the other commissioners. At tomorrow night's conference it is expected the commission will prepare a statement setting forth the purposes and results, or, rather, lack of results, of the 10-day recess and define specifically the position of the commission regarding the recess.

Expert accountants of both sides are going over the company's books with a view of eliminating as far as possible the contentions regarding the mathematics of the controversy, particularly as to wage figures. This was the ostensibly primal purpose of the recess. The negotiations for amicable adjustment of all the matters in dispute set back the undertaking of this work five days. As a consequence the commission will have to busy itself for a week or so at some other feature of the case while awaiting a report from the belated accountants.

CAPE MAY IMPROVEMENTS.

Company Formed to Develop Summer Resort at Outlay of $11,000,000.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Announcement was made last night that documents were filed at Trenton Saturday incorporating the East Cape May company, having for its object the improvement and development of Cape May, the oldest seashore resort in the country. A gentleman interested in the project says capitalists have bought over 4,000 acres of land in and around the city and propose making changes that will revolutionize the resort. Their plans include the building of a new city, which, they say, they intend to make one of the finest all-around resorts in the world. In this they declare they will be aided by the United States government and the Pennsylvania and Reading railroad companies. Estimates of the cost of the project point to ultimate outlay of $11,000,000.

In order to attract owners of yachts deep waterways will be formed, and the company intends constructing a lake for yachts with a water surface covering hundreds of acres. Conferences with government officials at Washington have resulted in promises to deepen Cold Spring inlet so that the largest ocean-going yachts will be able to enter the lake. It is planned to build two and perhaps three of the most modern seaside hotels. This winter 100 cottages will be built, which will cost $10,000 each. The first hotel, for which plans have been completed, will cost $1,000,000. The projectors say 3,000 men will be employed all winter on the improvements.

YOUNG CLERK KILLED.

Interior of Bank Showed Evidences of Terrible Struggle.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 1.—Wesley Reynolds, aged 16, employed as clerk in the bank at Westville, in this county, was shot and killed at an early hour yesterday morning by robbers, who had broken into the place and were about to blow open the safe. The men escaped in a stolen rig. Adolph Koontz, passing the building early yesterday morning, discovered a broken window and called to Reynolds, but received no response. He reported the circumstance to E. S. Smith, owner of the bank, who investigated, finding his clerk dead in a pool of blood on the floor. At his side were an empty revolver and another partially empty. Examination showed evidences of a desperate battle. More than 20 shots had been exchanged. From the trail of blood left by the robbers it is believed one of the men was wounded. The rig in which they escaped was abandoned six miles south of Westville. Sheriff Small and a posse of men are scouring the country for the men. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the apprehension of the robbers. Pinkerton detectives, sent to the scene by the American Bankers' association, of which the Westville bank is a member, are also working on the case. Young Reynolds received three bullet wounds, one through the head, the second through the neck and the third through the heart.

Suspected Woman Suicides.

Dexter, Me., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Hattie L. Whitten, who was arrested Saturday on the charge of having poisoned her 9-year-old daughter, from whose funeral she had just returned, committed suicide yesterday by hanging while in the custody of the deputy sheriff. Mrs. Whitten is suspected also of having caused the death of an elder daughter, aged 11, on Sept. 19 last, and this body had been exhumed. Both children died suddenly when previously they had appeared to be in the best of health. Mrs. Whitten's husband also died suddenly two years ago. The children were insured for $56 and $85, respectively. As a cause of death the physicians's certificate mentioned meningitis and heart failure. An autopsy on the body of the younger girl disclosed arsenic and strychnine.

Delicate Tact.

I watched them on the street car—the little mother and her manly boy of nine or ten.

Before them was seated a white haired man, whose almost entirely sightless eyes were hidden behind a pair of dark glasses. The man was trusting to instinct or intuition, whichever one may call it, more than to sight to tell him when he had reached his particular corner. Closely he bent his face to the glass and hesitatingly reached his hand toward the bell.

"Mother," whispered the manly boy, "may I not ask him where he wants to get off and help him too?"

One glance at the proud, pale face, and the little mother answered:

"No, son; I don't believe he would like to be made feel dependent."

Then as quick as thought she said in a loud tone:

"See, son; the next corner is Seventh street, then Sixth and Broadway. The hotel is on Broadway. Don't let mother miss it."

Promptly the man's hand went to the bell. Seventh was evidently the street he wanted.

I fancy that when that boy has grown to be a man any expression of the fine charity that is now latent in his heart will be accompanied by tact in action and that in looking back over the years he will remember the lessons; that they were good ones; that his mother taught him.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication.

Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion.

Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation.

Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition.

Without nutrition there cannot be health.

Without health what is life worth?

Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

Thus Spoke the Cynic.

"Curious thing about a man with a watch is that if you see him take it out and look at it and you ask him two seconds later what time it is he never remembers. He has to look at it again."

"Yes; I've noticed that he'll always do it—if his watch is a fine one."—Chicago Tribune.

Fully Competent.

"What we require," said the managing editor, "is the services of a man capable of taking full charge of our 'Query Box.' Are you capable of answering all kinds of questions?"

"Well, I rather think I ought to be," replied the applicant. "I'm the father of eleven children."

Stuffed With Food, Starved For Air.

You can live forty days without food, but you cannot live four minutes without air. These things being true, is it wise to stuff ourselves with food and starve ourselves for want of air?—Philistine.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind. "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventitive and cure for croup." A NEW WHITE HOUSE

IN EFFECT THAT IS THE RESULT OF THE RECENT CHANGES.

Executive Mansion Restored to Style of Architecture In Which It Was Originally Designed—The New Office Building and Esplanade.

When the doors of the rejuvenated White House are thrown open to the public, they will disclose practically a new interior in the historic home of the nation's chief executives.

Some adverse comment has been made concerning the new building erected south of the executive mansion for the president's offices, the objection being made that neither in its outlines nor general effect is it in keeping with the White House proper, whose exterior aspect remains unchanged.

The experts say this comment is ill advised, for when the grounds are rearranged and everything connected with the building operations is removed the entire effect of the new and the old buildings will be most attractive and harmonious.

With the new interior of the executive mansion, however, not the smallest criticism will have weight. With happiest effect it has been sought to restore the executive mansion as nearly as possible to the semblance of the early Italian renaissance, in which style it was originally designed.

The grand entrance to the east by which the public and invited guests will approach for receptions will not be completed before February, but the historic old white front portico will be in readiness before the end of this month, at which time the splendid state dining room will be completely finished.

On entering by the front portico, which after February will only be used by the president's immediate family, the effect is in its truest sense classic and stately. A Pompeiian effect has been imparted by the removal of the old stained glass screen and substitution of six white marble pillars.

The floor will be of marble, with the walls and high ceiling in white in simple yet classical treatment.

On the large wall space to the right of the entrance will be from floor to ceiling a plate glass mirror, the duplicate to which will face it from the opposite side. Before that on the right will be the colossal statue of Washington by Houdon now in the capitol at Richmond, while before the mirror at the left will, it is expected, be the St. Gaudens bronze statue of Lincoln, at present in one of the public parks in Chicago.

This placing of the statues will give an endless effect of vista and statuary. Immediately facing the entrance the spaces between two of the farther columns on either side will be marble Pompeiian vases filled with tall palms.

THE WHITE HOUSE ESPLANADE.

For the space nearest to the state apartments there has been ordered from India a splendid brilliant red rug seventy-two feet long.

Down to the floorway both long western windows open out on to the 165 foot long esplanade between the mansion proper and the new offices. This, with a three foot high wall about it, will be an ideal place to which Mrs. Roosevelt is already looking forward to giving teas and afternoon receptions in the early spring and summer.

At the far end from the house a fountain will leap high in air, while the entire length of wall all about will serve for most artistic effects in palms and tall growing plants, through which most enchanting vistas will be had in all directions and especially overlooking the monument grounds.

It is intended to heighten this present effect by having the south grounds assume the old world Italian garden plan, in which high box brushes and hedges, stone seats and fountains will play a leading part. The immediate foreground will be a massing of brilliant flowers.

This was Thomas Jefferson's idea in first designing the terraces which are now being restored at either side of the White House.

By the removal of the executive offices from the White House the mansion reverts to the uses for which it was intended—the residence of the chief executive and the social entertainment of his guests.

AN AWFUL EXPERIENCE IN THE OHIO'S ICY WATER FIGHTING TO REACH SHORE

To Avoid Being Carried to Pittsburg W. S. Allen Took a Leap That Might Have Cost His Life.

Struggling in the icy waters of the Ohio, W. S. Allen, a young man well known in the city, had an awful experience and a narrow escape from death yesterday morning at the foot of Market street. That he was not carried to a watery grave is due to the slowness of the current at that point and his expert ability as a swimmer.

Allen is an employe of the Pilgrim Coal company and was on the float anchored a short distance above the wharf boat when the Clipper, a pool towboat of Pittsburg, landed for a supply of fuel. After the boat's crew had placed a sufficient amount in the fire boxes the boat pulled out from the float and dropped down to Market street, where she had left her tow of empty barges which had been gathered up near Bellaire.

Allen accepted the chance for a free ride and boarded the boat for the short trip. In less time than he had anticipated the crew had the boat attached to the fleet and while he was slowly enjoying himself inspecting her machinery in the engine room he was much surprised and somewhat taken back upon feeling the boat in motion. He realized that she had cut loose from short and had started up the river.

Knowing that the boat would make no more landings before arriving at Pittsburg and not wishing to visit the Smoky City, Allen determined upon a plan to reach shore which undoubtedly might have cost him his life. Without any apparent study over the situation and after the boat had reached a point some distance from the shore, he daringly leaped into the air and fell with a big splash into the cold water. His clothing and heavy shoes being a handrance he had an undesirable proposition ahead of his in his endeavor to reach shore and safety.

Like a Trojan he battled with the angry waves and being an excellent swimmer finally touched shore. And although nearly exhausted after his strenuous efforts he quickly made for home and got a change of clothing, took some stimulating medicine and in a few hours was little the worse for his experience.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AT HIS DESK.

This picture, which was made from a photograph, shows the chief magistrate of the nation hard at work at his desk. The writing and revision of a message to congress is not an easy task, but Mr. Roosevelt, who was a literary man before he was a president, is well equipped for the work.

MUCH MORE SENSATION THAN FACT IN THE STORY ABOUT MEREDITH & CO.

Local Liquor Dealer Admits Having Made a Mistake, But Says Reports Were Exaggerated.

The sensational story purported to have come from East Liverpool and published in the Cincinnati Enquirer Saturday, concerning the firm of G. W. Meredith & Co., has created no end of comment in this city where the facts are well known. The article in question was evidently fixed up for the purpose of creating a stir, but the entire canard has been exploded in the light of the true version, which is given out by interested parties here.

The regular East Liverpool correspondent of the Enquirer did not send the article, and it is the general belief among those best posted on matters of this kind that the article was written in Cincinnati by Cincinnati parties.

G. W. Meredith was seen this morning and is inclined to laugh at the attempt to make a sensation of the affair. He said:

"The regulations governing the revenue department are very strict, not more so perhaps than they should be, but rules must be observed and in this case our firm has been thrown liable. I do not deny this, but am constrained to say that under the same circumstances other firms would and doubtless have made the same mistake.

"We had a large consignment of whisky which was delayed in transit. Many of our customers had been without these goods for some time, and it was our sole object to supply them as soon as possible after their receipt. The law requires that an accurate record be kept, and every detail noted upon blanks supplied for that purpose, before any of the goods are sent out. In the haste to accommodate our customers certain clerical work was neglected, and this is the way we got into it. There is a penalty for the offense, and this we will undoubtedly have to pay.

"The revenue officers have been in East Liverpool no oftener recently than upon other occasions, as it has been the custom of the collectors to make our establishment their headquarters. Our relations have been of the most cordial always. They are not different at this time."

BEGGING A CHEW CAUSED A FIGHT

Man Who Was Hungry For Tobacco Was Landed Behind Jail Bars.

STORY OF THE OTHER MAN

Differs From His In Several Particulars—Each Charges the Other With Having Provoked the Quarrel, Which Was a Spirited One.

Blood was spurting from an ugly cut on his upper lip, a black and blue mark was under his right eye and his general appearance led one at first sight to believe that he had been in a regular Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight, when J. G. Kauffman appeared at central station last evening and told a tale that resulted in a short time in the arrest of George Wolfe by Officers McDermott and Dawson.

Wolfe was not placed in jail, he furnishing $10 for his appearance before the mayor this morning. When arraigned he pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault and battery and the mayor set the date of trial for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Kauffman was present when Wolfe was arraigned and both men were given an opportunity to tell the story of the affair. Kauffman said:

"I had been at Wellsville and got off a street car at the Diamond and started up Sixth street toward my home. I was accosted by Wolfe, who asked me for a chew of tobacco. I told him that I did not have any and that I did not know why he should ask me for tobacco when he did not know me. I then started on my way and Wolfe, after beckoning for a partner, intercepted me before I got to Washington streets. Wolfe then without provocation struck me in the face."

Wolfe said: "I was standing on Sixth street talking to a friend when Kauffman came along. I thought he was a man that I know whose given name is Ed and I said: 'Hello, Ed! give me a chew.' Kauffman stopped and came up to me and said that I had insulted him. I told him that I did not think the simple asking for a chew was an insult. He got mad and called me 'one of the smart set' and several other names. I did not want any trouble and started up street. When I got near the Arcade restaurant I motioned for a friend to come over. Before he got to me Kauffman approached and when my friend did arrive Kauffman shoved him away, telling him not to mix up in the trouble. I did not know there was any trouble brewing and was surprised when Kauffman slapped me in the face. He struck me twice and then in self-defense I struck him."

Witnesses will be subpoenaed for both parties and the trial will be awaited with interest, inasmuch as both are well known in the city.

ROBBED BY GIRLS WHO CARESSED HIM

THE UNFORTUNATE EXPERIENCE OF A WELLSVILLE MAN.

Two Colored Damsels of This City Said to Have Relieved Him of $50.

While one woman was fondly caressing him, patting his cheeks in a loving manner and calling him sweet names, Peter Carsey, a laborer of Wellsville, was robbed of a pocketbook containing $50 in bills early Saturday evening by another woman, an accomplice of the first.

After being victimized by the clever pickpockets Carsey, between his loud outbursts of sobbing, told the story of his experience, disastrous from a pecuniary standpoint, to the police at central station. He is about 50 years of age and is employed at a mill in Wellsville, receiving $1.35 per day for his services, considering which fact he was certainly not able to lose the amount stolen. Saturday afternoon he came up from the neighboring city and after making a few purchases of necessaries thought he would make a friendly call on a friend at a saloon on Second street. To the friend he conversed pleasantly for a few minutes and in the meantime dank a glass or two of beer. He is not accustomed to drinking, and although he imbibed scantily his head was a little light, and when he started home by way of the rear exit he fell easy prey to the women who were in waiting for him. They are both colored and have bad reputations.

Warrants have been issued for their arrest, according to a statement made by Chief Thompson yesterday, and the entire police force have been detailed on a hunt for them. One of them is known as Mrs. Lee and the other as Mrs. Saunders. The latter was arrested several weeks ago by Officer McDermott and taken before the mayor as a suspicious person. She was accused of stealing $30 from a rather prominent man of the city. It is said that before she came to the city she had served several terms for similar offenses, and it was the intention of the mayor upon her arraignment to order her committed to the workhouse, but when she promised to correct her ways and live a respectable life the mayor had compassion and released her.

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

Arriving Passenger Could Not Believe That He Was in East Liverpool.

EVERYTHING WAS CHANGED

And the Surprised Man Said It All Reminded Him of a Fairy Tale — A Peculiar Man's Peculiar Experience in tne Crockery City.

Wearing a plug hat, a necktie emblematic of the grand old stars and stripes, President Roosevelt's likeness over his heart and other conspicuous decorations, Frederick Vogel alighted at the depot yesterday morning from the west bound train. His makeup with peculiar actions at once made him the cynosure of all eyes.

For a moment he stood as if spellbound, gazing in an absent-minded way into space. Spectators were reminded of the cartoonist's picture of a rural man's first visit to New York city, looking with awe at some sky scraper. Officer McDermott was in the crowd and he at once decided that the man was laboring under the stress of insanity. Up to the stranger walked the officer and abruptly blurted:

"What are you looking for, old man?"

"What am I looking for? I am looking for Liverpool."

The officer was then more convinced that the man was demented when he continued.

"The conductor on that train told me that this was East Liverpool. I believed him because I thought he knew his business. And maybe he does, but there is one thing certain

HOMELESS GIRL HAS FALLEN ILL

Case of Scarlet Fever in a Broading House Develops Complications.

THE PATIENT'S REMOVAL

Is Desired By the Proprietress And the Township Trustees Have Been Consulted—Sad Plight of a Colored Domestic from Coraopolis.

Miss Genevieve Daniels, a young colored girl of Coraopolis, is in the city in a plight to be envied by none. She is seriously ill of scarlet fever and without friends or relatives here. She is 17 years of age and came to this city several weeks ago in search of employment. She was hired by a family as a domestic and was doing well and enjoying herself until the latter part of last week.

She began feeling indisposed on Friday and went to the home of Mrs. Hattie Minnis, Third street, and asked if she might lie down on a cot, stating that she felt sick. Mrs. Minnis allowed her to do so and when evening came she was so sick that she pleaded for further rest.

Mrs. Minnis through pity granted the request and yesterday a physician was called. He pronounced the girl sick with scarlet fever and ordered the house quarantined. Sanitary Policeman Burgess carried out the order and then objections on the part of Mrs. Minnis arose. She keeps boarders, and upon learning that the house was under quarantine, they decamped. She has no one but herself to depend upon for a livelihood, and in consideration of big rent, losing her boarders and other inconveniences she notified the health officer that she would not care for the sick girl and wanted her removed.

The township trustees were notified of the case and called upon Mrs. Minnis, assuring her that they would pay her for caring for the girl, but Mrs. Minnis feels that even if they do pay her that she will be greatly the loser and states that she will not accept the patient as hers. Some mutual agreement will likely be made this evening, but what it will be the officers are as yet not able to state.

MANUFACTURERS LEAVE FOR NATIONAL MEETING

Almost all of the manufacturing potters or their representatives, of this city, to attend the annual convention of the United States Manufacturing Potters' association, to be held in Washington, D. C., will leave here this evening on a special car attached to the regular 6:40 C. & P. train. They will go direct to the Capitol City without change, and are due to arrive at 8:30 tomorrow morning. The convention is to be held in the new Hotel Willard, at the corner of Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. It is one of the finest hostelries in the world and all local men will be its guests. The first session of the convention will be held tomorrow, but it is not likely that any matters of importance will come up before until Wednesday.

While the matter has not been publicly discussed it would not be surprising to see the presidency of the organization fall to an East Liverpool manufacturer this year. Indeed, the News Review is able to state, with a fair degree of certainty, that Joseph G. Lee, of the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company, will be named and supported for this high office by a large number of the delegates to the convention.

Following is the list of those who are to leave this evening:

W. H. Phillips and J. T. Smith, of Smith & Phillips company; J. R. Warner, of the National; S. C. Williams, Electrical Supply company; L. I. Aaron and W. E. Wells, Laughlin China company; Will Louthan, Louthan Supply company; Will Vodrey, Vodrey Bros.' Pottery company; H. P. Knoblock, Dresden Pottery company; H. A. Keffer, Sevres China company; George C. Thompson, C. C. Thompson Pottery company; H. N. Harker, Harker Pottery company; W. S. Brunt, William Brunt Pottery company; W. L. Smith, D. E. McNicol Pottery company; Colonel John N. Taylor, Knowles, Taylor & Knowles; W. L. Taylor, Taylor, Smith & Taylor company; George C. Murphy, Fred Lawrence and N. A. Frederick, East Liverpool Potteries company; George Burford, Burford Bros.' Pottery company; E. M. Knowles, E. M. Knowles company, Chester.

The following parties will accompany the local delegation: T. R. Bradshaw, Niles, O.; Joseph Mayer, Beaver Falls, Pa.; H. M. Preston, National Lead & Oil company, Pittsburg, Pa.; J. T. Croxall, East Liverpool; W. H. Deidrick, Dresden China company, Salineville; Harry Winteringer, of Steubenville Pottery company.

TWO CHARGES FILED

GROWING OUT OF THE SLAUGHTER OF A PET DOG.

Edward McGavern Accused of Assault And Battery And Cruelty to Animals.

The affidavits issued in 'Squire McLane's court Saturday afternoon by William Humble charging Edward McGavern with carrying concealed weapons and needlessly mutilating and killing a dog, which belonged to Chas. Ipe, were withdrawn before warrants were made out and unless the mind of Mr. Ipe is chnged materially McGavern will be arrested and taken before Mayor Davidson to answer to two different charges.

Ipe, through his attorney, M. J. McGarry, has had two charges compiled and will prefer them before the mayor this afternoon. One of them is for assault and battery and the other for cruelty to animals. Since the particulars of the alleged dastardly deed of McGavern was made public he has been almost the one topic of conversation. Sentiment is strongly against him and many have been the words of censure spoken.

REDISTRICTING

A Problem In Which the Courts May Yet Have to Take a Hand.

At the meeting of the re-districting committee of council held late in the week, nothing was accomplished. The members of the committee will have difficulty in getting together upon the question, and it is just possible the common pleas court will be called upon to do the work.

There have been but two definite plans submitted in a complete form to the present, Dr. Marshall's and that of O. D. Nice. Of the two, the idea of Dr. Marshall is the more favored by the people at least, and they are parties who must be suited. It is probable Dr. Marshall's plan will be taken as a basis upon which to work.

FIRST PACKET SINCE AUGUST

Keystone State Reaches Here From Cincinnati With an Excellent Trip.

OTHER BOATS ARE RUNNING

Several Having Big Lists of Passengers For This Point—The River Likely to Remain Stationary For Some Days Now.

The first packet to reach this port from Cincinnati since the suspension of navigation last August was the Keystone State, of the Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet line. She touched the wharf last night at 8 o'clock with one of the best trips she ever carried, both as to freight and passengers. Most of her freight was for Pittsburg but 27 from her passenger list disembarked here. Captain Knox was in command, Dayton Randolph and William Anderson are her pilots, George Berridge, her stewar, Will Rimball, purser, and Eugene Morris, chief mate.

The Kanawha arrived from Charleston last evening at 7 o'clock with a big passenger and freight trip. Twenty-five of her passengers were for this point. She left here a consignment of 20,000 hoops.

The Ben Hur reached here at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon from down the river points with a big passenger list for this point. She was at the wharf at 4 o'clock this afternoon on her down trip.

The Keystone State is due at the wharf at 8 o'clock this evening bound for Cincinnati.

The three boats yesetrday all had a big passenger list for this point, the total aggregating 75.

Seven "movings" were received at the wharfboat yesterday from the different boats.

The rise in the Allegheny river will keep the river stationary for three or four days even if there is no more rain or snow. There was a drop of a few inches here since Saturday but it is stationary again today.

PROBATE COURT DIVORCES

Not Legal According to Judge Swing —This County Not Affected.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—A recent decision of Circuit Judge Swing, at Hamilton, decrees that persons who have secured divorces in probate court are not legally separated, holding that the law giving probate courts concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas courts is not constitutional.

Judge Hole says Columbiana county is not affected by this decision, the law never having been operated here.

WITH THE WORKMEN IN THE CLAY PLANTS

WHEELING POTTERIES MERGED.

The directors of the Wheeling Potteries company, which was recently incorporated with a capital stock of $1,250,900, met last week in Wheeling, and perfected their organization. The new company embraces Wheeling Pottery company, Riverside Pottery company and Vance-Faience company, of Tiltonville. The merger will take effect on January 1, at which time the property of the constituent companies will be taken possession of by the Wheeling Potteries company. At a stockholders meeting held last Tuesday the following board of directors were elected: C. W. Franzheim, W. A. Isett, W. J. Mays, J. J. Holloway, Geo. Wise, William Kirbach, Geo. K. Wheat, Joseph Speidel, J. A. Miller and William A. Wilson. The directors organized by electing officers as follows: President, C. A. Franzheim; vice-president, George K. Wheat; secretary, W. A. Isett; assistant secretary, W. J. Mays. It is understood that the Riverside went into the merger at 172.31, the Wheeling at about 165, and the Tiltonville plant at par. The stock was not watered, the basis of consolidation being the intrinsic value of the respective properties. The new company is among the largest pottery corporations in the Uunited States. It is expected that quarterly dividends of seven or eight per cent. will be paid on the stock. The Riverside company will pay its customary quarterly dividend of two per cent. on January 1. The combination gives the Wheeling Potteries company a more diversified product and with the other advantages incident to a merger of this character the concern starts off with exceedingly bright prospects.

MANUFACTURERS' MEETING.

The United States Potters' association, of which Charles Howell Cook, of Trenton, is president, will hold its annual session tomorrow in the Hotel Willard, Washington, D. C. It will be purely a manufacturers' meeting, and will last either two or three days. There have been several important questions at issue during the past year which have a decided bearing upon pottery. These matters have been investigated and statistics gathered by special committees, which will file their reports with the association. The most important of these matters is tariff reform, which is now the subject of much contention. While it has not been officially announced, judging from the attitude of the manufacturers in the past, their ultimatum will be, regarding a revision of the duty on pottery imports, "to let the tariff alone." The recent exposures of the wholesale frauds which are being worked by large importers in getting crockery into this country without paying the full rate of duty will likely receive attention. For some time there has been a concerted movement on the part of the manufacturers to obtain cheaper freight rates. In all likelyhood measures will be taken to provide a remedy.

THE MINERVA POTTERY.

The proposed new pottery for Minerva is said to have been decided upon. A Canton dispatch says: Congressman R. W. Tayler, who is counsel for the pottery combine, met a delegation of Minerva citizens at the office of Tayler & Stewart, Friday morning, and while there are some minor details yet to be arranged, the matter was practically closed up. The citizens have agreed to make a loan of $75,000 to the pottery, which will be secured by a claim upon the plant, and the company has agreed to erect a pottery many times the value of the money loaned, which will employ not less than 300 men. The Minerva citizens who were in Canton were Edward S. Deford, A. J. Grunder, E. M. Jerome, John Starkey and James Stewart. They stated that all the money had been subscribed and that there is no doubt of the success of the scheme. The people of Minerva are very much interested, as the new plant means the restoring of the old-time activity to the town.

ANOTHER AKRON PLANT.

If present plans do not miscarry Akron will have another big factory added to its already long list. John Lamparter and E. R. Bathrick, the men who have been given a franchise for a universal heating plant, have purchased a tract of land in the southeastern part of the city on the proposed line of the Akron & Barberton belt line and will in all probability put up a very large clay manufacturing establishment. The land which was purchased is a part of what is known as the Bellows' farm and is situated near the Windsor Brick company's plant. It is 16 acres in area and is said to be all clay land. The clay is of an especially fine variety and it is said to be one of the finest and largest clay beds in the state. In regard to the size of the new plant and the kind of ware that would be manufactured Mr. Bathrick said that he would not now state whether the company would make sewer pipe or whether it would be pottery. He stated that at present all that could be said was that it would be a clay plant with the output in doubt. "We have the best kind of clay there to make anything in the line of clay products we want to, and as yet have not decided what it will be," was the way he referred to the matter.

JEWELED POTTERY.

The new jeweled pottery is odd and striking and reminds one of the gilded marbles of Italy and the modern bronzes which are so richly decorated and begemmed that little of the bronze is visible. We have had jeweled glass for many years, and lamp shades inset with sparkling mock gems have been active sellers for many seasons, but pottery inset with mock jewels is an innovation of note. This new idea is carried out in egg-shell china. This china is cut with various elaborate floral designs, the cuttings being filled in with mock rubies, topazes, rhinestones, emeralds and other gems. These jewels are not made of glass, but from a form of hard enamel which closely resembles the gems.

NEW SPECIALTIES.

The Laughlin No. 2 is introducing many new specialties, being after the holiday trade, and after it with a vengeance. There are 18 new specialties in the nature of fancy trays. A new jardiniere in six sizes is being placed on the pressing bench, a beautiful pedestal standing 3½ feet high and covered entirely with full blown roses of a heavy and beautiful pattern. The pedestal is very heavy, as it will require the services of at least two men to move it while it is being made. They are also making a new toilet set. The employes of this plant are working very steadily.

MORE CLAY DEPOSITS.

Valuable deposits of kaolin have been discovered in the vicinity of Glenwood, Wis. Recent interesting and costly experiments have been made, covering some 600 acres, and the owners are confident they have in their possession very valuable property. It has been secured by Chicago capitalists, including large sanitary ware manufacturers. The deposit comes in layers to a depth of 16 feet and is of fine quality with the exception that it contains small quantities of sand. The clay beds look like chalk and are in fact decomposed stone.

NEW LOCAL AT SEBRING.

A new local order of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters has been organized in Sebring, with a membership of about 150. The charter membership has been taken from local No. 44. This local, No. 44, donated the new branch $100, with which to begin its home. The new union is composed of printers and decorators, and will be known as No. 65, N. B. of O. P., of Sebring. It is the second local which has been organized in Sebring, whose membership has been taken from No. 44.

A NOVELTY JIGGER.

A new novelty jigger is being installed at the Brunt pottery, and when completed and ready for operation, will add materially to the capacity of the plant. No one has yet been hired to operate the new machine, but this will be attended to in time

AMONG THE POTTERS.

James Nolan has recently accepted a situation at the Dresden.

Thomas Hines has recently accepted a situation with the pottery plant at Crooksville.

Lawrence Welch, a handler at Burford's, has returned to work again after a week's serious illness.

John Ryan, of New Castle, was calling on his many friends among the operatives here over Sunday.

Thompson Wilson, of the decorating department at Thompson's, has resigned his position to accept a similar one at Burford's. He made the change today.

J. E. Sutcliffe, who was injured Thanksgiving night while alighting from a street car in the Diamond, has sufficiently recoverd to resume his work as sticker-up at the Sevres.

Samuel Thomas, a dishmaker for the French China company, Sebring, and well known among the operatives in this city, has accepted a situation at the Crooksville plant and went to that city one day last week to take up his work.

A FATAL HEAD-ON COLLISION.

Train Ran Into Open Switch and One Man Was Killed and Three Injured.

Youngstown, O., Dec. 1.—A Chicago and Baltimore express train on the Baltimore and Ohio railway, eastbound, ran into an open switch at Carbon, Pa., seven miles east of here, early yesterday morning, and collided head-on with a freight train. One man was killed and three others injured, one seriously.

The dead: Howard Bradley, Pittsburg, engineer passenger train.

The injured: Walter Miller, Pittsburg, express messenger, back injured; H. E. Townsend, Pittsburg, passenger train, ribs broken and head hurt, may die; Frank Miller, Chicago, fireman freight train, painfully scalded.

Both engines were wrecked and the express car telescoped. The passengers were considerably shaken up, but none was injured. The collision, it is alleged, was due to the failure of the freight brakeman to throw the switch on the main track after taking the siding.

Manila, Dec. 1.—Several columns of constabulary in the Zambales province had been chasing the Ladrones with the assistance of friendly natives. Five of the friendlies straggled from the column and were captured by Ladrones, who amputated the tongue and gouged out the eyes of one friendly and then sent him back to the constabulary. The fate of the other four is unknown.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—If the number of people who visited the international live stock exposition yesterday may be taken as a criterion the attendance at this year's exposition will exceed that of last year by fully 100,000 persons. Notwithstanding that yesterday was Sunday, 20,000 people of Chicago and vicinity passed through the gates during the day and evening. The judging in the various departments began today.

GREAT BRITAIN WANTS THE GOLD

Endeavoring to Locate Bars Worth $650,000 Brought to Germany from South Africa.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—The British government is telegraphing to all the German ports making inquiries concerning Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which, it is supposed, have been brought to this country from South Africa within the past fortnight. The bars are destined for former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and, it is presumed, had been concealed in the Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located on the ground that she is entitled to all the assets of the Transvaal, because she has assumed responsibility for the debts of that country, including the bonds issued prior to the war.

General Botha's reply to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the late Boer government had no assets was strictly true as far as he knew, but since receiving Mr. Chamberlain's letter General Botha learned, according to seemingly trustworthy information here, that Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have in their possession $2,500,000. General Botha requested them to turn over this gold for the benefit of the Boer people, but Dr. Leyds refused, averring that the money was to be used in upholding the Boer nationality in the future. General Botha has notified Dr. Leyds that unless the gold is given up legal proceedings will be brought against him.

ANALYSIS LEADS TO ARREST.

Parents Locked Up on Suspicion of Having Poisoned Children.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—After carrying on for a period of several weeks an investigation into the cause of the death of Annie Williams, aged 9 years, and her 3-year-old sister, Josephine, on Oct. 21 and 22, respectively, the police authorities have deemed it proper to detain at a police station the parents of the dead children. The father, John W. Williams, was taken into custody Saturday night and the wife was removed to a police station yesterday, along with her other three children. Annie and Josephine died of what the attending physician thinks was poison and notified the coroner. A chemical analysis made by direction of the coroner tended to prove the doctor's theory, and the arrest of the parents followed. It is said the dead children were insured, the elder one for $115 and the younger child for $30. Williams and his wife deny that they were the cause of the death of the two children.

Husband Charged With Murder.

Elwood, Ind., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Charles Dubois, a bride of but a few months, was found dead in her room late Saturday afternoon, with a bottle of carbolic acid lying at her side and a note, in which was stated her intention of taking her life. An autopsy was held Saturday night and no poison was found in her stomach. The side of her head was crushed, apparently by the blow of a blunt instrument. The coroner held an inquest yesterday, which led to the arrest of Charles Dubois, the husband of the dead woman, who is charged with murder.

DEFIED HIGHWAYMEN

Lisbon Football Player Compelled a Footpad to Stand Back.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—Frank Steele, one of the Lisbon football players, was the intended victim of a hold-up the other night, but upon the presentation of two revolvers by him, the highwayman gave up his enterprise. The suspicious actions of three men, who have been loitering at night in the eastern part of the town, between the fair grounds and the more thickly settled portion, have attracted attention recently.

Mr. Steele, having occasion to pass that way, and noticing the movements of the fellows, carried two revolvers with him on Friday night. He was coming toward home about midnight, when, at a lonely place on Spruce street, he met a man whom he recognized as one of the three, who stepped out of a dark alley and said: "Stop! I want you." In an instant he was looking into the muzzles of Steele's revolvers and obliged with alacrity to stand aside. Steele thinks he has seen the fellow about town but could not positively identify him.

AT THE THEATER

"The King of Tramps" company, one of the best organized theatrical companies on the road this season, to appear here December 2 at the Grand, enjoys a reputation seldom accorded to a traveling company. Being a creation of W. A. Tremayne, author of "A Secret Warrant." The story which abounds in thrilling situations and an abundance of wholesome comedy, embraces every element so necessary to success.

Reid's story of village life, "A Homespun Heart." As the title suggests it deals with the affairs of the plain, honest, country folks, but there is no attempt at caricature, there are no saw mills, railroad wrecks or startling effects, but the plot is interesting and full of pathos and comedy.

Edward "Ensemble" Rice is said to have made the triumph of his career in the selection of a chorus for the "Show Girl," "dainty, delicious and delirium provoking." Surely there must be a great treat in store for theatergoers. Don't miss it.

EAST END

SUPPLEE A CANDIDATE

The Formal Announcement of His Mayoralty Aspirations Made Publis This Morning.

The formal announcement of the candidacy of Walter C. Supplee for the Republican mayoralty nomination was made by him this morning. It will come as a big surprise to the major portion of the East End people, but his intimate friends, so they claim, have known of his intention for several weeks. The political situation in the East End is too chaotic and the announcement has been out too short a time to state definitely today how it will be received.

It has been known for some time that some concerted action had been determined up by the politicians and people of the East End on account of the Pennsylvania avenue assessments and the redistricting of the city, but it cannot be stated that Mr. Supplee's candidacy is a part of it. Personally Mr. Supplee is very popular. His friends are numbered by the hundred and are from all parts of the city. For a number of years he was a city policeman and won the reputation of being one of the very best ever on the force. He resigned to become a deputy sheriff under Sheriff Charley Gill and again he made an enviable record, both in the field and in the office. He has been eminently successful in all his undertakings.

NO GAS IN KLONDIKE

Break in Main Near Oakland Switch Shut off the Several for Several Hours.

The many people who live east of the Oakland switch and who depend upon the gas furnished by the Fort Pitt Light company for light and heat suffered very serious inconvenience and annoyance yesterday. A few days ago workmen from the water works in excavating for the extension of the water mains undermined the gas main near the Oakland switch. Evidently the filling-in was not properly accomplished for when the dirt settled the gas main was disturbed and a break followed. The break was soon discovered and repaired.

The gas was shut off all along the line yesterday morning while some repairs were being made, but this caused only a slight inconvenience as the patrons had been warned in advance. Today the supply is stronger than for some time.

FINEST BUILDINGS ANY COLLEGE HAS

WOOSTER UNIVERSITY IS SPLENDIDLY BUILT UP IN A YEAR.

Anniversary of the Great Fire to Be Celebrated By Dedication of New Halls.

Wooster, December 1.—The twelve months which end December 11, 1902, will have been a most remarkable year in the history of the university of Wooster. On December 11, 1901, the institution was practically wiped out of existence by a fire, which destroyed the main structure with all the equipment, causing a loss of over $800,000, with but $60,000 insurance. On December 11, 1902, five magnificent structures, erected to take the place of the ones destroyed, are to be dedicated with imposing ceremonies.

It is ascertained that no institution of learning in the world has recovered so quickly from what threatened to put an end to its existence. Pittsburgers did much to bring this about. The princely gift of $100,000 by Andrew Carnegie was the stimulant that caused over $400,000 to be rolled into the treasury of the university in a little more than two months.

The structures are pronounced the very finest college buildings in the world and are equipped in the most modern style. The program to be carried out is as follows:

University Memorial chapel, 10:30 a. m., President Louis Edward Holden presiding—Organ prelude, hallelujah chorus, invocation by Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., LL. D.; address by Rev. James D. Moffat, D. D., LL. D., president of Washington and Jefferson college, Washington, Pa.; address by Prof. Charles F. Mabery, Ph. D., professor of chemistry in Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland; address by Rev. Simon J. McPherson, D. D., LL. D., president of Lawrenceville academy, Lawrenceville, Md.; solo, Miss Frances A. Glenn; presentation of the new building to the synod of Ohio by Rev. S. S. Palmer, D. D., president of the board of trustees of the new university; acceptance of the new building by Rev. Robert J. Thompson, D. D., moderator of the synod of Ohio, Lima; benediction by Rev. William McKibbin, D. D., Cincinnati.

Afternoon exercises, Kauke hall at 3 p. m.—Prayer of dedication at Kauke hall by Rev. Oscar A. Hills, D. D., Wooster; prayer of dedication at Severance hall by Rev. James A. Worden, D. D., LL. D., Philadelphia; prayer of delication at Scovel hall by Rev. Sylvester F. Scovel, Wooster; prayer of dedication at Taylor hall by Rev. A. E. Taylor, D. D., LL. D., Columbus; benediction.

The barn of Robert Lodon, whe reusides near Newgarden, was entirely destroyed by fire. The loss is $2,500, and is partly covered by insurance.

This fall Charles Wernet, of Hanover township, harvested 50 acres of wheat, which turned out 1,352 bushels, an average of 26½ bushels to the acre.

Ernest Sshmid, of Salem, who has served in the United States army, has been arrested at Alliance, charged with passing a counterfeit silver dollar.

The city building of Martin's Ferry, is in the hands of the St. Clairsville authorities to insure payment of judgment against the town for $400, granted recently in the Belmont county courts to Mrs. Caroline Meyers.

Another "English fortune" of several millions has vanished. The accountant of the bank of England states that the "Whitacre fortune," which Columbiana county people are after, amounts to less than 100 pounds.

Mrs. Jeannette R. Hunter is dead at Akron and another woman whose name is unknown is at the point of death as the result of morphine poison. It is believed the visitor gave Mrs. Hunter an overdose and becoming alarmed resolved to die herself.

Orders from headquarters have stopped improvements at the Salem plant of the American Steel & Wire company. The cause is the alleged hostility of the Salem city government. An engineer at the mill was arrested for running without a license.

TWELVE PAGES.

Drunkenness is decreasing in the United States, according to the testimony of expert observers. The consumption of malt, spiritous and vinous liquors is still enormous, and the social glass is tolerated in many circles, but the vice of drunkenness is universally frowned upon. Business requirements, education, home influence, physical and moral culture, are all directed toward its eradication. Business men will not entrust their interests to others who have not clear brains and steady hands. Sobriety and success go together. The men who rise in politics, in the business world, in professional life and those who obtain greatest prominence in athletic circles are the men who do not drink. The temperance reformers are learning that the surest way to banish the evil is to educate the young as to the dire effects of drunkenness. The counsel of a loving and wise parent is the most effective temperance lecture. The schools are doing their part nobly, and the world is learning and growing better.

This is the season when the shrewd advertiser places his holiday announcements. There are hundreds of people who like to do their buying before the rush begins, while the goods are new and fresh and unhandled by shoppers. Clerks and customers both have more time and satisfactory purchases are more easily made. No part of a newspaper is scanned with more interest at this season than the descriptions given by the merchants of what they have to sell. He who would reap a harvest from advertising should begin planting his crop early.

The commissioner's latest estimate for an isthmian canal is $184,000,000, for the Panama route and $189,000,000 for the Nicaragua route. Colombia has proved to be a greedy haggler and it may become necessary to try what can be done with Nivaragua. The difference in estimated cost is not serious.

Venezuela is in danger of getting into serious trouble through her quarrelsome habits. As long as her people fought among themselves there was no protest. But when they begin to bulldoze foreigners they are likely to learn that other nations have law if they have none.

According to Mr. Bryan, "The Democratic party does not need leaders so much as it needs voters." This is a profound truth. But where is it to get them as long as popular education flourishes and grows stronger?

President Roosevelt is a true civil service reformer, and he also believes in living up to the fourteenth amendment. In his appointments neither race nor color counts; only merit.

Congress will not meddle with the tariff question at the present session. The people rule, and the people have commanded congress to "let well enough alone."

Mrs. Bertha Krupp is henceforth to be the official gunmaker of Prussia. She will be in a position to help enforce the laws, though denied any part in making them.

Andrew Carnegie would doubtless be willing to give several millions to get back his youthful health. But such a commodity is not purchaseable.

Oklahoma, with 600,000 population, needs a state government and ought to have it. The fact will doubtless be impressed upon congress.

The Mexican dollar, containing more silver than ours, is now down to 36½ cents. Where would our dollar be if it had been Bryanized?

A silver dollar is worth only 35 cents, and the Democratic party, which championed it, looks as if it were worth five cents less.

Out west they have taken to wearing sheetiron armor in football matches. This is reforming the sport backwards.

There is always something to be thankful for. Though congress is in session the state legislature is not.

The man who invented the modern flat is dead, but the evils that men do live after them.

Winter is well begun, but the old rule of half finished does not apply.

Ohio is 100 years old, but you'd never guess it from her looks.

Scrofula

Few are entirely free from it.

It may develop so slowly as to cause little if any disturbance during the whole period of childhood.

It may then produce irregularity of the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia, catarrh, and marked tendency to consumption before manifesting itself in much cutaneous eruption or glandular swelling.

It is best to be sure that you are quite free from it, and for its complete eradication you can rely on

Use These Spices.

If you have a recipe calling for a certain spice, it means that the best is needed to produce the desired flavor. The writer of the recipe you use, had in mind only perfect full flavored spices; if you use the ordinary ones, results must be unsatisfactory. We are agents for Gilpin, Langdon & Co's High Grade Spices—the very choicest the world produces—and that is the kind you should have. They cost a trifle more because they are all spice, but they go much farther and for that reason alone they are more economical than inferior grades, not to speak of their delicious flavor and wholesomeness.

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

if this is Liverpool a great transformation has taken place since I was last here."

The officer was prone to believe that he had made a mistake.

"This is my first visit here since '61," Mr. Vogel further stated. "I won't attempt to tell you how much different the city is from what it was way back in those years. In fact, it would be impossible for me to tell you all. I will make myself believe that it is East Liverpool, but it seems like a fairy story. You see, I came here to meet one of my boyhood playmates whom I have not seen since I left. The name is Mrs. Oella Reitz."

Officer McDermott then offered his services in assisting the man to find the friend and in a few minutes the two who had been apart and heard nothing of each other during the long span of years spent the remainder of the day most delightfully in bringing back to memory reminiscences of their youthful happy days. Mr. Vogel left the city this morning for Akron, where he has other friends.

WELLSVILLE

SEVENTEEN ARRESTED

In a Wellsville Resort Saturday Night —Police And Mayor Kept Busy.

Mayor Fogo has been a busy man for the past two days and has at the same time kept the police force very busy. Saturday evening shortly before 11 o'clock Officers Davis, Canaday, Henthorn and Elliott raided a house at 512 Coal street, commonly known as "Peggy's place." Nine girls and eight men were placed under arrest and gave security for their appearance before Mayor Fogo this afternoon. .

The proprietress, Cassie Coyle, put up $15 for her appearance and the balance of the men and girls each put up $10, making a total of $175 which was turned over to the mayor as security money. The mayor stated yesterday that he expected every one to appear before him this afternoon.

Mrs. Mary Dennis, who was arrested last Friday evening, charged by a man known by the name of Pittsburg Jack with striking him without provocation appeared before Mayor Fogo Saturday afternoon. She was dismissed, "Pittsburg" failing to appear against her. The mayor said: "If Pittsburg will stay away from town and Mary will stay off the street corners we will call the case off."

On account of the illness of J. H. Jacobs, father of M. Jacobs, the lad who was arrested a few days ago on a charge of petit larceny, and for whom security was put up for his appearance before the mayor Saturday evening, the case was continued until some time this week.

James Russell, who was arrested one day last week, charged with interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty, appeared before the mayor at the time set Saturday evening and pleaded guilty. He was dismissed without fine, but was given good advice which will probably prevent any repetition of the offense.

A night watchman may be appointed by the mayor and the appointment presented to the council to confirm. Another officer is needed on the night force to take the place made vacant by Fred Houser, who is now cheif.

It is expected that quite a crowd of East Liverpool lads will accompany the team. The intermediates will line up as follows: R. Bucher, H. Watkins and Ed Hymes, guards; Milton Erlanger, center; Will Watkins, Samuel Bucher and Albert Evans, forwards.

The Gas Was Off.

For nearly one hour Sunday Wellsville citizens who depend on gas for heat and light were without gas and the thermometer registered about 30 above zero. The Fort Pitt Gas company, on account of making connections with their main line, had to shut the gas off from 8:30 until 9:30 a. m. It was deemed best to make the connections at the present time before the severe cold weather sets in.

STRUCK BY STREET CAR

Team of Valuable Work Horses Killed In Chester On Saturday.

Another street car accident occurred Saturday evening at about 6 o'clock. A team of horses owned by Arner & Bowers, the Chester liverymen, were so badly injured that they had to be shot an hour later. A Rock Springs car in charge of Motorman Reed and Conductor Azdell struck the horses near the corner of Third street and Carolina avenue. The horses were dragged some distance before the car came to a standstill, as the track was wet at the time. They were terribly bruised and mangled and their suffering was pitiful.

Motorman Reed said he saw nothing until he was upon them. Mr. Arner, who had been working the team, had unhitched them from the wagon and started home towards the barn. James Keevan, who was with Arner, started after them but did not reach them in time to get them off the tracks before the car hit them. The loss will be quite severe as the team was one of the best in the stables.

Some difference of opinion exists as to where the blame rests. Some think there is some blame attached on both sides. The team is said to be valued at $250. Arner & Bowers, it is said, will ask damages.

FIRST STREET BRIDGE

Agreement Reached Between Members of Council And Railroad Officials.

The officials of the Panhandle railroad came to Chester Saturday by special car to view the First street crossing. With the party was Supt. R. E. Carey, of the Pittsburg division of the Panhandle, and Engineer A. L. Morgan, of maintenance of way. The party alighted at First street, where the council awaited them.

They immediately took measurements and made plans of the proposed bridge. Council agreed that if the railroad company would put in a new steel bridge they would make the approaches. The members will report to council in time for final action upon it at their next regular meeting next Thursday evening.

The Coal Under the River.

Seventy thousand acres of coal land worth from $10 to $100 per acre, is involved in a question of title. The question is who owns the bed of the Ohio river, the United States, the state or the property owners abutting on the river. It is an old question, but is arose anew in the sale of coal lands a few days ago Unless the legislature enacts some law upon the subject it will probably be carried to the supreme court of the United States. The river is underlaid with coal, which can be mined by shafting.

SECULAR THEMES ABLY DISCUSSED

Rev. C. G. Jordan Discourses on Trusts and Various Other Matters.

ARBITRATION SENTIMENT

In Dealing With Strikes Something to Be Devoutly Thankful for—Signs of the Times As Related to Progress. Other Excellent Sermons.

It is seldom that a church congregation is treated to a talk as practical and so full of everyday truths as that delivered by Rev. C. G. Jordan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning. The discourse was replete with telling hits, and showed in every topic touched upon the results of careful study and a thorough knowledge of state and government affairs.

The sermon was out of the ordinary, in that it treated on subjects and took up matters seldom touched upon by pulpit orators on Sunday. The pastor made no apology for his choice of theme, saying he was vitally interested and profoundly impressed by the importance of the several matters in mind and felt that it was altogether proper they should be aired.

Rev. Mr. Jordan read for his text the first verse of the 107th Psalm: "O, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever." In part the speaker said:

"When there is nothing transpires to excite or produce activity, affairs remains at a standstill. It is well for us to consider the question of whether there has been progress made or activity noted in the affairs of church and state during the past year for which we should be thankful. The moral enthusiasm has been manifest, and to this is due much of the success and forward move of the nation. In national affairs the idea of arbitration has gained a foothold, and if in no other way the year has brought forth transactions in which the government's highest officials have figured."

The growth of the trust was reviewed. Not many years ago a small amount of capital would suffice to establish a factory, the revenue from which would make an independent fortune for its owner in time. It was not long until other capital was called in and interests of the same character were combined so that establishment took on the proportions called trusts. The inventive genius of certain workmen had been employed and appliances installed which enabled one man to perform the work formerly requiring the time of three. In many ways these combinations of capital and industrial interests had been a benefit to the country, but there have been instances of where men had been robbed of the fruits of years of toil by having patents and improvements in mechanical appliances stolen or appropriated by his firm without his consent.

In this regard the trusts have been very wrong. However, the men who produced the great wealth saw the advantages of combination and they too organized for the common good. Both had a right to do this, in the opinion of the speaker, and the object was at once apparent. The farmer had combined interests in order that a solid front might be presented in the matter of competition, while the workmen organized that a just recompense might be asked for their services. Many reasons were cited showing that each had a perfect right to combine for their mutual good. The workmen had by concerted action secured shorter hours and better conditions, enabling himself and his employer to find more time for worship and other diversions calculated to benefit him morally and socially. The concessions, in the opinion of the speaker, had been of great and lasting benefit to both sides. The formation of these combinations had their bad effects, and in not a few cases unjust demands had been made which resulted disastrously to both employer and employe.

At this point the history of the late coal strike was recalled, or a comparison made in a similar manner. It was shown conclusively that this transaction had been disastrous, not only to the best interests of the parties directly involved, but to the whole people. Then the president of these United States interposed and asked why should these opposing forces not come together and reason this thing out. The suggestion was acted upon, and instead of prolonging a struggle that could not but end disastrously to both, besides causing a stagnation of every line of industry, the dispute had been submitted to a board of honest and conscientious men for settlement.

Rev. Mr. Jordan thanked God that the idea of arbitration had been adopted; that the time had come when differences could be adjusted in other ways than bloody battles and prolonged strikes. He hoped that the time would soon come when the navy yards would be blotted out and cannons would not be mounted on battle fields to shoot down our fellow beings. The time was fast approaching when men would meet at the high tribunal of reason and disputed questions would be submitted to arbitration.

Reference was made to one of the great curses of the land—that of intemperance, and considerable time was devoted to the subject. The pastor asserted that nineteen-twentieths of the convictions in our county and city courts could be traced to this cause. The Beal local option law recently enacted was touched upon, and the framers of that measure commended in no uncertain terms. It would if properly applied do much good. If in no other way the law would put a stigma upon the traffic and brand it as a curse.

In looking over the election returns the speaker noticed that the Prohibition vote had increased and was steadily gaining. He thanked God that the sentiment in favor of temperance and sobriety was growing. "Through the operation of this most beneficial of all temperance acts, I would to God that every hell hole in the city, state and nation could be closed forever." The increase in the temperance sentiment since last Thanksgiving had, he thought, been manifest.

Rev. Mr. Jordan was thankful for this awakening, and for the fact that there had been increased interest in the church and its work. Other interests had expanded—why not the church. The congregation was urged to prepare itself to receive this spirit of progressiveness which was everywhere manifested, and to thank God for the opportunity to join in the onward march toward the coveted goal.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Problem of Grading In East Liverpool Ably And Interestingly Discussed.

A 2-hour session of the City Sunday School association was held at the Christian church yesterday afternoon. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the interest shown indicates that the association will accomplish much good.

W. W. Sloan presided and the opening prapey was made by Rev. Mr. Steele. The chair was composed of the following persons:

Messrs. Craddock Reese, Edward Beardmore, Edgar Eagan; Misses Annie Beardmore, Laura Farrell, Nellie Lloyd, Bessie Stanley, Kitty Sinclair, Miss Clara Wagner presiding at the organ.

The topic for discussion yesterday was "Can the East Liverpool Sunday School Be Successfully Graded?" A paper was read by Charles Brown, of the Baptist church, who treated the subject in an able manner.

Discussion of the subject was participated in by Prof. R. E. Rayman, Dr. M. B. Pratt, E. D. Moore, Rev. J. W. Gorrell, William Morris, D. F. White and others. When it was ended the time of the meeting had expired, and two subjects were left for another time. They were "The Measure of the Teacher's Responsibility," and "When And Where Should Lesson Helps Be Used?"

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Impressive Exercises at St. John's Lutheran Church Were Held Yesterday.

The sixth anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church was celebrated yesterday in a fitting manner.

Rev. R. M. Zimmerman, late of Santiago, Cuba, was to have delivered the addressed, but he was unable to reach this city in time, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz, pastor of St. John's, was compelled to officiate.

The service was none the less interesting by reason of the change, as the discourse of Rev. Mr. Reinartz was a most interesting and instructive one. He took as his subject "The heaven declareth the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The theme was especially adapted to a service of this kind, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz treated his hearers to an unusually brilliant sermon.

Riches in Christ.

Services at the Methodist Protestant church yesterday morning were unusually interesting. Dr. Jones delivered an eloquent sermon from the text, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." The keynote of the sermon was the poverty of Christ, that through His poverty man might be saved. He came into the world to seek and save, and Christ could not do this unless He made Himself as one of the masses.

St. Andrew's Day Services.

St. Andrew's day was celebrated at St. Stephen's Episcopal church yesterday. The members of the society of St. Andrew attended the service in a body, and the sermon and special music were particularly designed for the benefit of the Brotherhood.

Will Call In Executive Board.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 1.—The 2,500 employes of the Kindig Coal company have agreed to submit their grievances with the company to the executive board of the United Mine Workers. The company is opposed to the check weighmen employed by the miners and on the last pay day refused to deduct from the wages of the employes the amount necessary to pay monthly salaries of the weighmen. This brought about a crisis, and at meetings of the employes held yesterday it was decided to lay the matter before the executive board of the miners' union.

Barges Struck Reef.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 1.—A special to the Free Press from Put-in-Bay, O., says: The steam barge D. F. Rose, owned by L. B. Parker, of Marine City, Mich., and the barge Mosher, owned by Captain David Hutchinson, of Port Huron, struck Starve island reef in Saturday night's gale, and it is feared that both vessels will be a total loss. The Rose was beached on the south shore of Put-in-Bay and the Mosher lies on the reef with her back broken. The Mosher is not insured. The barges Wawanash and Lyman Casey, which were with the Mosher in the Rose's tow, were able to leave for Port Huron yesterday, though leaking badly. An attempt will be made to release the Rose and Mosher.

Second Degree Verdict.

MORE HOSPITAL SCANDALS

Work of a Shady Character By the Old Board at Dayton State Hospital—The World's Fair Commissioners for Ohio.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 1.—The press at the state capital made many eulogistic references to the late Captain William T. Cope, former treasurer of state, who was born and reared in Columbiana county, and who was laid to rest in this city Saturday. Most of the state officials were present at the obsequies, which were simple and touching. The pall-bearers were close friends of the deceased and were as follows: Hon. I. B. Cameron, treasurer of state; Hon. Harry M. Daugherty, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the time Judge Nash was named for the place; Charles Wambaugh, Oliver Perry, Scott A. Webb, Charles Morris, Samuel P. Elliott and Charles Hain.

On Sunday the Ohio State Journal printed this: "In the death of Hon. William T. Cope Wednesday evening Ohio loses a citizen who served his state well for many years. Mr. Cope was elected to represent Columbiana county in the sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth general assemblies, and became almost from the inception of his first term one of the leaders of the house. At the beginning of his second term he was made chairman of the finance committee, a position which he filled with great credit to himself and the state. W. A. Thompson, treasurer of Columbiana county, a close friend of Mr. Cope, attended the funeral."

In appointing Senator Moore, of Athens, and Representative Hagenbuch, of Urbana, members of the commission to represent Ohio at the St. Louis exposition, Governor Nash acted upon advice given by Judge George B. Okey, a Democrat and one of the best lawyers in the state. Attorney General Sheets rendered an opinion informing the governor that the appointment of legislators on the committee would not be unconstitutional, but Judge Okey holds that as the commissionerships are but temporary and not permanent, they do not fall within the inhibition of the constitution, which prescribes that members of the legislature shall not serve in any office created by the legislature of which they are members, until one year after the expiration of the term of office of the member. The judge says the commissionerships are not civil offices as construed by the constitution.

A report filed with Governor Nash by the trustees of the Dayton State hospital brings to light transactions by the board appointed to manage the institution by the Bushnell administration and which Governor Nash ousted, of a very shady character. No charges are made, the facts as discovered by the present board merely being given. Among other things, a shortage of $4,000 was found. The report has been placed in the hands of the attorney general, and it is likely that legal proceedings will be instituted. The contents of the report are sensational in the extreme.

The strike assessments for the support of the anthracite miners have been discontinued in Ohio. The assessment was levied last July, and while it was in effect each miner gave 10 per cent of his wages to a fund which was used in maintaining the strike. About 150,000 Ohio miners paid assessments.

REALM OF SPORTS

ENDED IN A FIGHT

CHESTER INDIANS WANTED TO PUNISH THE B. A. C.

East Liverpool Boys Declared Winners, But Opponents Were Not Satisfied.

The foot ball game played at Rock Springs park Saturday afternoon by the Brewery Athletic club of this city and the Chester Indians, composed of tin mill employes, ended in a general fight, the result of the latter team refusing to abide by a decision of the referee on a ball which he declared dead, it having fallen to the ground after a fumble.

A member of the B. A. C. team, after the game said that, had not the East Liverpool team run from the park, every man would undoubtedly be today carrying a sore spot on his physiognomy. He said that the Indians were not satisfied to suffer fair defeat and to get even wanted to whip their opponents.

The halves played were of 15 minutes. In the first half Bridge scored a touchdown after a terrible run of 90 yards. Coleman made an advance of 10 yards and Brock, on a trick play, advanced 20 yards. Herbert, of the Indians, made a 10-yard run.

In the second half Bridge went through center for five yards and Coleman was thrown back five yards by the next rush. Brock figured conspicuously by running 10 yards around the end twice. Brock and Coleman fiercely tackled Herbert and succeeded in throwing him back five yards. The next rush was when the game ended. The ball was fumbled and fell to the ground. The referee immediately declared it dead and the Indians refused to stand for it. They were given 10 minutes by the referee to continue the game, and upon their refusing to again start the B. A. C. team was declared the winner by a score of 5 to 0.

Captain Brock claims his team to be the champion of eastern Ohio among all teams of 115 pounds in weight. He challenges any and all comers, and is willing to play for love or money. He is trying to arrange for a game with the Oakland team for next Saturday.

ANOTHER FAILURE

On the Part of the Columbian Juniors to Meet the C. F. Armours.

The C. F. Armour rugby team has about decided to give up meeting the Columbian Juniors this season. A second game was arranged between the teams for last Saturday, but as on the occasion of the Thanksgiving game the latter team failed to appear, and the Armours are now positive the Juniors are afraid of them.

The Armours would like to meet any reliable eleven in this section before the season closes. W. G. Dorf is the manager and communications addressed to him will receive consideration.

A local sportsman says the coming winter will be an extremely severe one. He says he has hunted for many years and has yet failed to find squirrels with tough hides when a severe winter did not follow.

My young friend Jimmy Banks was married a little over a year ago. He had previously spent twelve months in the most furious courtship. The girl had not at first cottoned to Jimmy very much, but he moved heaven and earth so vigorously that she at last consented, says the Cosmopolitan. Now, the other day who appears before me but Jimmy, with a long face, and makes a complaint that the baby keeps him awake nights. "Good gracious, Jimmy!" I said. "Didn't you know that babies always do that? A baby has to have some relaxation. Go home and be thankful that it isn't twins." There is the reverse side to every joy. ORANGE GROVES FOR CUBA

Fruit Long Forbidden to Be Grown For Sale In That Prolific Isle.

Cuba, so long hampered and repressed by Spanish domination, now that she has become a republic and free to work her own will, is turning her attention to developing the immense fruit growing possibilities of her prolific soil.

Under Spanish rule the Cubans were not permitted to engage in orange growing as a business. Landholders were permitted to have half a dozen orange trees on their plantation, but they could not sell the fruit. If they tried to do so, their trees were chopped down and they were fined. It was the same way with pineapples and limes, and the reason for this law was that the fruit growers in Spain would not tolerate competition from the island.

A CUBAN FRUIT STORE.

Since Cuba has become a republic, however, the planters are free to grow what they please, and a number of those who are engaging in the orange growing business are Americans.

Tropical fruits of all kinds grow wild in great abundance in Cuba. But according to the Spanish idea it did not pay to cultivate them. Quicker returns were obtained from sugar and tobacco; besides the latter products did not compete with Spain's fruit orchards. So, although bananas, oranges, plums, lemons, limes, citron, grape fruit, pineapples and pears are found all over the island growing in a wild state, they have never been cultivated to any extent.

Fruit growers from Florida and California who have examined the Cuban soil report that it is the best and richest land they have ever seen, possessing many properties which have to be supplied artificially in the United States.

Another feature which impressed itself upon the experts who went over the ground was that there are no frosts in Cuba. In Florida, where frosts often destroy crops for several years in succession, the owner of groves has to cover his trees. There is none of this in Cuba, for frosts are unknown there. The temperature averages 73 degrees for the year, and it is said that the orange crop will be ready for the market several weeks before that of Florida.

The East Liverpool Street Railway Put In Operation December 1, 1891.

Just 11 years ago today the East Liverpool Street railroad was put in actual operation in this city. It will be remembered by the older residents that the franchise was granted to Albert Johnson, Sidney Short and others 90 days previous to the placing in operation of the railway. Johnson promised the city that the road should be constructed and in running order within 90 days, and he kept his promise.

The line has been of great benefit to the citizens of this portion of the Ohio valley, and with extensions and improvements is likely to be of greater benefit in future years.

CURRENCY FIGURES.

Comptroller Ridgely's Report Shows That Deposits Reach New High Point.

TROOPS SHOULD HAVE CANTEEN.

Its Absence Is Proving Bad for Army, Says Secretary of War—Recommends Passage of the Militia Bill Now Before Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The annual report of William B. Ridgely, comptroller of the currency, has been prepared for transmission to congress. The report starts with a table giving a detailed statement of the resources and liabilities of all the national banks of the United States, as shown by the five reports of condition made in response to the call of the comptroller.

From the table it appears that on Sept. 15, 1902, the date of the last call, 4,601 associations reported, with aggregate resources of $6,113,928,50. The loans and discounts amounted to $3,208,127,480.69, or more than 50 per cent of the total resources of the banks. The items of surplus and undivided profits amounted, respectively, to $326,393,953.66 and $169,216,512.03. The individual deposits reached the highest point in the existence of the national banking system, $3,209,273,893.93. There was due to approved reserve agents, other national banks, state banks and bankers, trust companies and savings banks, the sum of $1,200,341,233.39.

A Year's Growth.

From Sept. 30, 1901, to Sept. 15, 1902, there was an increase of $418,581,617.54 in the aggregate resources of the reporting banks, the principal items of interest being, loans and discounts, $261,511,562.29; United States bonds, $12,570,520; due from national and other banks, $35,217,372.29. There was an increase in capital stock of $50,193,537; in surplus and other profits of $65,048,357.81; and in individual deposits of $271,520,660.60.

During the year ended Oct. 31, 1902, 470 banks were chartered, with an aggregate capital of $31,800,000, of which number 302, with capital of $7,905,000, were of the smaller class, and 168, with capital of $23,225,000, had individual capital of $50,000 and over. There was an average of one and one-half banks organized on every secular day of the year.

The banking power of the world in 1890, that is, capital, surplus profits, note issues and deposits, as stated by the late M. G. Mulhall, was £3,197,000,000, as follows:

United Kingdom, £910,000,000; continental Europe, £1,037,000,000; Australia, Canada, Cape Colony, Argentina and Uruguay, £220,000,000, and United States, £1,030,000,000. In 1894 Maurice L. Muhleman calculated the banking power of the world at £3,915,000,000.

Mr. Ridgely discusses the needs of currency legislation at great length and gives a brief statement of the action taken and trend of discussion at meetings of bankers' associations.

Secretary Root's Report.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The report of Secretary of War Root, to be sent to congress, makes many recommendations somewhat in line with those of his last report. Perhaps the most interesting point is on the subject of canteens, in which the secretary says:

"I am convinced that the general effect of prohibiting the use of beer and light wines within the limited area of the of the army post is to lead the enlisted men to go out of the post, to frequent vile resorts which cluster in the neighborhood, to drink bad whisky to excess, and to associate intimately with abandoned men and more abandoned women; and that the operation of the law is to increase drunkenness, disease of the most loathsome kind, insubordination and desertion, and moral and physical degeneration."

On the disposition of the army in peace, he recommends large camps adjacent to, but beyond the limits of large cities, rather than many small camps, thus giving opportunity for increasing the efficiency of the army.

Militia System.

On the question of state militia, the secretary urges the passage of the bill now before congress, and says in part:

"It is really absurd that a nation which maintains but a small regular army and depends upon unprofessional citizen soldiery for its defense should run along as we have done for 110 years under a militia law which never worked satisfactorily in the beginning, and which was perfectly obsolete before any man now fit for military duty was born."

The secretary recommends the creation of a general staff for the army, with the commanding general as chief. This staff, however, would not be modeled after those of European armies.

The secretary estimates the needs of his department for the year ending June 30, 1904, as follows: Civil establishment, $2,020,896; military establishment, support of the army and of the military academy, $77,986,515.29; public works, including fortifications and river and harbor improvements, $10,175,613.03; miscellaneous, $5,806,411.10; total, $125,989,435.42. The total estimate for the year ending June 30, 1903, was $157,409,836.26, and the appropriation by congress was $146,937,395.77.

ENGLAND'S ACTIVE FOE, THE MAD MOLLAH.

A small British army is now hard at work endeavoring to rout the forces of the Mad Mollah in Somaliland, Africa. The Mad Mollah and his 12,000 followers recently defeated a British force, inflicting considerable loss.

LOVE FOUND A WAY

Young Couple Had Trouble in Getting Married, But Finally Succeeded.

Charles Householder, of Sebring, and Miss Mamie McGuffin, of East Palestine, experienced much trouble in getting married on Thanksgiving day. They first visited Father Barth, of the Catholic church at East Palestine, who refused to perform the ceremony because the prospective groom was not a member of the church, and who further notified the couple that he would warn every Catholic priest in the vicinity not to perform the ceremony.

Not to be so easily discouraged the couple boarded the first train for Alliance, and related their wishes to Father Farrell, who agreed to perform the ceremony after satisfying himself as to the ages of the parties and the publication of the bans. The last word of the ceremony had scarcely been spoken when Father Farrell was called to the telephone and received Father Barth's message of warning. The message came too late, however, and the couple departed for their home, happy in the thought of victory.

OHIO'S CENTENN'AL

ANNIVERSARY OF FIRST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Appropriate Exercises Held at Chillicothe on Saturday.

Chillicothe, December 1.—On Saturday this city, the original capital of the northwest territory, out of which was formed the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, celebrated the centennial anniversary of the assembling of the convention which framed the first constitution of Ohio. Advantage was taken of the occasion to place a tablet to mark the site of the building in which the constitutional convention assembled and which was also the capitol of the northwest territory as well as of the state of Ohio until the seat of government was removed to Columbus.

In the morning the tablet was presented to the city and county by Robert W. Manley, a great-grandson of Edward Tiffin, the first governor of Ohio. It was accepted by Wallace D. Yaple, mayor of the city, and was unveiled by Miss Effie Scott, a granddaughter of Governor William Allen and a great-granddaughter of Governor Duncan McArthur.

In the afternoon at Memorial hall the celebration was continued by an introductory address by Hon. W. T. McClintick, one of the oldest residents of the city. His address was full of delightful reminiscences of the city and its pioneers. Hon. Daniel J. Ryan spoke on "The Original Constitution and Its Effect on Ohio History."

At the close of the centennial exercises in the afternoon the members of the State Historical Society met to discuss the centennial celebration of Ohio's admission to the union, which is to be held here May 21 and 22, 1903. It was decided to make this celebration one of national interest, and the president and governors of all the states in the union will be invited to participate.

SETTLED AT $50 EACH

Panhandle Railroad Company Adjusts Claims Against It By Picnickers.

Steubenville, December 1.—It will cost the Pennsylvania Railroad company $1,150 because one of its conductors failed to stop a passenger train at Willow Springs last Fourth of July. The company late Wednesday compromised with the claimants in the 23 cases against it for $50 each. The agreements, therefore, will result in the dismissals of the suits now standing against the company in the circuit court.

A party of 23 people, Wheeling people, spent last Fourth of July at the springs some distance above the city, and made arrangements for the late train on the Panhandle to stop there and take them on for the return trip to the city.

The party was overlooked in a rush of business on the road that day, and suits were entered by each member of the party for $1,000 damages each.

In the trial of the first case, that of Lillian Poe vs. the Panhandle, the jury brought in a verdict of $60 for the plaintiff. This termination of the test case compelled the railroad company to sue for settlement in all of them. Prior to the trial of the Poe case the company had offered each member of the party $60, but it was refused. The company thus gets off for half the amount.

CONGRESS CONVENES.

Territorial Bill, Trusts, Tariff and Cuban Reciprocity Will Take Time of Senate.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TUESDAY

Deluge of Bills Dealing With the Trust Question Poured Into the House on Opening of Final Session of the Fifty-Fifth Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The admission of the territories of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona as states of the Union was the subject of general importance to receive the attention of the senate in the session which began at noon today.

After the omnibus territorial bill passed the house last session its friends in the senate were so insistent on action by the senate and so strong in point of numbers that in the interest of other pending legislation a unanimous agreement was reached that in consideration of abatement by the friends of the measure during the last session the committee on territories would report on the bill on next Wednesday, Dec. 3, and that a week later the bill should become the unfinished business of the senate, which means that unless the measure shall be displaced by vote or by unanimous consent it will occupy the first place on the senate calendar until disposed of.

Change in Tariff Improbable.

Other questions which, in addition to the appropriation bills, are expected to receive attention of the senate at this session are the trusts, the tariff and Cuban reciprocity. Very few Republican senators admit the probability of any change of the tariff law during the present session, but some bills to modify present schedules may be introduced and speeches made thereon. Some senators speak of the creation of a tariff commission as a possibility, but there are differences of opinion as to the utility of such a body. There is quite a unanimity of opinion favorable to anti-trust legislation, and this opinion goes to the extent of predicting results along the lines indicated by Attorney General Knox for the amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law. The present week will barely witness the beginning of the three months' work. Today the usual committee of two senators was appointed to call on the president and resolutions of regret for the death of Senator McMillan of Michigan, brought the day's session to a close a few minutes after assemblage. Tomorrow the president's message will be read, and beyond this no business will be attempted. The sessions of Wednesday and Thursday also will be brief, with an adjournment from Thursday until the following Monday.

There will be an effort to confirm some of the numerous nominations expected to be sent in at the first opportunity.

A large number of bills will be introduced on Wednesday and Thursday and the foundation will be laid for what all predict will be a very crowded session.

Flood of Bills.

When the house convened today to enter on the final session of the fifty-fifth congress a perfect deluge of bills dealing with the trust question in all its phases were thrown into the legislative hopper. It is admitted on all hands that this will be the most important topic of discussion. Indeed, the leaders incline to the belief that beyond the appropriation bills and routine legislation it will be the only general subject on which there is a chance of action at the short session. The president's recommendations on the suoject are waited with interest. The most conservative opinion among the Republican leaders seems to favor an application for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law. Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, is one of those who believe that the Sherman law, if enforced, is sufficient to meet the situation, and today he introduced a bill appropriating $500,000 to be used by the department of justice in prosecutions under the present law. Meantime the trust bills will be referred to the judiciary committee.

To Expedite Appropriations.

The leaders already have resolved to expedite the appropriation bills as much as possible in order to allow the largest margin of time for other matters. The appropriation committees will go to work at once and prepare the supply bills as rapidly as possible. The legislative and pension bills probably will be read before the end of the week. One of the first things the appropriation committee will be called on to do, however, is to prepare a bill to provide for the coal strike commission. The appropriations committee met today to adopt a bill which it is believed will be presented and passed this week. No opposition to it from the minority is anticipated. The session of the house today was brief. There was roll call and the announcement of the deaths that have occurred during the recent recess. The house adjourned until tomorrow, when the president's message will be read. There is no program for the remainder of the week beyond the bill to defray the expenses of the coal strike commission. If the regular order is demanded the London dock charge bill is the unfinished business.

THE COAST BEACONS

PERILS OF THE MEN WHO LIGHT THE MARINER ON HIS WAY.

Winter Vigil of Uncle Sam's Lightkeepers—Dangerous Spots on the Coasts—Treaded Diamond Shoals. When a Lightship Breaks Away.

This is the month when Uncle Sam's coast guardians begin their winter-long fight against storm and fog, those twin evils of the sailor, ever a menace, but particularly so from November to March.

The life of the lightkeeper is at best a lonely one, but when the beacon is built on ledges and rocky islands far from land the post becomes one of peril as well as isolation.

During the late fall and winter the gales become almost incessant, and frequently there may be a month or more when the sea is so rough that supply ships dare not approach the wave battered rocks on which many of the lighthouses perch. Then the keepers are as besieged men. They must save every drop of oil that their lights may be kept burning even should a new supply fail to arrive when due. They must watch their machinery every minute, for no help could reach them to repair it should it break down.

The famous Minot's Ledge light, off Boston harbor, for instance, stands eighty-five feet high from the level of the sea. The reef on which it is set is far below the surface in any except low tides even in ordinary weather. When the ocean roars around it in a winter storm, the mariner, looking at it from the sea, often can discern only its lantern above the spray. The entrance to this lighthouse is half way up the tower, and an iron ladder reaches from it to sea level. In the winter there are days after days and sometimes weeks when no man could venture into that doorway. He would be carried away by the rollers that break against the base and sweep the little balcony.

But it is in the lightship that the brave light keeper is subjected to the greatest hardships and peril. Anchored far out at sea to mark some dangerous rock or shoal, they are battered and tossed by furious storms.

While every year sees more or less damage to lighthouses and beacons, there is only one spot along the coast that has defied the lighthouse builders successfully, and that is Diamond shoals, off Cape Hatteras, the most dangerous place in the service.

Several attempts have been made to build a lighthouse on the shoals, but so far unsuccessfully. So this year, as in previous years, a lightship will mark this danger spot, dreaded by every mariner who sails the southern coast.

As showing the dangers of this station the department's directions for this year are conclusive: "Light vessels No. 71 and 72 will be used on this station alternately." Each of these ships is fitted so that she can move under her own steam, so she will not be an absolutely helpless hulk when she breaks away from her mooring in a howling gale, as she will more than once in this coming winter.

Lightship No. 69, also built to go under her own steam, was driven from her anchorage six times in four months, but managed to steam back to her position each time. The seventh time she failed. She fought against the hurricane for three days and then went up on the North Carolina beach near the Creeds Hill life station. The life savers got her crew off.

The value of the Diamond Shoals lightships is shown by the fact that during this vessel's last year on her station 2,570 steam vessels and 2,576 sailing vessels passed her.

The United States lightship that has had what is probably the most extraordinary experience is Columbia river light vessel No. 50. Her station is off the Columbia river, eight miles off shore, in the Pacific. One November day a gale began to blow from the sea. The chains snapped, and she moved toward the breakers. Sail was made, and she was worked twenty-five miles to sea. The next day two tenders steamed out to tow her in. Both failed. By dusk she was in the breakers. She was headed for the beach and struck. Her crew was taken off in the breeches buoy.

Such are the perils which the guardians of the coast are compelled to face each winter. Yet through it all they keep their lights burning except when overwhelmed by disaster. Without them navigation of Uncle Sam's coasts would be well nigh impossible.

Two Light Plays

Mrs. Le Moyne and James O'Neill In Vehicles Unworthy of Their Ability.

The Four Hundred will not enjoy "Among Those Present," because no one likes to have his corns trodden on. The ordinary world may like the play, because it lets them peep behind the curtains which hide the folly and emptiness of fashionable society from the gaping eyes of the uninitiated. Glen Macdonough has taken many bits from the printed doings of swell society and put them together to make a play. It is so nearly "nothing" for an actress like Mrs. Le Moyne, so trifling. It is like an artist doing well the regular work of an artisan. There is no credit to the actress. Any educated person can spell cat. So in this play of "Among Those Present." One recognizes Harry Lehr. There is a touch of familiarity in the sudden strike of the servants and a fresh lot being brought from an office in the city. A familiar odor greets the nostrils in the social fight over the entertainment of the crown prince at dinner and the hostess who succeeded in landing the fish, and we recognize the young man aspiring to get into this magic circle making his money on the exchange and suddenly being found dead in his rooms.

MRS. W. J. LE MOYNE.

The amateur circus and all its belongings were well carried out and was possibly a faithful reproduction in a way of social circuses. Then a foreign personage on his first visit to America occasionally airs his views of the apparently peculiar things society "always does," such as "building a mansion and at its completion locking it up and going to Europe." Such things are strung together in the form of a play and offered as a vehicle for a really good star to show her worth. Wasted, and more's the pity. The play has some very bright, pretty young girl parts, nicely shown; some good men roles, well enacted, and some interest. Those who saw Mrs. Le Moyne in "In a Balcony" as the jealous woman and outraged queen will never doubt the great ability of the star, but it would be hard to persuade one who for the first time saw her in "Among Those Present" that she was more than "very good." There is no opportunity for so excellent an artist as Mrs. Le Moyne. As Mrs. Clinton, the successful social leader, we see her dominate by a love for society its hollow pomp and her sacrifice of home, husband and pride for money and social glory.

Tommy Dodd was well played by George Douglas Parker and Dr. Clinton by Harold Russell. Next to the star, the best work of the play was done by Olga Flinck. Whoever this lady may be, as her name is not familiar to me, she is undoubtedly talented. Her work as Mrs. Parker was admirable, and in her heavy scene with Mrs. Le Moyne she bore the test of juxtaposition well.

Another poor vehicle for an excellent actor is offered for public approval. James O'Neill is on tour as Rurik the Serf in an adaptation from the French called "The Honor of the Humble." I feel like apologizing whenever I write that title. It is a very bad one and alone would not sell a ticket.

James O'Neill as Rurik makes a strong, manly and convincing character and has the sympathy of the audience, but the actor is too good to be wasted on such a role. It is not powerful enough for a man who has won the worldwide commendation which his Count of Monte-Christo has deservedly brought him. James O'Neill's work as the adventurous count is superb and has ranked him in his line with the best in any other line of acting. "The Honor of the Humble" does not give enough opportunity, and while O'Neill does all that is possible with the part it is not up to his standard. The play is handsomely mounted and costumed, and the company is good.

May Buckley as leading woman and Helen Tracy in the role of the Countess Suvoroff are both admirable additions to any production. Miss Buckley's Rhoda is a charming piece of work. Small, graceful, beautiful and winning in her light work, she surprised me in her emotional moments. She gives a delightful performance.

The Countess Suvoroff, whose son, Count Paul, is the last of the name, plans a marriage for him with Princess Helene Goudonoff of Moscow and finds that he has long been madly in love with Rhoda, a former serf, who because of her beauty and refined appearance has been reared in the countess' household more like a daughter than an inferior. The girl has forgotten somewhat her humble birth or real bondage and unbidden returns the love of Count Paul. When this condition is revealed to the countess, her humiliation is great, but her anger and wounded pride are greater. After a violent scene with her son, whom she loves with the absorbing passion of her life, she agrees to send him to Moscow to remain for a year. During that time he is to try to love the princess. If at the expiration of the time he still loves Rhoda, he will return, and his mother's opposition will be ended. She adds that he must not mention this compact to any one, especially Rhoda.

He goes, happy in waiting one short year. Inside of an hour after his departure the countess summons Rurik, her coachman, and one of the serfs. He has once saved the life of her son, and the men have grown from boyhood like friends. Their true positions are master and serf. Annually marriages are arranged by the ruling head with a view of keeping a strong race of servitors in the family, and this is the time. To the horror of Rhoda, Rurik is ordered to marry her. She is appalled, while he is overcome with his good fortune, for he has always worshiped in silence the star he never hoped to reach. Though Rhoda is a serf like himself, she has become a cultured lady by her life in the palace.

When Rurik sees her sorrow and hears the countess' bitter words about her daring to aspire to be her daughter-in-law, he understands that to gain her ends the countess will force even a worse partner on poor Rhoda if he refuses to marry her. Rhoda does not dream of this, and while admiring Rurik as a serf is horrified at the thought of marrying one man while loving another. The marriage is then and there consummated, and the couple are left alone. Rhoda upbraids Rurik for marrying her. Then he tells her the bitter truth, that loving her dearly he is heartbroken to find she loves Paul and that love is returned; that he married her to save her from a humbler slave than himself and will devote himself to trying to win her love, and until then will protect her as a brother and friend, never demanding any rights as a husband.

Four months later we find that his efforts have been ineffectual, and she loves Paul as ever. She is grateful to Rurik and has lived in his home, as his sister would, loving his noble character and unselfish devotion, but never thinking of him as her husband. It seems impossible to love another man as she loves Paul.

At this time the countess visits Moscow really to find out if her plan is working and is horrified to find that all is with the count as before. He is keeping his word to his mother, not dreaming she has betrayed him. Rurik travels to Moscow to see Count Paul, not knowing of the countess' presence, to satisfy himself if Paul is to marry the princess. I forgot to add that Rurik and Rhoda were enfranchised at the time of their marriage and are therefore at liberty to act as they see fit.

In Moscow the countess enters during the scene between the men and finds that her vile work is now known to her son. Rurik has found that Paul still loves Rhoda and does not know of her marriage, and when it is told he is beside himself. Rurik returns to Rhoda, finds that the countess still dares to scheme to bring her son happiness and wishes to send Rurik away on a mission. Rhoda she will then try to bring to her son as his mistress. Rurik indignantly reminds her that he and his wife are now free and she has no control over them. To free Rhoda from himself Rurik seeks a divorce. This is prevented again through the countess, who realizes that if Rhoda were free Paul would marry her. The czar is therefore asked to refuse the divorce. Rurik seeing that Rhoda will never get her happiness in this way, determines to retire to a monastery, for thus the church annuls a marriage never consummated in the home life. When Rurik in the presence of Father Andree is about publicly to renounce the world and Rhoda realizes his wonderful sacrifice, she awakens to her love for him and declares that she will not permit it, as she is his wife and loves him. Final curtain.

The Princess, quite a difficult part, was well played by Adelaide Whytall, as was Henri du Cachet by Frank A. Connor. Count Paul was very poorly done by John W. Albaugh, Jr.

COMRADES YET!

Roguish eyed,
Daddy's pride;
Funny little chap he is!
Day or night, hugs me tight;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"
Throws his little arms around me,
With his kisses to impound me;
In my pockets after candy;
Daddy's always got some handy!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Fresh and bright,
Every night
When I leave my business care,
There he is, fair he is,
Pulling out his daddy's chair!
Laughing in his childish fancy,
As by some queer necromancy
He produces pipe, tobacco,
Slippers from behind his back, oh!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Happy he
Is with me
When we play some little game;
Rain or shine, fair or fine,
Skies to him are all the same.
Makes no difference what the weather
When we romp and play together;
Comrades both, nor serf nor master,
And the heart beats stronger, faster;
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

In the sky,
By and by,
Will I meet my comrade there?
Will he be still with me,
Our companionship as fair?
God that ruleth, my petition,
Humbly and in right contrition,
Let it reach thy gracious ear;
Keep us comrades there as here!
Faithful little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,
Professor of Botany, Iowa State University.

X.—Trees For Ornamental Purposes.

THUS far we have discussed trees chiefly in their broader economic aspects. We have thought of them as aggregated in forests either indigenous or artificial and as affecting the larger problems of human living and human happiness. Let us now consider the more simple relations which trees in smaller numbers bear to our enjoyment or comfort. Although as a people we destroy forests in a fashion for which history offers no precedent, we are nevertheless almost without exception tree planters. In our northern states at least a treeless yard or homestead is an exception so unusual as to be a matter of general comment. So strong is the tendency to plant trees about the house that the traveler may often find abundant attempts in this direction far out on the plains, where on account of continued dryness a tree cannot possibly grow. The pioneer in such a region will sometimes haul water for miles to pour around some transplanted cottonwood, watch it grow green for a season, only at length to see it perish in a day when the hot wind sweeps up across the desert. Our zeal is not according to knowledge, or, to put it the other way, our knowledge by no means equals our zeal.

To be reasonably successful tree planters there are several matters to which we must give heed. We must consider first of all the locality and its climatic conditions; second, the habit and history of the various species of trees from which selection must in any case be made, and, third, we must attend to the special purpose we have in view in making the particular plantations. This is all apart from the mere matter of setting the tree in the ground, pruning it, mulching it, etc., concerning which we may have something to say in the next chapter. Let us now study in the order named these several prerequisites to success. In the first place, it is evident that in tree planting much depends on having due regard to climatic and other local conditions. We must select species adapted to these conditions or our labor is in vain. In making such selection the flora of the locality or of the region round about is the absolute criterion. People in Iowa, for instance, need not put themselves to the trouble, as they have often done, to plant tulip trees in long rows about their holdings. Tulip trees were never an element of the Iowa forest or of any part of it. Neither do people of Ohio, though favored with the tulip trees, wisely attempt the several magnolias or the bald cypress, though these may find place in Kentucky or farther south. We must have respect to the natural distribution of these things or suffer the consequences. Beneficent nature has worked all this out for us, and, while for variety's sake we may introduce some novelties in her original scheme, we shall find ourselves everywhere, in the main, largely restricted to the results in her husbandry. As we go west in this latitude the number of arboreous species rapidly diminishes, as we have already stated, although by no means so rapidly as some have supposed. There are, for example, at least twenty-five species of trees and shrubs in the valley of the Missouri river where it begins to form the boundary of the state of Iowa. Farther west the number is of course smaller. The higher grounds are too dry to support trees at all. The few forms listed are limited to the water courses, diminished, dwarfed in size, until at last we begin to find the coniferous outliers of the Rocky mountain forests.

Over all this region, then, in general, trees native to the region may be successfully planted. But the second consideration mentioned, above all, now calls for remark. We must not only have regard to original distribution, but we must also study the habit, the habitat, of our different sorts of trees. This means simply a more exact examination of the particular case. Our native trees affect different situations, different soils, habitats we say, and, while many of them will grow almost anywhere if sufficient moisture is at hand, yet after all each does best in natural soil and surroundings. Thus willows grow by the water courses only. One common species is found generally on the driest hillsides. The black walnut rises to splendid perfection in rich alluvial soil; the beech and pine will flourish on a soil of sand and gravel; the white oak affects the loess capped ridge; the basswood and the hard maple, in the west at least, love the cool limestone ridge, the rocky bank; knee deep in the swamp stands the tamarack of the north, the cypress of the south; the bur oak lives in the sand, on sunny slopes, on dry, thin soils on the prairie, braving the prairie fires, even invading the desert in stunted, dwarfish growth to form the farthest western skirmish line of the Atlantic forest. These are only illustrations of how trees love special habitats. Nevertheless within their natural limits almost all trees flourish well in good, rich soil—not all. The expert forester knows his tree and knows exactly where it may be placed to best advantage. In general, as rainfall is less we need better soil and better cultivation.

In the third place, in selecting trees to plant the planter must have respect to his own ultimate purpose. If a prairie farmer desires to secure quick results, early protection, he will plant cottonwoods, white maples, box elders almost surely these because of their hardiness, ease of cultivation and rapidity of growth. Among them he will plant the larch, the Austrian pine, various evergreens, and if sufficiently farsighted he will intersperse seeds or seedlings of better varieties for the establishment of a permanent wood lot. If our tree planter is an eastern landholder desiring to restore a forest cover to the denuded farm, he will consult the species formerly occupants of the soil and be guided by the ordinary rules of reforestation, too extended to be here discussed.

But probably the greater number of those who read these columns are interested in tree planting chiefly as the art contributes to the adornment of street and park and lawn, to the decoration of the homestead, and precisely along these lines there seems to be everywhere room for improvement. In how many towns, not to say cities, in the United States have the trees been properly selected and regularly planted? In how many towns is the matter considered and systematically controlled? We have planted trees, but is it not true that each individual has obeyed his own individual impulse and as a result we have individualism run wild? In order to build a home for himself a man has been known to grub out or destroy a fine colony of young oaks or hickories, grade the surface from his lot and then in front of his premises plant a row of white maples or equally unsuitable species, having no regard to similar plantings on the part of his neighbors, but consulting some fancied convenience of his own, and that alone. Of course, the remedy for this is municipal control. The man who succeeds at last in surrounding his home with vistas of beauty effects it by carefully studying the situation as a whole, taking advantage of all that nature contributes, allowing art to supplement nature only where modification or addition is positively necessary. In the same way, if the city is to be properly planted and adorned, the entire property of the public must be treated as a unit, managed and planted as a single holding. A plan rapidly growing in popularity is to put all the tree planting of the town under control of a competent commission. When this is wisely done, we get system and may reasonably expect the very highest results.

In the city of Minneapolis every tree is under control of a committee having almost absolute power. The city plants and cares for all the trees within the municipality. A similar rule holds in Boston, Passaic, N. J., and several other American cities, to say nothing of the capitals of the old world.

It is said that such a commission is impracticable in our thousand smaller towns and villages. The reply is obvious that in such situation the problem is of proportionate simplicity, and it can be brought about by the people themselves if only they can be organized and in serious earnest. A village improvement society or simply a village committee is all we need. For instance, there is no better street tree in all the world than our American elm, fortunately the most common tree throughout the northern states, most easily transplanted, most certain to afford a symmetrical growth if simply let alone. Now, it ought to be possible even in the small village to plant the principal street with elms, a row on each side, all appropriately spaced and all in one straight line. We admit that if we were to judge by what is shown today such a thing would seem an impossibility, but it is possible all the same. In any village let such trees be today so planted, and in thirty years they will be the pride of the town, in a century its glory. The famous elms of Yale are the American elms, so nearly universal as to be practically free to the poorest corner from Connecticut to the Dakotas. In all our towns the white or soft maple has been too often made to do duty in lieu of the elm. It grows perhaps more rapidly, but nevertheless to less advantage. Soft maples have their use, but not along the streets, the peculiar branching giving the tree as it grows older a top more and more open. The principal branches lengthen rather stiffly and become presently easy victims of the storm. The hard maple is also objectionable along the streets, not that it is not an exceedingly beautiful tree, equally attractive by the dense shade of its summer green and by the richness of its autumn glory, but it lacks endurance in isolated situations.

But it is said that the elms are monotonous; we must have variety. Let it be so. Ample variety is easily within our reach. There are many other natives of our forests waiting our disposal. The linden is a beautiful tree and will make, where properly cared for, a most handsome row, its foliage rich and umbrageous, its flowers odorous and honey laden, a gift to the bees. The honey locust is by no means to be despised. The thornless variety is a lovely tree, perfectly healthy and hardy, the wood heavy and strong, the foliage feathery and graceful, the rather abundant fruit the only objection. The sycamore in some places makes beautiful rows, but seems not to thrive very well far from its favorite alluvial habitat. The horse chestnut is an exceedingly ornamental tree, generally hardy, unrivaled in its pyramids of tinted bloom. Nor should the catalpa, our native species, be forgotten. The hackberry makes a rounded head of soft, pale leaves, a clean, straight, elegant stem, and may well on cross streets supplant its more vigorous cousin, the elm.

Substitute For Quinine.

You think you are bilious. Well, I should think you would be! What did you expect your stomach and liver could stand? You ought to be thankful that you got off with simply being bilious. The wonder is that you have any stomach or liver left at all, says Medical Talk.

What would I advise? Well, in order to stir up your liver a little and give you a slight gymnastic exercise I would advise you to go and find the doctor who gave you 100 grains of quinine and give him a good licking. Hit him with your hands. Don't hit with a club or shoot him. Just use your open hand. After you have done this right I would quit using tobacco, if not entirely at least nearly so, say a little after supper each day. Use no alcoholic stimulants of any sort. Let your diet be simple and plain. Avoid excesses. Avoid everything fried during the hot season. Eat much fruit; drink much water. Take long nights' sleep. Behave yourself. Keep away from the doctors.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Mother—We were very happy.

Anxious Daughter—Well, you know, George hasn't been able to save a penny, but—

BUT LITTLE KNOWN OF THIS ODD CORNER OF EASTERN AFRICA.

Inhabited by a Nomadic Race Descended From the Arabs—Their Strange Religious Beliefs—Why England Must Crush the Mollah.

England seems never to be entirely at peace. Always there appears to be fighting in some one of her colonies or dependencies. Her latest trouble with the Mad Mollah, by which two British officers and a hundred men were slain, has aroused the foreign office, and a punishing force has been sent to crush that troublesome individual.

General W. H. Manning, who will have charge of affairs in Somaliland, is the principal military officer in the foreign office and secretary of the protectorate of Somaliland. His familiarity with the land of the Mad Mollah augurs ill for the welfare of that fanatic.

Arabs describe as "Bar Agan," or the "Unknown Land," that particular horn of Africa's eastern coast which lies directly opposite Aden, called Somali, and which from time immemorial has enjoyed so evil a reputation that not only has it been avoided by the vast majority of explorers of the Dark Continent, but has likewise in the partition of the latter by the great powers of Europe been left untouched save as regards the coast line, none of them caring to assume the responsibilities of the sovereignty of the hinterland.

There is an Italian, an English, an Abyssinian and a French Somaliland. But the rule of none of these four nations extends beyond the littoral, and as long as there is no undue attempt on the part of the natives of the hinterland to interfere with the trade that finds its outlet and inlet at the various stations on the coast the tribes of the interior are left to fight among themselves as much as they please, and no attempt is made to bring them under subjection.

The Somalis are a nomadic race and claim to be descended from fugitive Arabs who, abandoning their own country, landed on the Somali coast, subsequently intermarrying with the local tribes. The dawn of the Somali people coincides with the rise of Mohammed some 1,200 or 1,300 years ago. They, however, do not belong to the true African race, for they reveal no signs of the negroid type and from a slight resemblance in language are believed to be allied to the races of Hindustan.

The religion professed by the Somalis—that is to say, the most fanatical type of Islam—has the effect of keeping them engaged in constant warfare with their neighbors, the Abyssinians, who profess what is probably the lowest class of Christianity. Indeed, one of the most cherished objects of the Somali and, in fact, of all the warlike Mohammedan tribes of that portion of Africa, has been to prevent Abyssinia from securing or retaining possession of a seaport on the northeast coast of the Dark Continent.

This is due to an ancient Mohammedan prophecy, according to which Mecca, the most holy place of Islam, will one day be razed to the ground by the Abyssinians, an event which will be attended by the most disastrous consequences for the whole of the Moslem world.

It is owing to this belief that the British must crush the Mad Mollah, since to leave him unconquered would place them in bad light not only with the Egyptian army, but also in the eyes of the 80,000,000 Mohammedans in India.

To abandon Somaliland to his sway would work incalculable damage to her power and prestige in all other Mohammedan countries under her rule. Not only must he be defeated, but crushed absolutely. For in the case of Islam more than in that of any other creed the authenticity of the mahdis and prophets is gauged by the degree of their success against the infidels, and the leaders of any armed religious movement are not relegated to the ranks of false prophets until defeat, capture or death has convinced their coreligionists that they were frauds.

This is the task assigned to General Manning. To assist him he will have the troops already in Somaliland and an extra brigade from India. That he will eventually succeed is certain, but at what cost remains to be seen.

What He Meant.

"I see Follansby is on his legs again."

"No, he isn't. He hasn't a cent. Had to sell his horse and carriage."

"That's what I mean. Now he walks."—Success.

Would Not Insure Him.

Insurance Companies would not insure the Rev. J. W. Yeisley because he had Kidney Trouble.

Mr. Yeisley was much discouraged till a friend recommended Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and it cured him.

Mr. Yeisley writes:

"My kidneys and liver were in bad condition and I was anxious for relief. I had tried many remedies without success. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' which effectively proved its merit. The best proof that it has completely cured me is my recent acceptance by four different life insurance companies."

The Rev. Mr. Yeisley is the pastor of the First Reformed Church of St. Paris, Ohio, and is as well the editor of the St. Paris Dispatch.

There is no question that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best and surest medicine in the world for diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as the weaknesses peculiar to women. It quickly relieves and cures inability to hold urine and the necessity of getting up a number of times during the night and puts an end to that scalding pain when passing urine.

It is for sale by all druggists in the New 50 Cent Size and the regular $1.00 size bottles—less than a cent a dose.

Sample bottle—enough for trial, free by mail.

ORINOCO BLOCKADE.

British Want to Know Intentions of United States Regarding Manzanares.

VENEZUELA IS APPREHENSIVE.

Will Renew Diplomatic Relations With France, Which Have Been Ruptured Since 1894—President Castro Opening Prisons and Releasing Prisoners.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 1.—The United States is confronted with the question of declaring its attitude regarding the blockade of the Orinoco river, which has been declared by the Venezuelan government. The British authorities say they have asked United States Consul Smith what the intentions of the Washington government are regarding the steamer Manzanares, belonging to the Orinoco Steamship company, which is now here. Some days ago the British authorities announced their willingness to convey the Manzanares up the Orinoco, but withdrew their offer on the arrival of the United States gunboat Nashville, on the ground that the United States now has a warship in port and should convoy its own merchantmen. Consul Smith is conferring with Admiral Crowninshield and Admiral Sumner, it is believed, with regard to the Manzanares. The Nashville is suited to the purpose of convoying the Manzanares, but no action is possible until instructions have been received from Washington.

Embarrassing American Commerce.

The United States is the only nation which has not taken a decided stand regarding the blockade, and it is claimed that this situation is embarrassing American commerce, especially the Manzanares, which has been here since last June, her cargo spoiling and the delay involving a great loss to the company.

Since the proclamation of the blockade 1,875 ships of all nations, except the United States, and principally Venezuelan vessels have entered and left the Orinoco, and it is insisted that this fact constitutes the best evidence possible that the blockade is ineffective. Venezuelan gunboats have left the Orinoco unguarded for periods of two weeks at a time and the guns of the Fort Los Castillos, which were the only means of maintaining the blockade of Ciudad Bolivar after the withdrawal of the gunboats, have been removed.

Sends Minister to France.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—The Venezuelan General Antonio Velutini has been appointed minister plenipotentiary to France. He will renew the diplomatic relations between the countries, which have been ruptured since 1894. The precipitate nomination of General Velutini is due to the fears entertained by the Venezuelan government of complications with Germany. The newly appointed minister is of French descent.

The news that Germany will send three warships to reinforce the German squadron in Venezuelan waters, which already numbers three vessels, has produced a feeling of apprehension in this city, and especially in official circles.

President Castro has opened all the prisons in this city and at Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo and liberated the political offenders confined therein. Among the released prisoners are Olavarria, the brother-in-law of General Matos; Acelo, the latter's confidential agent, and the leading traders in Caracas named Travieso, Volcan and Nunez, who were arrested for complicity in the revolution. This act has produced a good impression, and it is reported that General J. M. Hernandez, called "El Mocho," and three others of the revolutionary leaders will also be liberated shortly.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—An American chamber of commerce will be organized in this city, Dec. 4, by American business men here.

London, Dec. 1.—Andrew Carnegie, who has been lying ill here for the past fortnight, was able to get up yesterday for the first time.

Hamburg, Dec. 1.—The German painter, Christian Allers, who, it is alleged, was responsible for the charges brought against the late Herr Krupp, has been arrested at the Swiss frontier.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 1.—Owing to the cattle embargo on New England ports the agents of the Leyland line, of Boston, are making arrangements for the housing and shipment of cattle and sheep from here. There is accommodation for 2,000 cattle and 500 sheep.

London, Dec. 1.—The colonial officers announce that after Dec. 1 no permits to proceed to the Transvaal or to the Orange River colony will be issued in England or anywhere except at South African ports. Intending passengers are advised to ascertain beforehand by writing whether they are likely to obtain permits.

THE MINE STRIKE COMMISSION.

Arbitrators Will Hold Conference Tomorrow, Prior to Resumption of Hearing on Wednesday.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1.—A conference of the mine strike commissioners will be held here tomorrow night, prior to the resumption of hearings Wednesday morning. Commissioners Clark, Watkins and Parker are here, but doing absolutely nothing besides waiting for the return of the other commissioners. At tomorrow night's conference it is expected the commission will prepare a statement setting forth the purposes and results, or, rather, lack of results, of the 10-day recess and define specifically the position of the commission regarding the recess.

Expert accountants of both sides are going over the company's books with a view of eliminating as far as possible the contentions regarding the mathematics of the controversy, particularly as to wage figures. This was the ostensibly primal purpose of the recess. The negotiations for amicable adjustment of all the matters in dispute set back the undertaking of this work five days. As a consequence the commission will have to busy itself for a week or so at some other feature of the case while awaiting a report from the belated accountants.

CAPE MAY IMPROVEMENTS.

Company Formed to Develop Summer Resort at Outlay of $11,000,000.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Announcement was made last night that documents were filed at Trenton Saturday incorporating the East Cape May company, having for its object the improvement and development of Cape May, the oldest seashore resort in the country. A gentleman interested in the project says capitalists have bought over 4,000 acres of land in and around the city and propose making changes that will revolutionize the resort. Their plans include the building of a new city, which, they say, they intend to make one of the finest all-around resorts in the world. In this they declare they will be aided by the United States government and the Pennsylvania and Reading railroad companies. Estimates of the cost of the project point to ultimate outlay of $11,000,000.

In order to attract owners of yachts deep waterways will be formed, and the company intends constructing a lake for yachts with a water surface covering hundreds of acres. Conferences with government officials at Washington have resulted in promises to deepen Cold Spring inlet so that the largest ocean-going yachts will be able to enter the lake. It is planned to build two and perhaps three of the most modern seaside hotels. This winter 100 cottages will be built, which will cost $10,000 each. The first hotel, for which plans have been completed, will cost $1,000,000. The projectors say 3,000 men will be employed all winter on the improvements.

YOUNG CLERK KILLED.

Interior of Bank Showed Evidences of Terrible Struggle.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 1.—Wesley Reynolds, aged 16, employed as clerk in the bank at Westville, in this county, was shot and killed at an early hour yesterday morning by robbers, who had broken into the place and were about to blow open the safe. The men escaped in a stolen rig. Adolph Koontz, passing the building early yesterday morning, discovered a broken window and called to Reynolds, but received no response. He reported the circumstance to E. S. Smith, owner of the bank, who investigated, finding his clerk dead in a pool of blood on the floor. At his side were an empty revolver and another partially empty. Examination showed evidences of a desperate battle. More than 20 shots had been exchanged. From the trail of blood left by the robbers it is believed one of the men was wounded. The rig in which they escaped was abandoned six miles south of Westville. Sheriff Small and a posse of men are scouring the country for the men. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the apprehension of the robbers. Pinkerton detectives, sent to the scene by the American Bankers' association, of which the Westville bank is a member, are also working on the case. Young Reynolds received three bullet wounds, one through the head, the second through the neck and the third through the heart.

Suspected Woman Suicides.

Dexter, Me., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Hattie L. Whitten, who was arrested Saturday on the charge of having poisoned her 9-year-old daughter, from whose funeral she had just returned, committed suicide yesterday by hanging while in the custody of the deputy sheriff. Mrs. Whitten is suspected also of having caused the death of an older daughter, aged 11, on Sept. 19 last, and this body had been exhumed. Both children died suddenly when previously they had appeared to be in the best of health. Mrs. Whitten's husband also died suddenly two years ago. The children were insured for $56 and $85, respectively. As a cause of death the physicians's certificate mentioned meningitis and heart failure. An autopsy on the body of the younger girl disclosed arsenic and strychnine.

Telegraphers Get Increase.

Fon du Lac, Wis., Dec. 1.—All the telegraph operators on the Wisconsin Central railroad have been granted an increase in salary, amounting to $5 a month for every employe in that department. Delicate Tact.

I watched them on the street car—the little mother and her manly boy of nine or ten.

Before them was seated a white haired man, whose almost entirely sightless eyes were hidden behind a pair of dark glasses. The man was trusting to instinct or intuition, whichever one may call it, more than to sight to tell him when he had reached his particular corner. Closely he bent his face to the glass and hesitatingly reached his hand toward the bell.

"Mother," whispered the manly boy, "may I not ask him where he wants to get off and help him too?"

One glance at the proud, pale face, and the little mother answered:

"No, son; I don't believe he would like to be made feel dependent."

Then as quick as thought she said in a loud tone:

"See, son; the next corner is Seventh street, then Sixth and Broadway. The hotel is on Broadway. Don't let mother miss it."

Promptly the man's hand went to the bell. Seventh was evidently the street he wanted.

I fancy that when that boy has grown to be a man any expression of the fine charity that is now latent in his heart will be accompanied by tact in action and that in looking back over the years he will remember the lessons; that they were good ones; that his mother taught him.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication.

Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion.

Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation.

Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition.

Without nutrition there cannot be health.

Without health what is life worth?

Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

Thus Spoke the Cynic.

"Curious thing about a man with a watch is that if you see him take it out and look at it and you ask him two seconds later what time it is he never remembers. He has to look at it again."

"Yes; I've noticed that he'll always do it—if his watch is a fine one."—Chicago Tribune.

Fully Competent.

"What we require," said the managing editor, "is the services of a man capable of taking full charge of our 'Query Box.' Are you capable of answering all kinds of questions?"

"Well, I rather think I ought to be," replied the applicant. "I'm the father of eleven children."

Stuffed With Food, Starved For Air.

You can live forty days without food, but you cannot live four minutes without air. These things being true, is it wise to stuff ourselves with food and starve ourselves for want of air?—Philistine.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind. "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventitive and cure for croup." A NEW WHITE HOUSE

IN EFFECT THAT IS THE RESULT OF THE RECENT CHANGES.

Executive Mansion Restored to Style of Architecture In Which It Was Originally Designed—The New Office Building and Esplanade.

When the doors of the rejuvenated White House are thrown open to the public, they will disclose practically a new interior in the historic home of the nation's chief executives.

Some adverse comment has been made concerning the new building erected south of the executive mansion for the president's offices, the objection being made that neither in its outlines nor general effect is it in keeping with the White House proper, whose exterior aspect remains unchanged.

The experts say this comment is ill advised, for when the grounds are rearranged and everything connected with the building operations is removed the entire effect of the new and the old buildings will be most attractive and harmonious.

With the new interior of the executive mansion, however, not the smallest criticism will have weight. With happiest effect it has been sought to restore the executive mansion as nearly as possible to the semblance of the early Italian renaissance, in which style it was originally designed.

The grand entrance to the east by which the public and invited guests will approach for receptions will not be completed before February, but the historic old white front portico will be in readiness before the end of this month, at which time the splendid state dining room will be completely finished.

On entering by the front portico, which after February will only be used by the president's immediate family, the effect is in its truest sense classic and stately. A Pompeiian effect has been imparted by the removal of the old stained glass screen and substitution of six white marble pillars.

The floor will be of marble, with the walls and high ceiling in white in simple yet classical treatment.

On the large wall space to the right of the entrance will be from floor to ceiling a plate glass mirror, the duplicate to which will face it from the opposite side. Before that on the right will be the colossal statue of Washington by Houdon now in the capitol at Richmond, while before the mirror at the left will, it is expected, be the St. Gaudens bronze statue of Lincoln, at present in one of the public parks in Chicago.

This placing of the statues will give an endless effect of vista and statuary. Immediately facing the entrance the spaces between two of the farther columns on either side will be marble Pompeiian vases filled with tall palms.

THE WHITE HOUSE ESPLANADE.

For the space nearest to the state apartments there has been ordered from India a splendid brilliant red rug seventy-two feet long.

Down to the floorway both long western windows open out on to the 165 foot long esplanade between the mansion proper and the new offices. This, with a three foot high wall about it, will be an ideal place to which Mrs. Roosevelt is already looking forward to giving teas and afternoon receptions in the early spring and summer.

At the far end from the house a fountain will leap high in air, while the entire length of wall all about will serve for most artistic effects in palms and tall growing plants, through which most enchanting vistas will be had in all directions and especially overlooking the monument grounds.

It is intended to heighten this present effect by having the south grounds assume the old world Italian garden plan, in which high box brushes and hedges, stone seats and fountains will play a leading part. The immediate foreground will be a massing of brilliant flowers.

This was Thomas Jefferson's idea in first designing the terraces which are now being restored at either side of the White House.

By the removal of the executive offices from the White House the mansion reverts to the uses for which it was intended—the residence of the chief executive and the social entertainment of his guests.

AN AWFUL EXPERIENCE IN THE OHIO'S ICY WATER FIGHTING TO REACH SHORE

To Avoid Being Carried to Pittsburg W. S. Allen Took a Leap That Might Have Cost His Life.

Struggling in the icy waters of the Ohio, W. S. Allen, a young man well known in the city, had an awful experience and a narrow escape from death yesterday morning at the foot of Market street. That he was not carried to a watery grave is due to the slowness of the current at that point and his expert ability as a swimmer.

Allen is an employe of the Pilgrim Coal company and was on the float anchored a short distance above the wharf boat when the Clipper, a pool towboat of Pittsburg, landed for a supply of fuel. After the boat's crew had placed a sufficient amount in the fire boxes the boat pulled out from the float and dropped down to Market street, where she had left her tow of empty barges which had been gathered up near Bellaire.

Allen accepted the chance for a free ride and boarded the boat for the short trip. In less time than he had anticipated the crew had the boat attached to the fleet and while he was slowly enjoying himself inspecting her machinery in the engine room he was much surprised and somewhat taken back upon feeling the boat in motion. He realized that she had cut loose from short and had started up the river.

Knowing that the boat would make no more landings before arriving at Pittsburg and not wishing to visit the Smoky City, Allen determined upon a plan to reach shore which undoubtedly might have cost him his life. Without any apparent study over the situation and after the boat had reached a point some distance from the shore, he daringly leaped into the air and fell with a big splash into the cold water. His clothing and heavy shoes being a handrance he had an undesirable proposition ahead of his in his endeavor to reach shore and safety.

Like a Trojan he battled with the angry waves and being an excellent swimmer finally touched shore. And although nearly exhausted after his strenuous efforts he quickly made for home and got a change of clothing, took some stimulating medicine and in a few hours was little the worse for his experience.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AT HIS DESK.

This picture, which was made from a photograph, shows the chief magistrate of the nation hard at work at his desk. The writing and revision of a message to congress is not an easy task, but Mr. Roosevelt, who was a literary man before he was a president, is well equipped for the work.

MUCH MORE SENSATION THAN FACT IN THE STORY ABOUT MEREDITH & CO.

Local Liquor Dealer Admits Having Made a Mistake, But Says Reports Were Exaggerated.

The sensational story purported to have come from East Liverpool and published in the Cincinnati Enquirer Saturday, concerning the firm of G. W. Meredith & Co., has created no end of comment in this city where the facts are well known. The article in question was evidently fixed up for the purpose of creating a stir, but the entire canard has been exploded in the light of the true version, which is given out by interested parties here.

The regular East Liverpool correspondent of the Enquirer did not send the article, and it is the general belief among those best posted on matters of this kind that the article was written in Cincinnati by Cincinnati parties.

G. W. Meredjth was seen this morning and is inclined to laugh at the attempt to make a sensation of the affair. He said:

"The regulations governing the revenue department are very strict, not more so perhaps than they should be, but rules must be observed and in this case our firm has been thrown liable. I do not deny this, but am constrained to say that under the same circumstances other firms would and doubtless have made the same mistake.

"We had a large consignment of whisky which was delayed in transit. Many of our customers had been without these goods for some time, and it was our sole object to supply them as soon as possible after their receipt. The law requires that an accurate record be kept, and every detail noted upon blanks supplied for that purpose, before any of the goods are sent out. In the haste to accommodate our customers certain clerical work was neglected, and this is the way we got into it. There is a penalty for the offense, and this we will undoubtedly have to pay.

"The revenue officers have been in East Liverpool no oftener recently than upon other occasions, as it has been the custom of the collectors to make our establishment their headquarters. Our relations have been of the most cordial always. They are not different at this time."

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

Arriving Passenger Could Not Believe That He Was in East Liverpool.

EVERYTHING WAS CHANGED

And the Surprised Man Said It All Reminded Him of a Fairy Tale — A Peculiar Man's Peculiar Experience in the Crockery City.

Wearing a plug hat, a necktie emblematic of the grand old stars and stripes, President Roosevelt's likeness over his heart and other conspicuous decorations, Frederick Vogel alighted at the depot yesterday morning from the west bound train. His makeup with peculiar actions at once made him the cynosure of all eyes.

For a moment he stood as if spellbound, gazing in an absent-minded way into space. Spectators were reminded of the cartoonist's picture of a rural man's first visit to New York city, looking with awe at some sky scraper. Officer McDermott was in the crowd and he at once decided that the man was laboring under the stress of insanity. Up to the stranger walked the officer and abruptly blurted:

"What are you looking for, old man?"

"What am I looking for? I am looking for Liverpool."

The officer was then more convinced that the man was demented when he continued.

"The conductor on that train told me that this was East Liverpool. I believed him because I thought he knew his business. And maybe he does, but there is one thing certain

HOMELESS GIRL HAS FALLEN ILL

Case of Scarlet Fever in a Broading House Develops Complications.

THE PATIENT'S REMOVAL

Is Desired By the Proprietress And the Township Trustees Have Been Consulted—Sad Plight of a Colored Domestic from Coraopolis.

Miss Genevieve Daniels, a young colored girl of Coraopolis, is in the city in a plight to be envied by none. She is seriously ill of scarlet fever and without friends or relatives here. She is 17 years of age and came to this city several weeks ago in search of employment. She was hired by a family as a domestic and was doing well and enjoying herself until the latter part of last week.

She began feeling indisposed on Friday and went to the home of Mrs. Hattie Minnis, Third street, and asked if she might lie down on a cot, stating that she felt sick. Mrs. Minnis allowed her to do so and when evening came she was so sick that she pleaded for further rest.

Mrs. Minnis through pity granted the request and yesterday a physician was called. He pronounced the girl sick with scarlet fever and ordered the house quarantined. Sanitary Policeman Burgess carried out the order and then objections on the part of Mrs. Minnis arose. She keeps boarders, and upon learning that the house was under quarantine, they decamped. She has no one but herself to depend upon for a livelihood, and in consideration of big rent, losing her boarders and other inconveniences she notified the health officer that she would not care for the sick girl and wanted her removed.

The township trustees were notified of the case and called upon Mrs. Minnis, assuring her that they would pay her for caring for the girl, but Mrs. Minnis feels that even if they do pay her that she will be greatly the loser and states that she will not accept the patient as hers. Some mutual agreement will likely be made this evening, but what it will be the officers are as yet not able to state.

BEGGING A CHEW CAUSED A FIGHT

Man Who Was Hungry For Tobacco Was Landed Behind Jail Bars.

STORY OF THE OTHER MAN

Differs From His In Several Particulars—Each Charges the Other With Having Provoked the Quarrel, Which Was a Spirited One.

Blood was spurting from an ugly cut on his upper lip, a black and blue mark was under his right eye and his general appearance led one at first sight to believe that he had been in a regular Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight, when J. G. Kauffman appeared at central station last evening and told a tale that resulted in a short time in the arrest of George Wolfe by Officers McDermott and Dawson.

Wolfe was not placed in jail, he furnishing $10 for his appearance before the mayor this morning. When arraigned he pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault and battery and the mayor set the date of trial for Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Kauffman was present when Wolfe was arraigned and both men were given an opportunity to tell the story of the affair. Kauffman said:

"I had been at Wellsville and got off a street car at the Diamond and started up Sixth street toward my home. I was accosted by Wolfe, who asked me for a chew of tobacco. I told him that I did not have any and that I did not know why he should ask me for tobacco when he did not know me. I then started on my way and Wolfe, after beckoning for a partner, intercepted me before I got to Washington streets. Wolfe then without provocation struck me in the face."

Wolfe said: "I was standing on Sixth street talking to a friend when Kauffman came along. I thought he was a man that I know whose given name is Ed and I said: 'Hello, Ed! give me a chew.' Kauffman stopped and came up to me and said that I had insulted him. I told him that I did not think the simple asking for a chew was an insult. He got mad and called me 'one of the smart set' and several other names. I did not want any trouble and started up street. When I got near the Arcade restaurant I motioned for a friend to come over. Before he got to me Kauffman approached and when my friend did arrive Kauffman shoved him away, telling him not to mix up in the trouble. I did not know there was any trouble brewing and was surprised when Kauffman slapped me in the face. He struck me twice and then in self-defense I struck him."

Witnesses will be subpoenaed for both parties and the trial will be awaited with interest, inasmuch as both are well known in the city.

ROBBED BY GIRLS WHO CARESSED HIM

THE UNFORTUNATE EXPERIENCE OF A WELLSVILLE MAN.

Two Colored Damsels of This City Said to Have Relieved Him of $50.

While one woman was fondly caressing him, patting his cheeks in a loving manner and calling him sweet names, Peter Carsey, a laborer of Wellsville, was robbed of a pocketbook containing $50 in bills early Saturday evening by another woman, an accomplice of the first.

After being victimized by the clever pickpockets Carsey, between his loud outbursts of sobbing, told the story of his experience, disastrous from a pecuniary standpoint, to the police at central station. He is about 50 years of age and is employed at a mill in Wellsville, receiving $1.35 per day for his services, considering which fact he was certainly not able to lose the amount stolen. Saturday afternoon he came up from the neighboring city and after making a few purchases of necessaries thought he would make a friendly call on a friend at a saloon on Second street. To the friend he conversed pleasantly for a few minutes and in the meantime dank a glass or two of beer. He is not accustomed to drinking, and although he imbibed scantily his head was a little light, and when he started home by way of the rear exit he fell easy prey to the women who were in waiting for him. They are both colored and have bad reputations.

Warrants have been issued for their arrest, according to a statement made by Chief Thompson yesterday, and the entire police force have been detailed on a hunt for them. One of them is known as Mrs. Lee and the other as Mrs. Saunders. The latter was arrested several weeks ago by Officer McDermott and taken before the mayor as a suspicious person. She was accused of stealing $30 from a rather prominent man of the city. It is said that before she came to the city she had served several terms for similar offenses, and it was the intention of the mayor upon her arraignment to order her committed to the workhouse, but when she promised to correct her ways and live a respectable life the mayor had compassion and released her.

MANUFACTURERS LEAVE FOR NATIONAL MEETING

Almost all of the manufacturing potters or their representatives, of this city, to attend the annual convention of the United States Manufacturing Potters' association, to be held in Washington, D. C., will leave here this evening on a special car attached to the regular 6:40 C. & P. train. They will go direct to the Capitol City without change, and are due to arrive at 8:30 tomorrow morning. The convention is to be held in the new Hotel Willard, at the corner of Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. It is one of the finest hosteiries in the world and all local men will be its guests. The first session of the convention will be held tomorrow, but it is not likely that any matters of importance will come up before until Wednesday.

While the matter has not been publicly discussed it would not be surprising to see the presidency of the organization fall to an East Liverpool manufacturer this year. Indeed, the News Review is able to state, with a fair degree of certainty, that Joseph G. Lee, of the Knowles, Taylor & Knowles company, will be named and supported for this high office by a large number of the delegates to the convention.

Following is the list of those who are to leave this evening:

W. H. Phillips and J. T. Smith, of Smith & Phillips company; J. R. Warner, of the National; S. C. Williams, Electrical Supply company; L. I. Aaron and W. E. Wells, Laughlin China company; Will Louthan, Louthan Supply company; Will Vodrey, Vodrey Bros.' Pottery company; H. P. Knoblock, Dresden Pottery company; H. A. Keffer, Sevres China company; George C. Thompson, C. C. Thompson Pottery company; H. N. Harker, Harker Pottery company; W. S. Brunt, William Brunt Pottery company; W. L. Smith, D. E. McNicol Pottery company; Colonel John N. Taylor, Knowles, Taylor & Knowles; W. L. Taylor, Taylor, Smith & Taylor company; George C. Murphy, Fred Lawrence and N. A. Frederick, East Liverpool Potteries company; George Burford, Burford Bros.' Pottery company; E. M. Knowles, E. M. Knowles company, Chester.

TWO CHARGES FILED

GROWING OUT OF THE SLAUGHTER OF A PET DOG.

Edward McGavern Accused of Assault And Battery And Cruelty to Animals.

The affidavits issued in 'Squire McLane's court Saturday afternoon by William Humble charging Edward McGavern with carrying concealed weapons and needlessly mutilating and killing a dog, which belonged to Chas. Ipe, were withdrawn before warrants were made out and unless the mind of Mr. Ipe is chnged materially McGavern will be arrested and taken before Mayor Davidson to answer to two different charges.

Ipe, through his attorney, M. J. McGarry, has had two charges compiled and will prefer them before the mayor this afternoon. One of them is for assault and battery and the other for cruelty to animals. Since the particulars of the alleged dastardly deed of McGavern was made public he has been almost the one topic of conversation. Sentiment is strongly against him and many have been the words of censure spoken.

REDISTRICTING

A Problem In Which the Courts May Yet Have to Take a Hand.

At the meeting of the re-districting committee of council held late in the week, nothing was accomplished. The members of the committee will have difficulty in getting together upon the question, and it is just possible the common pleas court will be called upon to do the work.

There have been but two definite plans submitted in a complete form to the present, Dr. Marshall's and that of O. D. Nice. Of the two, the idea of Dr. Marshall is the more favored by the people at least, and they are parties who must be suited. It is probable Dr. Marshall's plan will be taken as a basis upon which to work.

Lisbon Potters' Social.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—The first annual social session of the Lisbon branch of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters will be held Wednesday evening in the K. G. E. hall. The program includes an entertainment at 7 o'clock, luncheon at 8 o'clock and dancing from 9 to 12.

FIRST PACKET SINCE AUGUST

Keystone State Reaches Here From Cincinnati With an Excellent Trip.

OTHER BOATS ARE RUNNING

Several Having Big Lists of Passengers For This Point—The River Likely to Remain Stationary For Some Days Now.

The first packet to reach this port from Cincinnati since the suspension of navigation last August was the Keystone State, of the Pittsburg and Cincinnati Packet line. She touched the wharf last night at 8 o'clock with one of the best trips she ever carried, both as to freight and passengers. Most of her freight was for Pittsburg but 27 from her passenger list disembarked here. Captain Knox was in command, Dayton Randolph and William Anderson are her pilots, George Berridge, her stewar, Will Kimball, purser, and Eugene Morris, chief mate.

The Kanawha arrived from Charleston last evening at 7 o'clock with a big passenger and freight trip. Twenty-five of her passengers were for this point. She left here a consignment of 20,000 hoops.

The Ben Hur reached here at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon from down the river points with a big passenger list for this point. She was at the wharf at 4 o'clock this afternoon on her down trip.

The Keystone State is due at the wharf at 8 o'clock this evening bound for Cincinnati.

The three boats yesetrday all had a big passenger list for this point, the total aggregating 75.

Seven "movings" were received at the wharfboat yesterday from the different boats.

The rise in the Allegheny river will keep the river stationary for three or four days even if there is no more rain or snow. There was a drop of a few inches here since Saturday but it is stationary again today.

PROBATE COURT DIVORCES

Not Legal According to Judge Swing —This County Not Affected.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—A recent decision of Circuit Judge Swing, at Hamilton, decrees that persons who have secured divorces in probate court are not legally separated, holding that the law giving probate courts concurrent jurisdiction with the common pleas courts is not constitutional.

Judge Hole says Columbiana county is not affected by this decision, the law never having been operated here.

WITH THE WORKMEN IN THE CLAY PLANTS

WHEELING POTTERIES MERGED.

The directors of the Wheeling Potteries company, which was recently incorporated with a capital stock of $1,250,000, met last week in Wheeling, and perfected their organization. The new company embraces Wheeling Pottery company, Riverside Pottery company and Vance-Faience company, of Tiltonville. The merger will take effect on January 1, at which time the property of the constituent companies will be taken possession of by the Wheeling Potteries company. At a stockholders meeting held last Tuesday the following board of directors were elected: C. W. Franzheim, W. A. Isett, W. J. Mays, J. J. Holloway, Geo. Wise, William Kirbach, Geo. K. Wheat, Joseph Speidel, J. A. Miller and William A. Wilson. The directors organized by electing officers as follows: President, C. A. Franzheim; vice-president, George K. Wheat; secretary, W. A. Isett; assistant secretary, W. J. Mays. It is understood that the Riverside went into the merger at 172.31, the Wheeling at about 165, and the Tiltonville plant at par. The stock was not watered, the basis of consolidation being the intrinsic value of the respective properties. The new company is among the largest pottery corporations in the Uunited States. It is expected that quarterly dividends of seven or eight per cent. will be paid on the stock. The Riverside company will pay its customary quarterly dividend of two per cent. on January 1. The combination gives the Wheeling Potteries company a more diversified product and with the other advantages incident to a merger of this character the concern starts off with exceedingly bright prospects.

MANUFACTURERS' MEETING.

The United States Potters' association, of which Charles Howell Cook, of Trenton, is president, will hold its annual session tomorrow in the Hotel Willard, Washington, D. C. It will be purely a manufacturers' meeting, and will last either two or three days. There have been several important questions at issue during the past year which have a decided bearing upon pottery. These matters have been investigated and statistics gathered by special committees, which will file their reports with the association. The most important of these matters is tariff reform, which is now the subject of much contention. While it has not been officially announced, judging from the attitude of the manufacturers in the past, their ultimatum will be, regarding a revision of the duty on pottery imports, "to let the tariff alone." The recent exposures of the wholesale frauds which are being worked by large importers in getting crockery into this country without paying the full rate of duty will likely receive attention. For some time there has been a concerted movement on the part of the manufacturers to obtain cheaper freight rates. In all likelyhood measures will be taken to provide a remedy.

THE MINERVA POTTERY.

The proposed new pottery for Minerva is said to have been decided upon. A Canton dispatch says: Congressman R. W. Tayler, who is counsel for the pottery combine, met a delegation of Minerva citizens at the office of Tayler & Stewart, Friday morning, and while there are some minor details yet to be arranged, the matter was practically closed up. The citizens have agreed to make a loan of $75,000 to the pottery, which will be secured by a claim upon the plant, and the company has agreed to erect a pottery many times the value of the money loaned, which will employ not less than 300 men. The Minerva citizens who were in Canton were Edward S. Deford, A. J. Grunder, E. M. Jerome, John Starkey and James Stewart. They stated that all the money had been subscribed and that there is no doubt of the success of the scheme. The people of Minerva are very much interested, as the new plant means the restoring of the old-time activity to the town.

ANOTHER AKRON PLANT.

If present plans do not miscarry Akron will have another big factory added to its already long list. John Lamparter and E. R. Bathrick, the men who have been given a franchise for a universal heating plant, have purchased a tract of land in the southeastern part of the city on the proposed line of the Akron & Barberton belt line and will in all probability put up a very large clay manufacturing establishment. The land which was purchased is a part of what is known as the Bellows' farm and is situated near the Windsor Brick company's plant. It is 16 acres in area and is said to be all clay land. The clay is of an especially fine variety and it is said to be one of the finest and largest clay beds in the state. In regard to the size of the new plant and the kind of ware that would be manufactured Mr. Bathrick said that he would not now state whether the company would make sewer pipe or whether it would be pottery. He stated that at present all that could be said was that it would be a clay plant with the output in doubt. "We have the best kind of clay there to make anything in the line of clay products we want to, and as yet have not decided what it will be," was the way he referred to the matter.

JEWELED POTTERY.

The new jeweled pottery is odd and striking and reminds one of the gilded marbles of Italy and the modern bronzes which are so richly decorated and begemmed that little of the bronze is visible. We have had jeweled glass for many years, and lamp shades inset with sparkling mock gems have been active sellers for many seasons, but pottery inset with mock jewels is an innovation of note. This new idea is carried out in egg-shell china. This china is cut with various elaborate floral designs, the cuttings being filled in with mock rubies, topazes, rhinestones, emeralds and other gems. These jewels are not made of glass, but from a form of hard enamel which closely resembles the gems.

NEW SPECIALTIES.

The Laughlin No. 2 is introducing many new specialties, being after the holiday trade, and after it with a vengeance. There are 18 new specialties in the nature of fancy trays. A new jardiniere in six sizes is being placed on the pressing bench, a beautiful pedestal standing 3½ feet high and covered entirely with full blown roses of a heavy and beautiful pattern. The pedestal is very heavy, as it will require the services of at least two men to move it while it is being made. They are also making a new toilet set. The employes of this plant are working very steadily.

MORE CLAY DEPOSITS.

Valuable deposits of kaolin have been discovered in the vicinity of Glenwood, Wis. Recent interesting and costly experiments have been made, covering some 600 acres, and the owners are confident they have in their possession very valuable property. It has been secured by Chicago capitalists, including large sanitary ware manufacturers. The deposit comes in layers to a depth of 16 feet and is of fine quality with the exception that it contains small quantities of sand. The clay beds look like chalk and are in fact decomposed stone.

NEW LOCAL AT SEBRING.

A new local order of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters has been organized in Sebring, with a membership of about 150. The charter membership has been taken from local No. 44. This local, No. 44, donated the new branch $100, with which to begin its home. The new union is composed of printers and decorators, and will be known as No. 65, N. B. of O. P., of Sebring. It is the second local which has been organized in Sebring, whose membership has been taken from No. 44.

A NOVELTY JIGGER.

A new novelty jigger is being installed at the Brunt pottery, and when completed and ready for operation, will add materially to the capacity of the plant. No one has yet been hired to operate the new machine, but this will be attended to in time.

AMONG THE POTTERS.

James Nolan has recently accepted a situation at the Dresden.

Thomas Hines has recently accepted a situation with the pottery plant at Crooksville.

Lawrence Welch, a handler at Burford's, has returned to work again after a week's serious illness.

John Ryan, of New Castle, was calling on his many friends among the operatives here over Sunday.

Thompson Wilson, of the decorating department at Thompson's, has resigned his position to accept a similar one at Burford's. He made the change today.

J. E. Sutcliffe, who was injured Thanksgiving night while alighting from a street car in the Diamond, has sufficiently recoverd to resume his work as sticker-up at the Sevres.

Samuel Thomas, a dishmaker for the French China company, Sebring, and well known among the operatives in this city, has accepted a situation at the Crooksville plant and went to that city one day last week to take up his work.

A FATAL HEAD-ON COLLISION.

Train Ran Into Open Switch and One Man Was Killed and Three Injured.

Youngstown, O., Dec. 1.—A Chicago and Baltimore express train on the Baltimore and Ohio railway, eastbound, ran into an open switch at Carbon, Pa., seven miles east of here, early yesterday morning, and collided head-on with a freight train. One man was killed and three others injured, one seriously.

The dead: Howard Bradley, Pittsburg, engineer passenger train.

The injured: Walter Miller, Pittsburg, express messenger, back injured; H. E. Townsend, Pittsburg, passenger train, ribs broken and head hurt, may die; Frank Miller, Chicago, fireman freight train, painfully scalded.

Both engines were wrecked and the express car telescoped. The passengers were considerably shaken up, but none was injured. The collision, it is alleged, was due to the failure of the freight brakeman to throw the switch on the main track after taking the siding.

Manila, Dec. 1.—Several columns of constabulary in the Zambales province had been chasing the Ladrones with the assistance of friendly natives. Five of the friendlies straggled from the column and were captured by Ladrones, who amputated the tongue and gouged out the eyes of one friendly and then sent him back to the constabulary. The fate of the other four is unknowa.

Live Stock Exposition.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—If the number of people who visited the international live stock exposition yesterday may be taken as a criterion the attendance at this year's exposition will exceed that of last year by fully 100,000 persons. Notwithstanding that yesterday was Sunday, 20,000 people of Chicago and vicinity passed through the gates during the day and evening. The judging in the various departments began today.

GREAT BRITAIN WANTS THE GOLD

Endeavoring to Locate Bars Worth $650,000 Brought to Germany from South Africa.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—The British government is telegraphing to all the German ports making inquiries concerning Boer gold bars worth $650,000, which, it is supposed, have been brought to this country from South Africa within the past fortnight. The bars are destined for former President Kruger and Dr. Leyds, and, it is presumed, had been concealed in the Northern Transvaal. Great Britain will endeavor to legally attach the gold if it can be located on the ground that she is entitled to all the assets of the Transvaal, because she has assumed responsibility for the debts of that country, including the bonds issued prior to the war.

General Botha's reply to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain that the late Boer government had no assets was strictly true as far as he knew, but since receiving Mr. Chamberlain's letter General Botha learned, according to seemingly trustworthy information here, that Mr. Kruger and Dr. Leyds have in their possession $2,500,000. General Botha requested them to turn over this gold for the benefit of the Boer people, but Dr. Leyds refused, averring that the money was to be used in upholding the Boer nationality in the future. General Botha has notified Dr. Leyds that unless the gold is given up legal proceedings will be brought against him.

ANALYSIS LEADS TO ARREST.

Parents Locked Up on Suspicion of Having Poisoned Children.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—After carrying on for a period of several weeks an investigation into the cause of the death of Annie Williams, aged 9 years, and her 3-year-old sister, Josephine, on Oct. 21 and 22, respectively, the police authorities have deemed it proper to detain at a police station the parents of the dead children. The father, John W. Williams, was taken into custody Saturday night and the wife was removed to a police station yesterday, along with her other three children. Annie and Josephine died of what the attending physician thinks was poison and notified the coroner. A chemical analysis made by direction of the coroner tended to prove the doctor's theory, and the arrest of the parents followed. It is said the dead children were insured, the elder one for $115 and the younger child for $30. Williams and his wife deny that they were the cause of the death of the two children.

Husband Charged With Murder.

Elwood, Ind., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Charles Dubois, a bride of but a few months, was found dead in her room late Saturday afternoon, with a bottle of carbolic acid lying at her side and a note, in which was stated her intention of taking her life. An autopsy was held Saturday night and no poison was found in her stomach. The side of her head was crushed, apparently by the blow of a blunt instrument. The coroner held an inquest yesterday, which led to the arrest of Charles Dubois, the husband of the dead woman, who is charged with murder.

DEFIED HIGHWAYMEN

Lisbon Football Player Compelled a Footpad to Stand Back.

Lisbon, December 1.—(Special)—Frank Steele, one of the Lisbon football players, was the intended victim of a hold-up the other night, but upon the presentation of two revolvers by him, the highwayman gave up his enterprise. The suspicious actions of three men, who have been loitering at night in the eastern part of the town, between the fair grounds and the more thickly settled portion, have attracted attention recently.

Mr. Steele, having occasion to pass that way, and noticing the movements of the fellows, carried two revolvers with him on Friday night. He was coming toward home about midnight, when, at a lonely place on Spruce street, he met a man whom he recognized as one of the three, who stepped out of a dark alley and said: "Stop! I want you." In an instant he was looking into the muzzles of Steele's revolvers and obliged with alacrity to stand aside. Steele thinks he has seen the fellow about town but could not positively identify him.

AT THE THEATER

"The King of Tramps" company, one of the best organized theatrical companies on the road this season, to appear here December 2 at the Grand, enjoys a reputation seldom accorded to a traveling company. Being a creation of W. A. Tremayne, author of "A Secret Warrant." The story which abounds in thrilling situations and an abundance of wholesome comedy, embraces every element so necessary to success.

Reid's story of village life, "A Homespun Heart." As the title suggests it deals with the affairs of the plain, honest, country folks, but there is no attempt at caricature, there are no saw mills, railroad wrecks or startling effects, but the plot is interesting and full of pathos and comedy.

Edward "Ensemble" Rice is said to have made the triumph of his career in the selection of a chorus for the "Show Girl," "dainty, delicious and delirium provoking." Surely there must be a great treat in store for theatergoers. Don't miss it.

EAST END

SUPPLEE A CANDIDATE

The Formal Announcement of His Mayoralty Aspirations Made Publis This Morning.

The formal announcement of the candidacy of Walter C. Supplee for the Republican mayoralty nomination was made by him this morning. It will come as a big surprise to the major portion of the East End people, but his intimate friends, so they claim, have known of his intention for several weeks. The political situation in the East End is too chaotic and the announcement has been out too short a time to state definitely today how it will be received.

It has been known for some time that some concerted action had been determined up by the politicians and people of the East End on account of the Pennsylvania avenue assessments and the redistricting of the city, but it cannot be stated that Mr. Supplee's candidacy is a part of it. Personally Mr. Supplee is very popular. His friends are numbered by the hundred and are from all parts of the city. For a number of years he was a city policeman and won the reputation of being one of the very best ever on the force. He resigned to become a deputy sheriff under Sheriff Charley Gill and again he made an enviable record, both in the field and in the office. He has been eminently successful in all his undertakings.

NO GAS IN KLONDIKE

Break in Main Near Oakland Switch Shut off the Several for Several Hours.

The many people who live east of the Oakland switch and who depend upon the gas furnished by the Fort Pitt Light company for light and heat suffered very serious inconvenience and annoyance yesterday. A few days ago workmen from the water works in excavating for the extension of the water mains undermined the gas main near the Oakland switch. Evidently the filling-in was not properly accomplished for when the dirt settled the gas main was disturbed and a break followed. The break was soon discovered and repaired.

The gas was shut off all along the line yesterday morning while some repairs were being made, but this caused only a slight inconvenience as the patrons had been warned in advance. Today the supply is stronger than for some time.

FINEST BUILDINGS ANY COLLEGE HAS

WOOSTER UNIVERSITY IS SPLENDIDLY BUILT UP IN A YEAR.

Anniversary of the Great Fire to Be Celebrated By Dedication of New Halls.

Wooster, December 1.—The twelve months which end December 11, 1902, will have been a most remarkable year in the history of the university of Wooster. On December 11, 1901, the institution was practically wiped out of existence by a fire, which destroyed the main structure with all the equipment, causing a loss of over $800,000, with but $60,000 insurance. On December 11, 1902, five magnificent structures, erected to take the place of the ones destroyed, are to be dedicated with imposing ceremonies.

It is ascertained that no institution of learning in the world has recovered so quickly from what threatened to put an end to its existence. Pittsburgers did much to bring this about. The princely gift of $100,000 by Andrew Carnegie was the stimulant that caused over $400,000 to be rolled into the treasury of the university in a little more than two months.

The structures are pronounced the very finest college buildings in the world and are equipped in the most modern style. The program to be carried out is as follows:

University Memorial chapel, 10:30 a. m., President Louis Edward Holden presiding—Organ prelude, hallelujah chorus, invocation by Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., LL. D.; address by Rev. James D. Moffat, D. D., LL. D., president of Washington and Jefferson college, Washington, Pa.; address by Prof. Charles F. Mabery, Ph. D., professor of chemistry in Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland; address by Rev. Simon J. McPherson, D. D., LL. D., president of Lawrenceville academy, Lawrenceville, Md.; solo, Miss Frances A. Glenn; presentation of the new building to the synod of Ohio by Rev. S. S. Palmer, D. D., president of the board of trustees of the new university; acceptance of the new building by Rev. Robert J. Thompson, D. D., moderator of the synod of Ohio, Lima; benediction by Rev. William McKibbin, D. D., Cincinnati.

Afternoon exercises, Kauke hall at 3 p. m.—Prayer of dedication at Kauke hall by Rev. Oscar A. Hills, D. D., Wooster; prayer of dedication at Severance hall by Rev. James A. Worden, D. D., LL. D., Philadelphia; prayer of delication at Scovel hall by Rev. Sylvester F. Scovel, Wooster; prayer of dedication at Taylor hall by Rev. A. E. Taylor, D. D., LL. D., Columbus; benediction.

The barn of Robert Lodon, whe reusides near Newgarden, was entirely destroyed by fire. The loss is $2,500, and is partly covered by insurance.

This fall Charles Wernet, of Hanover township, harvested 50 acres of wheat, which turned out 1,352 bushels, an average of 26½ bushels to the acre.

Ernest Sshmid, of Salem, who has served in the United States army, has been arrested at Alliance, charged with passing a counterfeit silver dollar.

The city building of Martin's Ferry, is in the hands of the St. Clairsville authorities to insure payment of judgment against the town for $400, granted recently in the Belmont county courts to Mrs. Caroline Meyers.

Another "English fortune" of several millions has vanished. The accountant of the bank of England states that the "Whitacre fortune," which Columbiana county people are after, amounts to less than 100 pounds.

Mrs. Jeannette R. Hunter is dead at Akron and another woman whose name is unknown is at the point of death as the result of morphine poison. It is believed the visitor gave Mrs. Hunter an overdose and becoming alarmed resolved to die herself.

Orders from headquarters have stopped improvements at the Salem plant of the American Steel & Wire company. The cause is the alleged hostility of the Salem city government. An engineer at the mill was arrested for running without a license.

TWELVE PAGES.

Drunkenness is decreasing in the United States, according to the testimony of expert observers. The consumption of malt, spiritous and vinous liquors is still enormous, and the social glass is tolerated in many circles, but the vice of drunkenness is universally frowned upon. Business requirements, education, home influence, physical and moral culture, are all directed toward its eradication. Business men will not entrust their interests to others who have not clear brains and steady hands. Sobriety and success go together. The men who rise in politics, in the business world, in professional life and those who obtain greatest prominence in athletic circles are the men who do not drink. The temperance reformers are learning that the surest way to banish the evil is to educate the young as to the dire effects of drunkenness. The counsel of a loving and wise parent is the most effective temperance lecture. The schools are doing their part nobly, and the world is learning and growing better.

This is the season when the shrewd advertiser places his holiday announcements. There are hundreds of people who like to do their buying before the rush begins, while the goods are new and fresh and unhandled by shoppers. Clerks and customers both have more time and satisfactory purchases are more easily made. No part of a newspaper is scanned with more interest at this season than the descriptions given by the merchants of what they have to sell. He who would reap a harvest from advertising should begin planting his crop early.

The commissioner's latest estimate for an isthmian canal is $184,000,000, for the Panama route and $189,000,000 for the Nicaragua route. Colombia has proved to be a greedy haggler and it may become necessary to try what can be done with Nivaragua. The difference in estimated cost is not serious.

Venezuela is in danger of getting into serious trouble through her quarrelsome habits. As long as her people fought among themselves there was no protest. But when they begin to bulldoze foreigners they are likely to learn that other nations have law if they have none.

According to Mr. Bryan, "The Democratic party does not need leaders so much as it needs voters." This is a profound truth. But where is it to get them as long as popular education flourishes and grows stronger?

President Roosevelt is a true civil service reformer, and he also believes in living up to the fourteenth amendment. In his appointments neither race nor color counts; only merit.

Congress will not meddle with the tariff question at the present session. The people rule, and the people have commanded congress to "let well enough alone."

Mrs. Bertha Krupp is henceforth to be the official gunmaker of Prussia. She will be in a position to help enforce the laws, though denied any part in making them.

Andrew Carnegie would doubtless be willing to give several millions to get back his youthful health. But such a commodity is not purchaseable.

Oklahoma, with 600,000 population, needs a state government and ought to have it. The fact will doubtless be impressed upon congress.

The Mexican dollar, containing more silver than ours, is now down to 36½ cents. Where would our dollar be if it had been Bryanized?

A silver dollar is worth only 35 cents, and the Democratic party, which championed it, looks as if it were worth five cents less.

Out west they have taken to wearing sheetiron armor in football matches. This is reforming the sport backwards.

There is always something to be thankful for. Though congress is in session the state legislature is not.

The man who invented the modern flat is dead, but the evils that men do live after them.

Winter is well begun, but the old rule of half finished does not apply.

Ohio is 100 years old, but you'd never guess it from her looks.

Scrofula

Few are entirely free from it.

It may develop so slowly as to cause little if any disturbance during the whole period of childhood.

It may then produce irregularity of the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia, catarrh, and marked tendency to consumption before manifesting itself in much cutaneous eruption or glandular swelling.

It is best to be sure that you are quite free from it, and for its complete eradication you can rely on

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Use These Spices.

If you have a recipe calling for a certain spice, it means that the best is needed to produce the desired flavor. The writer of the recipe you use, had in mind only perfect full flavored spices; if you use the ordinary ones, results must be unsatisfactory. We are agents for Gilpin, Langdon & Co's High Grade Spices—the very choicest the world produces—and that is the kind you should have. They cost a trifle more because they are all spice, but they go much farther and for that reason alone they are more economical than inferior grades, not to speak of their delicious flavor and wholesomeness.

HIS FIRST VISIT IN FORTY YEARS

if this is Liverpool a great transformation has taken place since I was last here."

The officer was prone to believe that he had made a mistake.

"This is my first visit here since '61," Mr. Vogel further stated. "I won't attempt to tell you how much different the city is from what it was way back in those years. In fact, it would be impossible for me to tell you all. I will make myself believe that it is East Liverpool, but it seems like a fairy story. You see, I came here to meet one of my boyhood playmates whom I have not seen since I left. The name is Mrs. Oella Reitz."

Officer McDermott then offered his services in assisting the man to find the friend and in a few minutes the two who had been apart and heard nothing of each other during the long span of years spent the remainder of the day most delightfully in bringing back to memory reminiscences of their youthful days. [illegible] the city this morning [illegible] where he has other friends.

WELLSVILLE

SEVENTEEN ARRESTED

In a Wellsville Resort Saturday Night —Police And Mayor Kept Busy.

Mayor Fogo has been a busy man for the past two days and has at the same time kept the police force very busy. Saturday evening shortly before 11 o'clock Officers Davis, Canaday, Henthorn and Elliott raided a house at 512 Coal street, commonly known as "Peggy's place." Nine girls and eight men were placed under arrest and gave security for their appearance before Mayor Fogo this afternoon.

The proprietress, Cassie Coyle, put up $15 for her appearance and the balance of the men and girls each put up $10, making a total of $175 which was turned over to the mayor as security money. The mayor stated yesterday that he expected every one to appear before him this afternoon.

Mrs. Mary Dennis, who was arrested last Friday evening, charged by a man known by the name of Pittsburg Jack with striking him without provocation, appeared before Mayor Fogo Saturday afternoon. She was dismissed, "Pittsburg" failing to appear against her. The mayor said: "If Pittsburg will stay away from town and Mary will stay off the street corners we will call the case off."

On account of the illness of J. H. Jacobs, father of M. Jacobs, the lad who was arrested a few days ago on a charge of petit larceny, and for whom security was put up for his appearance before the mayor Saturday evening, the case was continued until some time this week.

James Russell, who was arrested one day last week, charged with interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty, appeared before the mayor at the time set Saturday evening and pleaded guilty. He was dismissed without fine, but was given good advice which will probably prevent any repetition of the offense.

Reports are expected from the committee appointed at a meeting held two weeks ago, on the matter of redisticting the city and other work connected with the new code.

A night watchman may be appointed by the mayor and the appointment presented to the council to confirm. Another officer is needed on the night force to take the place made vacant by Fred Houser, who is now cheif.

A. have completed arrangements with the second team of Beaver college for a game to be played in the gymnasium of the college at Beaver, Pa., Thursday evening of next week. It is expected that quite a crowd of East Liverpool lads will accompany the team. The intermediates will line up as follows: R. Bucher, H. Watkins and Ed Hymes, guards; Milton Erlanger, center; Will Watkins, Samuel Bucher and Albert Evans, forwards.

The Gas Was Off.

For nearly one hour Sunday Wellsville citizens who depend on gas for heat and light were without gas and the thermometer registered about 30 above zero. The Fort Pitt Gas company, on account of making connections with their main line, had to shut the gas off from 8:30 until 9:30 a. m. It was deemed best to make the connections at the present time before the severe cold weather sets in.

STRUCK BY STREET CAR

Team of Valuable Work Horses Killed In Chester On Saturday.

Another street car accident occurred Saturday evening at about 6 o'clock. A team of horses owned by Arner & Bowers, the Chester liverymen, were so badly injured that they had to be shot an hour later. A Rock Springs car in charge of Motorman Reed and Conductor Azdell struck the horses near the corner of Third street and Carolina avenue. The horses were dragged some distance before the car came to a standstill, as the track was wet at the time. They were terribly bruised and mangled and their suffering was pitiful.

Motorman Reed said he saw nothing until he was upon them. Mr. Arner, who had been working the team, had unhitched them from the wagon and started home towards the barn. James Keevan, who was with Arner, started after them but did not reach them in time to get them off the tracks before the car hit them. The loss will be quite severe as the team was one of the best in the stables.

Some difference of opinion exists as to where the blame rests. Some think there is some blame attached on both sides. The team is said to be valued at $250. Arner & Bowers, it is said, will ask damages.

FIRST STREET BRIDGE

Agreement Reached Between Members of Council And Railroad Officials.

The officials of the Panhandle railroad came to Chester Saturday by special car to view the First street crossing. With the party was Supt. R. E. Carey, of the Pittsburg division of the Panhandle, and Engineer A. L. Morgan, of maintenance of way. The party alighted at First street, where the council awaited them.

They immediately took measurements and made plans of the proposed bridge. Council agreed that if the railroad company would put in a new steel bridge they would make the approaches. The members will report to council in time for final action upon it at their next regular meeting next Thursday evening.

The Coal Under the River.

Seventy thousand acres of coal land worth from $10 to $100 per acre, is involved in a question of title. The question is who owns the bed of the Ohio river, the United States, the state or the property owners abutting on the river. It is an old question, but is arose anew in the sale of coal lands a few days ago Unless the legislature enacts some law upon the subject it will probably be carried to the supreme court of the United States. The river is underlaid with coal, which can be mined by shafting.

Church Organization.

The Presbyterians of Chester, who effected a temporary organization some time ago, will meet at the central school building tomorrow evening for the purpose of permanently organizing and taking other actions towards establishing and building a church. Rev. J. R. Hosick, of Hookstown, and Rev. D. A. Greene, of Fairview, will be present to assist in the work.

It was reported today that a house occupied by the family of Mrs. Rachel Cullen, had been destroyed by fire at New Cumberland Saturday night. The loss is estimated at $1,000. Children set fire to it while trying to pour oil into lighted lamp. No one was injured, but the loss falls very heavily on the woman, all of whose possessions were destroyed.

SECULAR THEMES ABLY DISCUSSED

Rev. C. G. Jordan Discourses on Trusts and Various Other Matters.

ARBITRATION SENTIMENT

In Dealing With Strikes Something to Be Devoutly Thankful for—Signs of the Times As Related to Progress. Other Excellent Sermons.

It is seldom that a church congregation is treated to a talk as practical and so full of everyday truths as that delivered by Rev. C. G. Jordan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning. The discourse was replete with telling hits, and showed in every topic touched upon the results of careful study and a thorough knowledge of state and government affairs.

The sermon was out of the ordinary, in that it treated on subjects and took up matters seldom touched upon by pulpit orators on Sunday. The pastor made no apology for his choice of theme, saying he was vitally interested and profoundly impressed by the importance of the several matters in mind and felt that it was altogether proper they should be aired.

Rev. Mr. Jordan read for his text the first verse of the 107th Psalm: "O, give thanks to the Lord, for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever." In part the speaker said:

"When there is nothing transpires to excite or produce activity, affairs remains at a standstill. It is well for us to consider the question of whether there has been progress made or activity noted in the affairs of church and state during the past year for which we should be thankful. The moral enthusiasm has been manifest, and to this is due much of the success and forward move of the nation. In national affairs the idea of arbitration has gained a foothold, and if in no other way the year has brought forth transactions in which the government's highest officials have figured."

The growth of the trust was reviewed. Not many years ago a small amount of capital would suffice to establish a factory, the revenue from which would make an independent fortune for its owner in time. It was not long until other capital was called in and interests of the same character were combined so that establishment took on the proportions called trusts. The inventive genius of certain workmen had been employed and appliances installed which enabled one man to perform the work formerly requiring the time of three. In many ways these combinations of capital and industrial interests had been a benefit to the country, but there have been instances of where men had been robbed of the fruits of years of toil by having patents and improvements in mechanical appliances stolen or appropriated by his firm without his consent.

In this regard the trusts have been very wrong. However, the men who produced the great wealth saw the advantages of combination and they too organized for the common good. Both had a right to do this, in the opinion of the speaker, and the object was at once apparent. The farmer had combined interests in order that a solid front might be presented in the matter of competition, while the workmen organized that a just recompense might be asked for their services. Many reasons were cited showing that each had a perfect right to combine for their mutual good. The workmen had by concerted action secured shorter hours and better conditions, enabling himself and his employer to find more time for worship and other diversions calculated to benefit him morally and socially. The concessions, in the opinion of the speaker, had been of great and lasting benefit to both sides. The formation of these combinations had their bad effects, and in not a few cases unjust demands had been made which resulted disastrously to both employer and employe.

At this point the history of the late coal strike was recalled, or a comparison made in a similar manner. It was shown conclusively that this transaction had been disastrous, not only to the best interests of the parties directly involved, but to the whole people. Then the president of these United States interposed and asked why should these opposing forces not come together and reason this thing out. The suggestion was acted upon, and instead of prolonging a struggle that could not but end disastrously to both, besides causing a stagnation of every line of industry, the dispute had been submitted to a board of honest and conscientious men for settlement.

Rev. Mr. Jordan thanked God that the idea of arbitration had been adopted; that the time had come when differences could be adjusted in other ways than bloody battles and prolonged strikes. He hoped that the time would soon come when the navy yards would be blotted out and cannons would not be mounted on battle fields to shoot down our fellow beings. The time was fast approaching when men would meet at the high tribunal of reason and disputed questions would be submitted to arbitration.

Reference was made to one of the great curses of the land—that of intemperance, and considerable time was devoted to the subject. The pastor asserted that nineteen-twentieths of the convictions in our county and city courts could be traced to this cause. The Beal local option law recently enacted was touched upon, and the framers of that measure commended in no uncertain terms. It would if properly applied do much good. If in no other way the law would put a stigma upon the traffic and brand it as a curse.

In looking over the election returns the speaker noticed that the Prohibition vote had increased and was steadily gaining. He thanked God that the sentiment in favor of temperance and sobriety was growing. "Through the operation of this most beneficial of all temperance acts, I would to God that every hell hole in the city, state and nation could be closed forever." The increase in the temperance sentiment since last Thanksgiving had, he thought, been manifest.

Rev. Mr. Jordan was thankful for this awakening, and for the fact that there had been increased interest in the church and its work. Other interests had expanded—why not the church. The congregation was urged to prepare itself to receive this spirit of progressiveness which was everywhere manifested, and to thank God for the opportunity to join in the onward march toward the coveted goal.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Problem of Grading In East Liverpool Ably And Interestingly Discussed.

A 2-hour session of the City Sunday School association was held at the Christian church yesterday afternoon. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and the interest shown indicates that the association will accomplish much good.

W. W. Sloan presided and the opening prapey was made by Rev. Mr. Steele. The chair was composed of the following persons:

Messrs. Craddock Reese, Edward Beardmore, Edgar Eagan; Misses Annie Beardmore, Laura Farrell, Nellie Lloyd, Bessie Stanley, Kitty Sinclair, Miss Clara Wagner presiding at the organ.

The topic for discussion yesterday was "Can the East Liverpool Sunday School Be Successfully Graded?" A paper was read by Charles Brown, of the Baptist church, who treated the subject in an able manner.

Discussion of the subject was participated in by Prof. R. E. Rayman, Dr. M. B. Pratt, E. D. Moore, Rev. J. W. Gorrell, William Morris, D. F. White and others. When it was ended the time of the meeting had expired, and two subjects were left for another time. They were "The Measure of the Teacher's Responsibility," and "When And Where Should Lesson Helps Be Used?"

CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Impressive Exercises at St. John's Lutheran Church Were Held Yesterday.

The sixth anniversary of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran church was celebrated yesterday in a fitting manner.

Rev. R. M. Zimmerman, late of Santiago, Cuba, was to have delivered the addressed, but he was unable to reach this city in time, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz, pastor of St. John's, was compelled to officiate.

The service was none the less interesting by reason of the change, as the discourse of Rev. Mr. Reinartz was a most interesting and instructive one. He took as his subject "The heaven declareth the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The theme was especially adapted to a service of this kind, and Rev. Mr. Reinartz treated his hearers to an unusually brilliant sermon.

Riches in Christ.

Services at the Methodist Protestant church yesterday morning were unusually interesting. Dr. Jones delivered an eloquent sermon from the text, "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." The keynote of the sermon was the poverty of Christ, that through His poverty man might be saved. He came into the world to seek and save, and Christ could not do this unless He made Himself as one of the masses.

St. Andrew's Day Services.

St. Andrew's day was celebrated at St. Stephen's Episcopal church yesterday. The members of the society of St. Andrew attended the service in a body, and the sermon and special music were particularly designed for the benefit of the Brotherhood.

HIGH TRIBUTES TO HIS MEMORY

MORE HOSPITAL SCANDALS

Work of a Shady Character By the Old Board at Dayton State Hospital—The World's Fair Commissioners for Ohio.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, December 1.—The press at the state capital made many eulogistic references to the late Captain William T. Cope, former treasurer of state, who was born and reared in Columbiana county, and who was laid to rest in this city Saturday. Most of the state officials were present at the obsequies, which were simple and touching. The pall-bearers were close friends of the deceased and were as follows: Hon. I. B. Cameron, treasurer of state; Hon. Harry M. Daugherty, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the time Judge Nash was named for the place; Charles Wambaugh, Oliver Perry, Scott A. Webb, Charles Morris, Samuel P. Elliott and Charles Hain.

On Sunday the Ohio State Journal printed this: "In the death of Hon. William T. Cope Wednesday evening Ohio loses a citizen who served his state well for many years. Mr. Cope was elected to represent Columbiana county in the sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth general assemblies, and became almost from the inception of his first term one of the leaders of the house. At the beginning of his second term he was made chairman of the finance committee, a position which he filled with great credit to himself and the state. W. A. Thompson, treasurer of Columbiana county, a close friend of Mr. Cope, attended the funeral."

In appointing Senator Moore, of Athens, and Representative Hagenbuch, of Urbana, members of the commission to represent Ohio at the St. Louis exposition, Governor Nash acted upon advice given by Judge George B. Okey, a Democrat and one of the best lawyers in the state. Attorney General Sheets rendered an opinion informing the governor that the appointment of legislators on the committee would not be unconstitutional, but Judge Okey holds that as the commissionerships are but temporary and not permanent, they do not fall within the inhibition of the constitution, which prescribes that members of the legislature shall not serve in any office created by the legislature of which they are members, until one year after the expiration of the term of office of the member. The judge says the commissionerships are not civil offices as construed by the constitution.

A report filed with Governor Nash by the trustees of the Dayton State hospital brings to light transactions by the board appointed to manage the institution by the Bushnell administration and which Governor Nash ousted, of a very shady character. No charges are made, the facts as discovered by the present board merely being given. Among other things, a shortage of $4,000 was found. The report has been placed in the hands of the attorney general, and it is likely that legal proceedings will be instituted. The contents of the report are sensational in the extreme.

The strike assessments for the support of the anthracite miners have been discontinued in Ohio. The assessment was levied last July, and while it was in effect each miner gave 10 per cent of his wages to a fund which was used in maintaining the strike. About 150,000 Ohio miners paid assessments.

REALM OF SPORTS

ENDED IN A FIGHT

CHESTER INDIANS WANTED TO PUNISH THE B. A. C.

East Liverpool Boys Declared Winners, But Opponents Were Not Satisfied.

The foot ball game played at Rock Springs park Saturday afternoon by the Brewery Athletic club of this city and the Chester Indians, composed of tin mill employes, ended in a general fight, the result of the latter team refusing to abide by a decision of the referee on a ball which he declared dead, it having fallen to the ground after a fumble.

A member of the B. A. C. team, after the game said that, had not the East Liverpool team run from the park, every man would undoubtedly be today carrying a sore spot on his physiognomy. He said that the Indians were not satisfied to suffer fair defeat and to get even wanted to whip their opponents.

The halves played were of 15 minutes. In the first half Bridge scored a touchdown after a terrible run of 90 yards. Coleman made an advance of 10 yards and Brock, on a trick play, advanced 20 yards. Herbert, of the Indians, made a 10-yard run.

In the second half Bridge went through center for five yards and Coleman was thrown back five yards by the next rush. Brock figured conspicuously by running 10 yards around the end twice. Brock and Coleman fiercely tackled Herbert and succeeded in throwing him back five yards. The next rush was when the game ended. The ball was fumbled and fell to the ground. The referee immediately declared it dead and the Indians refused to stand for it. They were given 10 minutes by the referee to continue the game, and upon their refusing to again start the B. A. C. team was declared the winner by a score of 5 to 0.

Captain Brock claims his team to be the champion of eastern Ohio among all teams of 115 pounds in weight. He challenges any and all comers, and is willing to play for love or money. He is trying to arrange for a game with the Oakland team for next Saturday.

ANOTHER FAILURE

On the Part of the Columbian Juniors to Meet the C. F. Armours.

The C. F. Armour rugby team has about decided to give up meeting the Columbian Juniors this season. A second game was arranged between the teams for last Saturday, but as on the occasion of the Thanksgiving game the latter team failed to appear, and the Armours are now positive the Juniors are afraid of them.

The Armours would like to meet any reliable eleven in this section before the season closes. W. G. Dorf is the manager and communications addressed to him will receive consideration.

Sign of Cold Winter.

A local sportsman says the coming winter will be an extremely severe one. He bases his prediction on the fact that the hide of the squirrel in the nieghboring hills is so thick and tough that it can hardly be cut with a knife. He says he has hunted for many years and has yet failed to find squirrels with tough hides when a severe winter did not follow.

My young friend Jimmy Banks was married a little over a year ago. He had previously spent twelve months in the most furious courtship. The girl had not at first cottoned to Jimmy very much, but he moved heaven and earth so vigorously that she at last consented, says the Cosmopolitan. Now, the other day who appears before me but Jimmy, with a long face, and makes a complaint that the baby keeps him awake nights. "Good gracious, Jimmy!" I said. "Didn't you know that babies always do that? A baby has to have some relaxation. Go home and be thankful that it isn't twins." There is the reverse side to every joy. ORANGE GROVES FOR CUBA

Fruit Long Forbidden to Be Grown For Sale In That Prolific Isle.

Cuba, so long hampered and repressed by Spanish domination, now that she has become a republic and free to work her own will, is turning her attention to developing the immense fruit growing possibilities of her prolific soil.

Under Spanish rule the Cubans were not permitted to engage in orange growing as a business. Landholders were permitted to have half a dozen orange trees on their plantation, but they could not sell the fruit. If they tried to do so, their trees were chopped down and they were fined. It was the same way with pineapples and limes, and the reason for this law was that the fruit growers in Spain would not tolerate competition from the island.

A CUBAN FRUIT STORE.

Since Cuba has become a republic, however, the planters are free to grow what they please, and a number of those who are engaging in the orange growing business are Americans.

Tropical fruits of all kinds grow wild in great abundance in Cuba. But according to the Spanish idea it did not pay to cultivate them. Quicker returns were obtained from sugar and tobacco; besides the latter products did not compete with Spain's fruit orchards. So, although bananas, oranges, plums, lemons, limes, citron, grape fruit, pineapples and pears are found all over the island growing in a wild state, they have never been cultivated to any extent.

Fruit growers from Florida and California who have examined the Cuban soil report that it is the best and richest land they have ever seen, possessing many properties which have to be supplied artificially in the United States.

Another feature which impressed itself upon the experts who went over the ground was that there are no frosts in Cuba. In Florida, where frosts often destroy crops for several years in succession, the owner of groves has to cover his trees. There is none of this in Cuba, for frosts are unknown there. The temperature averages 73 degrees for the year, and it is said that the orange crop will be ready for the market several weeks before that of Florida.

ELEVEN YEARS OLD

The East Liverpool Street Railway Put In Operation December 1, 1891.

Just 11 years ago today the East Liverpool Street railroad was put in actual operation in this city. It will be remembered by the older residents that the franchise was granted to Albert Johnson, Sidney Short and others 90 days previous to the placing in operation of the railway. Johnson promised the city that the road should be constructed and in running order within 90 days, and he kept his promise.

The line has been of great benefit to the citizens of this portion of the Ohio valley, and with extensions and improvements is likely to be of greater benefit in future years.

CURRENCY FIGURES.

Comptroller Ridgely's Report Shows That Deposits Reach New High Point.

TROOPS SHOULD HAVE CANTEEN.

Its Absence Is Proving Bad for Army, Says Secretary of War—Recommends Passage of the Militia Bill Now Before Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The annual report of William B. Ridgely, comptroller of the currency, has been prepared for transmission to congress. The report starts with a table giving a detailed statement of the resources and liabilities of all the national banks of the United States, as shown by the five reports of condition made in response to the call of the comptroller.

From the table it appears that on Sept. 15, 1902, the date of the last call, 4,601 associations reported, with aggregate resources of $6,113,928,50. The loans and discounts amounted to $3,208,127,480.69, or more than 50 per cent of the total resources of the banks. The items of surplus and undivided profits amounted, respectively, to $326,393,953,66 and $169,216,512,03. The individual deposits reached the highest point in the existence of the national banking system, $3,209,273,893.93. There was due to approved reserve agents, other national banks, state banks and bankers, trust companies and savings banks, the sum of $1,200,341,233.39.

A Year's Growth.

From Sept. 30, 1901, to Sept. 15, 1902, there was an increase of $418,581,617.54 in the aggregate resources of the reporting banks, the principal items of interest being, loans and discounts, $261,511,562.29; United States bonds, $12,570,520; due from national and other banks, $35,217,372.29. There was an increase in capital stock of $50,193,587; in surplus and other profits of $65,048,357.81; and in individual deposits of $271,520,660.60.

During the year ended Oct. 31, 1902, 470 banks were chartered, with an aggregate capital of $31,800,000, of which number 302, with capital of $7,905,000, were of the smaller class, and 168, with capital of $23,225,000, had individual capital of $50,000 and over. There was an average of one and one-half banks organized on every secular day of the year.

The banking power of the world in 1850, that is, capital, surplus profits, note issues and deposits, as stated by the late M. G. Mulhall, was £3,197,000,000, as follows:

United Kingdom, £910,000,000; continental Europe, £1,037,000,000; Australia, Canada, Cape Colony, Argentina and Uruguay, £220,000,000, and United States, £1,030,000,000. In 1894 Maurice L. Muhleman calculated the banking power of the world at £3,915,000,000.

Mr. Ridgely discusses the needs of currency legislation at great length and gives a brief statement of the action taken and trend of discussion at meetings of bankers' associations.

Secretary Root's Report.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The report of Secretary of War Root, to be sent to congress, makes many recommendations somewhat in line with those of his last report. Perhaps the most interesting point is on the subject of canteens, in which the secretary says:

"I am convinced that the general effect of prohibiting the use of beer and light wines within the limited area of the of the army post is to lead the enlisted men to go out of the post, to frequent vile resorts which cluster in the neighborhood, to drink bad whisky to excess, and to associate intimately with abandoned men and more abandoned women; and that the operation of the law is to increase drunkenness, disease of the most loathsome kind, insubordination and desertion, and moral and physical degeneration."

On the disposition of the army in peace, he recommends large camps adjacent to, but beyond the limits of large cities, rather than many small camps, thus giving opportunity for increasing the efficiency of the army.

Militia System.

On the question of state militia, the secretary urges the passage of the bill now before congress, and says in part:

"It is really absurd that a nation which maintains but a small regular army and depends upon unprofessional citizen soldiery for its defense should run along as we have done for 110 years under a militia law which never worked satisfactorily in the beginning, and which was perfectly obsolete before any man now fit for military duty was born."

The secretary recommends the creation of a general staff for the army, with the commanding general as chief. This staff, however, would not be modeled after those of European armies.

The secretary estimates the needs of his department for the year ending June 30, 1904, as follows: Civil establishment, $2,020,896; military establishment, support of the army and of the military academy, $77,986,515.23; public works, including fortifications and river and harbor improvements, $10,175,613.03; miscellaneous, $5,806,411.10; total, $135,989,435.42. The total estimate for the year ending June 30, 1903, was $137,409,836.26, and the appropriation by congress was $146,937,395.77.

ENGLAND'S ACTIVE FOE, THE MAD MOLLAH.

A small British army is now hard at work endeavoring to rout the forces of the Mad Mollah in Somaliland, Africa. The Mad Mollah and his 12,000 followers recently defeated a British force, inflicting considerable loss.

LOVE FOUND A WAY

Young Couple Had Trouble in Getting Married, But Finally Succeeded.

Charles Householder, of Sebring, and Miss Mamie McGuffin, of East Palestine, experienced much trouble in getting married on Thanksgiving day. They first visited Father Barth, of the Catholic church at East Palestine, who refused to perform the ceremony because the prospective groom was not a member of the church, and who further notified the couple that he would warn every Catholic priest in the vicinity not to perform the ceremony.

Not to be so easily discouraged the couple boarded the first train for Alliance, and related their wishes to Father Farrell, who agreed to perform the ceremony after satisfying himself as to the ages of the parties and the publication of the bans. The last word of the ceremony had scarcely been spoken when Father Farrell was called to the telephone and received Father Barth's message of warning. The message came too late, however, and the couple departed for their home, happy in the thought of victory.

Started Fire With Kerosene.

Elkhart, Ind., Dec. 1.—Arthur and Charles Lynett, 8 and 6 years respectively, died yesterday as the result of burns. They were the children of James Lynett, a Lake Shore fireman. Mr. and Mrs. Lynett slept late. The boys came down stairs before their parents arose. The older boy attempted to start a fire with kerosene. An explosion followed, both boys receiving burns from which they died an hour later.

OHIO'S CENTENN'AL

ANNIVERSARY OF FIRST CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Appropriate Exercises Held at Chillicothe on Saturday.

Chillicothe, December 1.—On Saturday this city, the original capital of the northwest territory, out of which was formed the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, celebrated the centennial anniversary of the assembling of the convention which framed the first constitution of Ohio. Advantage was taken of the occasion to place a tablet to mark the site of the building in which the constitutional convention assembled and which was also the capitol of the northwest territory as well as of the state of Ohio until the seat of government was removed to Columbus.

In the morning the tablet was presented to the city and county by Robert W. Manley, a great-grandson of Edward Tiffin, the first governor of Ohio. It was accepted by Wallace D. Yaple, mayor of the city, and was unveiled by Miss Effie Scott, a granddaughter of Governor William Allen and a great-granddaughter of Governor Duncan McArthur.

In the afternoon at Memorial hall the celebration was continued by an introductory address by Hon. W. T. McClintick, one of the oldest residents of the city. His address was full of delightful reminiscences of the city and its pioneers. Hon. Daniel J. Ryan spoke on "The Original Constitution and Its Effect on Ohio History."

At the close of the centennial exercises in the afternoon the members of the State Historical Society met to discuss the centennial celebration of Ohio's admission to the union, which is to be held here May 21 and 22, 1903. It was decided to make this celebration one of national interest, and the president and governors of all the states in the union will be invited to participate.

SETTLED AT $50 EACH

Panhandle Railroad Company Adjusts Claims Against It By Picnickers.

Steubenville, December 1.—It will cost the Pennsylvania Railroad company $1,150 because one of its conductors failed to stop a passenger train at Willow Springs last Fourth of July. The company late Wednesday compromised with the claimants in the 23 cases against it for $50 each. The agreements, therefore, will result in the dismissals of the suits now standing against the company in the circuit court.

A party of 23 people, Wheeling people, spent last Fourth of July at the springs some distance above the city, and made arrangements for the late train on the Panhandle to stop there and take them on for the return trip to the city.

The party was overlooked in a rush of business on the road that day, and suits were entered by each member of the party for $1,000 damages each.

In the trial of the first case, that of Lillian Poe vs. the Panhandle, the jury brought in a verdict of $60 for the plaintiff. This termination of the test case compelled the railroad company to sue for settlement in all of them. Prior to the trial of the Poe case the company had offered each member of the party $60, but it was refused. The company thus gets off for half the amount.

CONGRESS CONVENES.

Territorial Bill, Trusts, Tariff and Cuban Reciprocity Will Take Time of Senate.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TUESDAY

Deluge of Bills Dealing With the Trust Question Poured Into the House on Opening of Final Session of the Fifty-Fifth Congress.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The admission of the territories of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona as states of the Union was the subject of general importance to receive the attention of the senate in the session which began at noon today.

After the omnibus territorial bill passed the house last session its friends in the senate were so insistent on action by the senate and so strong in point of numbers that in the interest of other pending legislation a unanimous agreement was reached that in consideration of abatement by the friends of the measure during the last session the committee on territories would report on the bill on next Wednesday, Dec. 3, and that a week later the bill should become the unfinished business of the senate, which means that unless the measure shall be displaced by vote or by unanimous consent it will occupy the first place on the senate calendar until disposed of.

Change in Tariff Improbable.

Other questions which, in addition to the appropriation bills, are expected to receive attenuon of the senate at this session are the trusts, the tariff and Cuban reciprocity. Very few Republican senators admit the probability of any change of the tariff law during the present session, but some bills to modify present schedules may be introduced and speeches made thereon. Some senators speak of the creation of a tariff commission as a possibility, but there are differences of opinion as to the utility of such a body. There is quite a unanimity of opinion favorable to anti-trust legislation, and this opinion goes to the extent of predicting results along the lines indicated by Attorney General Knox for the amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law. The present week will barely witness the beginning of the three months' work. Today the usual committee of two senators was appointed to call on the president and resolutions of regret for the death of Senator McMillan of Michigan, brought the day's session to a close a few minutes after assemblage. Tomorrow the president's message will be read, and beyond this no business will be attempted. The sessions of Wednesday and Thursday also will be brief, with an adjournment from Thursday until the following Monday.

There will be an effort to confirm some of the numerous nominations expected to be sent in at the first opportunity.

A large number of bills will be introduced on Wednesday and Thursday and the foundation will be laid for what all predict will be a very crowded session.

Flood of Bills.

When the house convened today to enter on the final session of the fifty-fifth congress a perfect deluge of bills dealing with the trust question in all its phases were thrown into the legislative hopper. It is admitted on all hands that this will be the most important topic of discussion. Indeed, the leaders incline to the belief that beyond the appropriation bills and routine legislation it will be the only general subject on which there is a chance of action at the short session. The president's recommendations on the subject are waited with interest. The most conservative opinion among the Republican leaders seems to favor an application for the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law. Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, chairman of the interstate and foreign commerce committee, is one of those who believe that the Sherman law, if enforced, is sufficient to meet the situation, and today he introduced a bill appropriating $500,000 to be used by the department of justice in prosecutions under the present law. Meantime the trust bills will be referred to the judiciary committee.

To Expedite Appropriations.

The leaders already have resolved to expedite the appropriation bills as much as possible in order to allow the largest margin of time for other matters. The appropriation committees will go to work at once and prepare the supply bills as rapidly as possible. The legislative and pension bills probably will be read before the end of the week. One of the first things the appropriation committee will be called on to do, however, is to prepare a bill to provide for the coal strike commission. The appropriations committee met today to adopt a bill which it is believed will be presented and passed this week. No opposition to it from the minority is anticipated. The session of the house today was brief. There was roll call and the announcement of the deaths that have occurred during the recent recess. The house adjourned until tomorrow, when the president's message will be read. There is no program for the remainder of the week beyond the bill to defray the expenses of the coal strike commission. If the regular order is demanded the London dock charge bill is the unfinished business.

THE COAST BEACONS

PERILS OF THE MEN WHO LIGHT THE MARINER ON HIS WAY.

Winter Vigil of Uncle Sam's Lightkeepers—Dangerous Spots on the Coasts—Dreaded Diamond Shoals. When a Lightship Breaks Away.

This is the month when Uncle Sam's coast guardians begin their winter-long fight against storm and fog, those twin evils of the sailor, ever a menace, but particularly so from November to March.

The life of the lightkeeper is at best a lonely one, but when the beacon is built on ledges and rocky islands far from land the post becomes one of peril as well as isolation.

During the late fall and winter the gales become almost incessant, and frequently there may be a month or more when the sea is so rough that supply ships dare not approach the wave battered rocks on which many of the lighthouses perch. Then the keepers are as besieged men. They must save every drop of oil that their lights may be kept burning even should a new supply fail to arrive when due. They must watch their machinery every minute, for no help could reach them to repair it should it break down.

The famous Minot's Ledge light, off Boston harbor, for instance, stands eighty-five feet high from the level of the sea. The reef on which it is set is far below the surface in any except low tides even in ordinary weather. When the ocean roars around it in a winter storm, the mariner, looking at it from the sea, often can discern only its lantern above the spray. The entrance to this lighthouse is half way up the tower, and an iron ladder reaches from it to sea level. In the winter there are days after days and sometimes weeks when no man could venture into that doorway. He would be carried away by the rollers that break against the base and sweep the little balcony.

But it is in the lightship that the brave light keeper is subjected to the greatest hardships and peril. Anchored far out at sea to mark some dangerous rock or shoal, they are battered and tossed by furious storms.

While every year sees more or less damage to lighthouses and beacons, there is only one spot along the coast that has defied the lighthouse builders successfully, and that is Diamond shoals, off Cape Hatteras, the most dangerous place in the service.

Several attempts have been made to build a lighthouse on the shoals, but so far unsuccessfully. So this year, as in previous years, a lightship will mark this danger spot, dreaded by every mariner who sails the southern coast.

As showing the dangers of this station the department's directions for this year are conclusive: "Light vessels No. 71 and 72 will be used on this station alternately." Each of these ships is fitted so that she can move under her own steam, so she will not be an absolutely helpless hulk when she breaks away from her mooring in a howling gale, as she will more than once in this coming winter.

Lightship No. 69, also built to go under her own steam, was driven from her anchorage six times in four months, but managed to steam back to her position each time. The seventh time she failed. She fought against the hurricane for three days and then went up on the North Carolina beach near the Creeds Hill life station. The life savers got her crew off.

The value of the Diamond Shoals lightships is shown by the fact that during this vessel's last year on her station 2,570 steam vessels and 2,576 sailing vessels passed her.

The United States lightship that has had what is probably the most extraordinary experience is Columbia river light vessel No. 50. Her station is off the Columbia river, eight miles off shore, in the Pacific. One November day a gale began to blow from the sea. The chains snapped, and she moved toward the breakers. Sail was made, and she was worked twenty-five miles to sea. The next day two tenders steamed out to tow her in. Both failed. By dusk she was in the breakers. She was headed for the beach and struck. Her crew was taken off in the breeches buoy.

Such are the perils which the guardians of the coast are compelled to face each winter. Yet through it all they keep their lights burning except when overwhelmed by disaster. Without them navigation of Uncle Sam's coasts would be well nigh impossible.

Two Light Plays

Mrs. Le Moyne and James O'Neill In Vehicles Unworthy of Their Ability.

The Four Hundred will not enjoy "Among Those Present," because no one likes to have his corns trodden on. The ordinary world may like the play, because it lets them peep behind the curtains which hide the folly and emptiness of fashionable society from the gaping eyes of the uninitiated. Glen Macdonough has taken many bits from the printed doings of swell society and put them together to make a play. It is so nearly "nothing" for an actress like Mrs. Le Moyne, so trifling. It is like an artist doing well the regular work of an artisan. There is no credit to the actress. Any educated person can spell cat. So in this play of "Among Those Present." One recognizes Harry Lehr. There is a touch of familiarity in the sudden strike of the servants and a fresh lot being brought from an office in the city. A familiar odor greets the nostrils in the social fight over the entertainment of the crown prince at dinner and the hostess who succeeded in landing the fish, and we recognize the young man aspiring to get into this magic circle making his money on the exchange and suddenly being found dead in his rooms.

MRS. W. J. LE MOYNE.

The amateur circus and all its belongings were well carried out and was possibly a faithful reproduction in a way of social circuses. Then a foreign personage on his first visit to America occasionally airs his views of the apparently peculiar things society "always does," such as "building a mansion and at its completion locking it up and going to Europe." Such things are strung together in the form of a play and offered as a vehicle for a really good star to show her worth. Wasted, and more's the pity. The play has some very bright, pretty young girl parts, nicely shown; some good men roles, well enacted, and some interest. Those who saw Mrs. Le Moyne in "In a Balcony" as the jealous woman and outraged queen will never doubt the great ability of the star, but it would be hard to persuade one who for the first time saw her in "Among Those Present" that she was more than "very good." There is no opportunity for so excellent an artist as Mrs. Le Moyne. As Mrs. Clinton, the successful social leader, we see her dominate by a love for society its hollow pomp and her sacrifice of home, husband and pride for money and social glory.

Tommy Dodd was well played by George Douglas Parker and Dr. Clinton by Harold Russell. Next to the star, the best work of the play was done by Olga Flinck. Whoever this lady may be, as her name is not familiar to me, she is undoubtedly talented. Her work as Mrs. Parker was admirable, and in her heavy scene with Mrs. Le Moyne she bore the test of juxtaposition well.

Another poor vehicle for an excellent actor is offered for public approval. James O'Neill is on tour as Rurik the Serf in an adaptation from the French called "The Honor of the Humble." I feel like apologizing whenever I write that title. It is a very bad one and alone would not sell a ticket.

James O'Neill as Rurik makes a strong, manly and convincing character and has the sympathy of the audience, but the actor is too good to be wasted on such a role. It is not powerful enough for a man who has won the worldwide commendation which his Count of Monte-Christo has deservedly brought him. James O'Neill's work as the adventurous count is superb and has ranked him in his line with the best in any other line of acting. "The Honor of the Humble" does not give enough opportunity, and while O'Neill does all that is possible with the part it is not up to his standard. The play is handsomely mounted and costumed, and the company is good.

May Buckley as leading woman and Helen Tracy in the role of the Countess Suvoroff are both admirable additions to any production. Miss Buckley's Rhoda is a charming piece of work. Small, graceful, beautiful and winning in her light work, she surprised me in her emotional moments. She gives a delightful performance.

The Countess Suvoroff, whose son, Count Paul, is the last of the name, plans a marriage for him with Princess Helene Goudonoff of Moscow and finds that he has long been madly in love with Rhoda, a former serf, who because of her beauty and refined appearance has been reared in the countess' household more like a daughter than an inferior. The girl has forgotten somewhat her humble birth or real bondage and unbidden returns the love of Count Paul. When this condition is revealed to the countess, her humiliation is great, but her anger and wounded pride are greater. After a violent scene with her son, whom she loves with the absorbing passion of her life, she agrees to send him to Moscow to remain for a year. During that time he is to try to love the princess. If at the expiration of the time he still loves Rhoda, he will return, and his mother's opposition will be ended. She adds that he must not mention this compact to any one, especially Rhoda.

He goes, happy in waiting one short year. Inside of an hour after his departure the countess summons Rurik, her coachman, and one of the serfs. He has once saved the life of her son, and the men have grown from boyhood like friends. Their true positions are master and serf. Annually marriages are arranged by the ruling head with a view of keeping a strong race of servitors in the family, and this is the time. To the horror of Rhoda, Rurik is ordered to marry her. She is appalled, while he is overcome with his good fortune, for he has always worshiped in silence the star he never hoped to reach. Though Rhoda is a serf like himself, she has become a cultured lady by her life in the palace.

When Rurik sees her sorrow and hears the countess' bitter words about her daring to aspire to be her daughter-in-law, he understands that to gain her ends the countess will force even a worse partner on poor Rhoda if he refuses to marry her. Rhoda does not dream of this, and while admiring Rurik as a serf is horrified at the thought of marrying one man while loving another. The marriage is then and there consummated, and the couple are left alone. Rhoda upbraids Rurik for marrying her. Then he tells her the bitter truth, that loving her dearly he is heartbroken to find she loves Paul and that love is returned; that he married her to save her from a humbler slave than himself and will devote himself to trying to win her love, and until then will protect her as a brother and friend, never demanding any rights as a husband.

Four months later we find that his efforts have been ineffectual, and she loves Paul as ever. She is grateful to Rurik and has lived in his home, as his sister would, loving his noble character and unselfish devotion, but never thinking of him as her husband. It seems impossible to love another man as she loves Paul.

At this time the countess visits Moscow really to find out if her plan is working and is horrified to find that all is with the count as before. He is keeping his word to his mother, not dreaming she has betrayed him. Rurik travels to Moscow to see Count Paul, not knowing of the countess' presence, to satisfy himself if Paul is to marry the princess. I forgot to add that Rurik and Rhoda were enfranchised at the time of their marriage and are therefore at liberty to act as they see fit.

In Moscow the countess enters during the scene between the men and finds that her vile work is now known to her son. Rurik has found that Paul still loves Rhoda and does not know of her marriage, and when it is told he is beside himself. Rurik returns to Rhoda, finds that the countess still dares to scheme to bring her son happiness and wishes to send Rurik away on a mission. Rhoda she will then try to bring to her son as his mistress. Rurik indignantly reminds her that he and his wife are now free and she has no control over them. To free Rhoda from himself Rurik seeks a divorce. This is prevented again through the countess, who realizes that if Rhoda were free Paul would marry her. The czar is therefore asked to refuse the divorce. Rurik seeing that Rhoda will never get her happiness in this way, determines to retire to a monastery, for thus the church annuls a marriage never consummated in the home life. When Rurik in the presence of Father Andree is about publicly to renounce the world and Rhoda realizes his wonderful sacrifice, she awakens to her love for him and declares that she will not permit it, as she is his wife and loves him. Final curtain.

The Princess, quite a difficult part, was well played by Adelaide Whytall, as was Henri du Cachet by Frank A. Connor. Count Paul was very poorly done by John W. Albaugh, Jr.

COMRADES YET!

Roguish eyed,
Daddy's pride;
Funny little chap he is!
Day or night, hugs me tight;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"
Throws his little arms around me,
With his kisses to impound me;
In my pockets after candy;
Daddy's always got some handy!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Fresh and bright,
Every night
When I leave my business care,
There he is, fair he is,
Pulling out his daddy's chair!
Laughing in his childish fancy,
As by some queer necromancy
He produces pipe, tobacco,
Slippers from behind his back, oh!
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

Happy he
Is with me
When we play some little game;
Rain or shine, fair or fine,
Skies to him are all the same.
Makes no difference what the weather
When we romp and play together;
Comrades both, nor serf nor master,
And the heart beats stronger, faster;
Funny little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

In the sky,
By and by,
Will I meet my comrade there?
Will he be still with me,
Our companionship as fair?
God that ruleth, my petition,
Humbly and in right contrition,
Let it reach thy gracious ear;
Keep us comrades there as here!
Faithful little chap he is;
Likes to be "where pappy is!"

OUR NATIVE TREES

... By ...

THOMAS H. MACBRIDE, Ph. D.,
Professor of Botany, Iowa State University.

X.—Trees For Ornamental Purposes.

THUS far we have discussed trees chiefly in their broader economic aspects. We have thought of them as aggregated in forests either indigenous or artificial and as affecting the larger problems of human living and human happiness. Let us now consider the more simple relations which trees in smaller numbers bear to our enjoyment or comfort. Although as a people we destroy forests in a fashion for which history offers no precedent, we are nevertheless almost without exception tree planters. In our northern states at least a treeless yard or homestead is an exception so unusual as to be a matter of general comment. So strong is the tendency to plant trees about the house that the traveler may often find abundant attempts in this direction far out on the plains, where on account of continued dryness a tree cannot possibly grow. The pioneer in such a region will sometimes haul water for miles to pour around some transplanted cottonwood, watch it grow green for a season, only at length to see it perish in a day when the hot wind sweeps up across the desert. Our zeal is not according to knowledge, or, to put it the other way, our knowledge by no means equals our zeal.

To be reasonably successful tree planters there are several matters to which we must give heed. We must consider first of all the locality and its climatic conditions; second, the habit and history of the various species of trees from which selection must in any case be made, and, third, we must attend to the special purpose we have in view in making the particular plantations. This is all apart from the mere matter of setting the tree in the ground, pruning it, mulching it, etc., concerning which we may have something to say in the next chapter. Let us now study in the order named these several prerequisites to success. In the first place, it is evident that in tree planting much depends on having due regard to climatic and other local conditions. We must select species adapted to these conditions or our labor is in vain. In making such selection the flora of the locality or of the region round about is the absolute criterion. People in Iowa, for instance, need not put themselves to the trouble, as they have often done, to plant tulip trees in long rows about their holdings. Tulip trees were never an element of the Iowa forest or of any part of it. Neither do people of Ohio, though favored with the tulip trees, wisely attempt the several magnolias or the bald cypress, though these may find place in Kentucky or farther south. We must have respect to the natural distribution of these things or suffer the consequences. Beneficent nature has worked all this out for us, and, while for variety's sake we may introduce some novelties in her original scheme, we shall find ourselves everywhere, in the main, largely restricted to the results in her husbandry. As we go west in this latitude the number of arboreous species rapidly diminishes, as we have already stated, although by no means so rapidly as some have supposed. There are, for example, at least twenty-five species of trees and shrubs in the valley of the Missouri river where it begins to form the boundary of the state of Iowa. Farther west the number is of course smaller. The higher grounds are too dry to support trees at all. The few forms listed are limited to the water courses, diminished, dwarfed in size, until at last we begin to find the coniferous outliers of the Rocky mountain forests.

Over all this region, then, in general, trees native to the region may be successfully planted. But the second consideration mentioned, above all, now calls for remark. We must not only have regard to original distribution, but we must also study the habit, the habitat, of our different sorts of trees. This means simply a more exact examination of the particular case. Our native trees affect different situations, different soils, habitats we say, and, while many of them will grow almost anywhere if sufficient moisture is at hand, yet after all each does best in natural soil and surroundings. Thus willows grow by the water courses only. One common species is found generally on the driest hillsides. The black walnut rises to splendid perfection in rich alluvial soil; the beech and pine will flourish on a soil of sand and gravel; the white oak affects the loess capped ridge; the basswood and the hard maple, in the west at least, love the cool limestone ridge, the rocky bank; knee deep in the swamp stands the tamarack of the north, the cypress of the south; the bur oak lives in the sand, on sunny slopes, on dry, thin soils on the prairie, braving the prairie fires, even invading the desert in stunted, dwarfish growth to form the farthest western skirmish line of the Atlantic forest. These are only illustrations of how trees love special habitats. Nevertheless within their natural limits almost all trees flourish well in good, rich soil—not all. The expert forester knows his tree and knows exactly where it may be placed to best advantage. In general, as rainfall is less we need better soil and better cultivation.

In the third place, in selecting trees to plant the planter must have respect to his own ultimate purpose. If a prairie farmer desires to secure quick results, early protection, he will plant cottonwoods, white maples, box elders almost surely these because of their hardiness, ease of cultivation and rapidity of growth. Among them he will plant the larch, the Austrian pine, various evergreens, and if sufficiently farsighted he will intersperse seeds or seedlings of better varieties for the establishment of a permanent wood lot. If our tree planter is an eastern landholder desiring to restore a forest cover to the denuded farm, he will consult the species formerly occupants of the soil and be guided by the ordinary rules of reforestation, too extended to be here discussed.

But probably the greater number of those who read these columns are interested in tree planting chiefly as the art contributes to the adornment of street and park and lawn, to the decoration of the homestead, and precisely along these lines there seems to be everywhere room for improvement. In how many towns, not to say cities, in the United States have the trees been properly selected and regularly planted? In how many towns is the matter considered and systematically controlled? We have planted trees, but is it not true that each individual has obeyed his own individual impulse and as a result we have individualism run wild? In order to build a home for himself a man has been known to grub out or destroy a fine colony of young oaks or hickories, grade the surface from his lot and then in front of his premises plant a row of white maples or equally unsuitable species, having no regard to similar plantings on the part of his neighbors, but consulting some fancied convenience of his own, and that alone. Of course, the remedy for this is municipal control. The man who succeeds at last in surrounding his home with vistas of beauty effects it by carefully studying the situation as a whole, taking advantage of all that nature contributes, allowing art to supplement nature only where modification or addition is positively necessary. In the same way, if the city is to be properly planted and adorned, the entire property of the public must be treated as a unit, managed and planted as a single holding. A plan rapidly growing in popularity is to put all the tree planting of the town under control of a competent commission. When this is wisely done, we get system and may reasonably expect the very highest results.

In the city of Minneapolis every tree is under control of a committee having almost absolute power. The city plants and cares for all the trees within the municipality. A similar rule holds in Boston, Passaic, N. J., and several other American cities, to say nothing of the capitals of the old world.

It is said that such a commission is impracticable in our thousand smaller towns and villages. The reply is obvious that in such situation the problem is of proportionate simplicity, and it can be brought about by the people themselves if only they can be organized and in serious earnest. A village improvement society or simply a village committee is all we need. For instance, there is no better street tree in all the world than our American elm, fortunately the most common tree throughout the northern states, most easily transplanted, most certain to afford a symmetrical growth if simply let alone. Now, it ought to be possible even in the small village to plant the principal street with elms, a row on each side, all appropriately spaced and all in one straight line. We admit that if we were to judge by what is shown today such a thing would seem an impossibility, but it is possible all the same. In any village let such trees be today so planted, and in thirty years they will be the pride of the town, in a century its glory. The famous elms of Yale are the American elms, so nearly universal as to be practically free to the poorest corner from Connecticut to the Dakotas. In all our towns the white or soft maple has been too often made to do duty in lieu of the elm. It grows perhaps more rapidly, but nevertheless to less advantage. Soft maples have their use, but not along the streets. the peculiar branching giving the tree as it grows older a top more and more open. The principal branches lengthen rather stiffly and become presently easy victims of the storm. The hard maple is also objectionable along the streets, not that it is not an exceedingly beautiful tree, equally attractive by the dense shade of its summer green and by the richness of its autumn glory, but it lacks endurance in isolated situations.

But it is said that the elms are monotonous; we must have variety. Let it be so. Ample variety is easily within our reach. There are many other natives of our forests waiting our disposal. The linden is a beautiful tree and will make, where properly cared for, a most handsome row, its foliage rich and umbrageous, its flowers odorous and honey laden, a gift to the bees. The honey locust is by no means to be despised. The thornless variety is a lovely tree, perfectly healthy and hardy, the wood heavy and strong, the foliage feathery and graceful, the rather abundant fruit the only objection. The sycamore in some places makes beautiful rows, but seems not to thrive very well far from its favorite alluvial habitat. The horse chestnut is an exceedingly ornamental tree, generally hardy, unrivaled in its pyramids of tinted bloom. Nor should the catalpa, our native species, be forgotten. The hackberry makes a rounded head of soft, pale leaves, a clean, straight, elegant stem, and may well on cross streets supplant its more vigorous cousin, the elm.

Substitute For Quinine.

You think you are bilious. Well, I should think you would be! What did you expect your stomach and liver could stand? You ought to be thankful that you got off with simply being bilious. The wonder is that you have any stomach or liver left at all, says Medical Talk.

What would I advise? Well, in order to stir up your liver a little and give you a slight gymnastic exercise I would advise you to go and find the doctor who gave you 100 grains of quinine and give him a good licking. Hit him with your hands. Don't hit with a club or shoot him. Just use your open hand. After you have done this right I would quit using tobacco, if not entirely at least nearly so, say a little after supper each day. Use no alcoholic stimulants of any sort. Let your diet be simple and plain. Avoid excesses. Avoid everything fried during the hot season. Eat much fruit; drink much water. Take long nights' sleep. Behave yourself. Keep away from the doctors.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Anxious Daughter—Mother, did papa have his salary increased when he was married?

Mother—No, my child.

Anxious Daughter—I don't suppose he had any money saved up, had he?

Mother—Not a penny. He spent all he earned.

Anxious Daughter—Did you get along comfortably?

Mother—We were very happy.

Anxious Daughter—Well, you know, George hasn't been able to save a penny, but—

Mother—Now, Maria, if that poverty stricken fellow dares to show his face here again I'll get your father to turn him out!

DARK SOMALILAND

BUT LITTLE KNOWN OF THIS ODD CORNER OF EASTERN AFRICA.

Inhabited by a Nomadic Race Descended From the Arabs—Their Strange Religious Beliefs—Why England Must Crush the Mollah.

England seems never to be entirely at peace. Always there appears to be fighting in some one of her colonies or dependencies. Her latest trouble with the Mad Mollah, by which two British officers and a hundred men were slain, has aroused the foreign office, and a punishing force has been sent to crush that troublesome individual.

General W. H. Manning, who will have charge of affairs in Somaliland, is the principal military officer in the foreign office and secretary of the protectorate of Somaliland. His familiarity with the land of the Mad Mollah augurs ill for the welfare of that fanatic.

Arabs describe as "Bar Agan," or the "Unknown Land," that particular horn of Africa's eastern coast which lies directly opposite Aden, called Somali, and which from time immemorial has enjoyed so evil a reputation that not only has it been avoided by the vast majority of explorers of the Dark Continent, but has likewise in the partition of the latter by the great powers of Europe been left untouched save as regards the coast line, none of them caring to assume the responsibilities of the sovereignty of the hinterland.

There is an Italian, an English, an Abyssinian and a French Somaliland. But the rule of none of these four nations extends beyond the littoral, and as long as there is no undue attempt on the part of the natives of the hinterland to interfere with the trade that finds its outlet and inlet at the various stations on the coast the tribes of the interior are left to fight among themselves as much as they please, and no attempt is made to bring them under subjection.

The Somalis are a nomadic race and claim to be descended from fugitive Arabs who, abandoning their own country, landed on the Somali coast, subsequently intermarrying with the local tribes. The dawn of the Somali people coincides with the rise of Mohammed some 1,200 or 1,300 years ago. They, however, do not belong to the true African race, for they reveal no signs of the negroid type and from a slight resemblance in language are believed to be allied to the races of Hindustan.

The religion professed by the Somalis—that is to say, the most fanatical type of Islam—has the effect of keeping them engaged in constant warfare with their neighbors, the Abyssinians, who profess what is probably the lowest class of Christianity. Indeed, one of the most cherished objects of the Somali and, in fact, of all the warlike Mohammedan tribes of that portion of Africa, has been to prevent Abyssinia from securing or retaining possession of a seaport on the northeast coast of the Dark Continent.

This is due to an ancient Mohammedan propheecy, according to which Mecca, the most holy place of Islam, will one day be razed to the ground by the Abyssinians, an event which will be attended by the most disastrous consequences for the whole of the Moslem world.

It is owing to this belief that the British must crush the Mad Mollah, since to leave him unconquered would place them in bad light not only with the Egyptian army, but also in the eyes of the 80,000,000 Mohammedans in India.

To abandon Somaliland to his sway would work incalculable damage to her power and prestige in all other Mohammedan countries under her rule. Not only must he be defeated, but crushed absolutely. For in the case of Islam more than in that of any other creed the authenticity of the mahdis and prophets is gauged by the degree of their success against the infidels, and the leaders of any armed religious movement are not relegated to the ranks of false prophets until defeat, capture or death has convinced their coreligionists that they were frauds.

This is the task assigned to General Manning. To assist him he will have the troops already in Somaliland and an extra brigade from India. That he will eventually succeed is certain, but at what cost remains to be seen.

What He Meant.

"I see Follansby is on his legs again."

"No, he isn't. He hasn't a cent. Had to sell his horse and carriage."

"That's what I mean. Now he walks."—Success.

Would Not Insure Him.

Insurance Companies would not insure the Rev. J. W. Yeisley because he had Kidney Trouble.

Mr. Yeisley was much discouraged till a friend recommended Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and it cured him.

Mr. Yeisley writes:

"My kidneys and liver were in bad condition and I was anxious for relief. I had tried many remedies without success. I bought a bottle of 'Favorite Remedy,' which effectively proved its merit. The best proof that it has completely cured me is my recent acceptance by four different life insurance companies."

The Rev. Mr. Yeisley is the pastor of the First Reformed Church of St. Paris, Ohio, and is as well the editor of the St. Paris Dispatch.

There is no question that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best and surest medicine in the world for diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, as well as the weaknesses peculiar to women. It quickly relieves and cures inability to hold urine and the necessity of getting up a number of times during the night and puts an end to that scalding pain when passing urine.

It is for sale by all druggists in the New 50 Cent Size and the regular $1.00 size bottles—less than a cent a dose.

ORINOCO BLOCKADE.

British Want to Know Intentions of United States Regarding Manzanares.

VENEZUELA IS APPREHENSIVE.

Will Renew Diplomatic Relations With France, Which Have Been Ruptured Since 1894—President Castro Opening Prisons and Releasing Prisoners.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 1.—The United States is confronted with the question of declaring its attitude regarding the blockade of the Orinoco river, which has been declared by the Venezuelan government. The British authorities say they have asked United States Consul Smith what the intentions of the Washington government are regarding the steamer Manzanares, belonging to the Orinoco Steamship company, which is now here. Some days ago the British authorities announced their willingness to convey the Manzanares up the Orinoco, but withdrew their offer on the arrival of the United States gunboat Nashville, on the ground that the United States now has a warship in port and should convoy its own merchantmen. Consul Smith is conferring with Admiral Crowninshield and Admiral Sumner, it is believed, with regard to the Manzanares. The Nashville is suited to the purpose of convoying the Manzanares, but no action is possible until instructions have been received from Washington.

Embarrassing American Commerce.

The United States is the only nation which has not taken a decided stand regarding the blockade, and it is claimed that this situation is embarrassing American commerce, especially the Manzanares, which has been here since last June, her cargo spoiling and the delay involving a great loss to the company.

Since the proclamation of the blockade 1,375 ships of all nations, except the United States, and principally Venezuelan vessels have entered and left the Orinoco, and it is insisted that this fact constitutes the best evidence possible that the blockade is ineffective. Venezuelan gunboats have left the Orinoco unguarded for periods of two weeks at a time and the guns of the Fort Los Castillos, which were the only means of maintaining the blockade of Ciudad Bolivar after the withdrawal of the gunboats, have been removed.

Sends Minister to France.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 1.—The Venezuelan General Antonio Velutini has been appointed minister plenipotentiary to France. He will renew the diplomatic relations between the countries, which have been ruptured since 1894. The precipitate nomination of General Velutini is due to the fears entertained by the Venezuelan government of complications with Germany. The newly appointed minister is of French descent.

The news that Germany will send three warships to reinforce the German squadron in Venezuelan waters, which already numbers three vessels, has produced a feeling of apprehension in this city, and especially in official circles.

President Castro has opened all the prisons in this city and at Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo and liberated the political offenders confined therein. Among the released prisoners are Olavarria, the brother-in-law of General Matos; Acelo, the latter's confidential agent, and the leading traders in Caracas named Traviesa, Volcan and Nunez, who were arrested for complicity in the revolution. This act has produced a good impression, and it is reported that General J. M. Hernandez, called "El Mocho," and three others of the revolutionary leaders will also be liberated shortly.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

Berlin, Dec. 1.—An American chamber of commerce will be organized in this city, Dec. 4, by American business men here.

Hamburg, Dec. 1.—The German painter, Christian Allers, who, it is alleged, was responsible for the charges brought against the late Herr Krupp, has been arrested at the Swiss frontier.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 1.—Owing to the cattle embargo on New England ports the agents of the Leyland line, of Boston, are making arrangements for the housing and shipment of cattle and sheep from here. There is accommodation for 2,000 cattle and 500 sheep.

London, Dec. 1.—The colonial officers announce that after Dec. 1 no permits to proceed to the Transvaal or to the Orange River colony will be issued in England or anywhere except at South African ports. Intending passengers are advised to ascertain beforehand by writing whether they are likely to obtain permits.

THE MINE STRIKE COMMISSION.

Arbitrators Will Hold Conference Tomorrow, Prior to Resumption of Hearing on Wednesday.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 1.—A conference of the mine strike commissioners will be held here tomorrow night, prior to the resumption of hearings Wednesday morning. Commissioners Clark, Watkins and Parker are here, but doing absolutely nothing besides waiting for the return of the other commissioners. At tomorrow night's conference it is expected the commission will prepare a statement setting forth the purposes and results, or, rather, lack of results, of the 10-day recess and define specifically the position of the commission regarding the recess.

Expert accountants of both sides are going over the company's books with a view of eliminating as far as possible the contentions regarding the mathematics of the controversy, particularly as to wage figures. This was the ostensibly primal purpose of the recess. The negotiations for amicable adjustment of all the matters in dispute set back the undertaking of this work five days. As a consequence the commission will have to busy itself for a week or so at some other feature of the case while awaiting a report from the belated accountants.

CAPE MAY IMPROVEMENTS.

Company Formed to Develop Summer Resort at Outlay of $11,000,000.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Announcement was made last night that documents were filed at Trenton Saturday incorporating the East Cape May company, having for its object the improvement and development of Cape May, the oldest seashore resort in the country. A gentleman interested in the project says capitalists have bought over 4,000 acres of land in and around the city and propose making changes that will revolutionize the resort. Their plans include the building of a new city, which, they say, they intend to make one of the finest all-around resorts in the world. In this they declare they will be aided by the United States government and the Pennsylvania and Reading railroad companies. Estimates of the cost of the project point to ultimate outlay of $11,000,000.

In order to attract owners of yachts deep waterways will be formed, and the company intends constructing a lake for yachts with a water surface covering hundreds of acres. Conferences with government officials at Washington have resulted in promises to deepen Cold Spring inlet so that the largest ocean-going yachts will be able to enter the lake. It is planned to build two and perhaps three of the most modern seaside hotels. This winter 100 cottages will be built, which will cost $10,000 each. The first hotel, for which plans have been completed, will cost $1,000,000. The projectors say 3,000 men will be employed all winter on the improvements.

YOUNG CLERK KILLED.

Interior of Bank Showed Evidences of Terrible Struggle.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 1.—Wesley Reynolds, aged 16, employed as clerk in the bank at Westville, in this county, was shot and killed at an early hour yesterday morning by robbers, who had broken into the place and were about to blow open the safe. The men escaped in a stolen rig. Adolph Koontz, passing the building early yesterday morning, discovered a broken window and called to Reynolds, but received no response. He reported the circumstance to E. S. Smith, owner of the bank, who investigated, finding his clerk dead in a pool of blood on the floor. At his side were an empty revolver and another partially empty. Examination showed evidences of a desperate battle. More than 20 shots had been exchanged. From the trail of blood left by the robbers it is believed one of the men was wounded. The rig in which they escaped was abandoned six miles south of Westville. Sheriff Small and a posse of men are scouring the country for the men. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the apprehension of the robbers. Pinkerton detectives, sent to the scene by the American Bankers' association, of which the Westville bank is a member, are also working on the case. Young Reynolds received three bullet wounds, one through the head, the second through the neck and the third through the heart.

Suspected Woman Suicides.

Dexter, Me., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Hattie L. Whitten, who was arrested Saturday on the charge of having poisoned her 9-year-old daughter, from whose funeral she had just returned, committed suicide yesterday by hanging while in the custody of the deputy sheriff. Mrs. Whitten is suspected also of having caused the death of an older daughter, aged 11, on Sept. 19 last, and this body had been exhumed. Both children died suddenly when previously they had appeared to be in the best of health. Mrs. Whitten's husband also died suddenly two years ago. The children were insured for $56 and $85, respectively. As a cause of death the physicians's certificate mentioned meningitis and heart failure. An autopsy on the body of the younger girl disclosed arsenic and strychnine.

Telegraphers Get Increase.

Fon du Lac, Wis., Dec. 1.—All the telegraph operators on the Wisconsin Central railroad have been granted an increase in salary, amounting to $5 a month for every employe in that department. The advance in the wage scale has already gone into effect and the pay checks for Dec. 16 will show the increase.

Delicate Tact.

I watched them on the street car—the little mother and her manly boy of nine or ten.

Before them was seated a white haired man, whose almost entirely sightless eyes were hidden behind a pair of dark glasses. The man was trusting to instinct or intuition, whichever one may call it, more than to sight to tell him when he had reached his particular corner. Closely he bent his face to the glass and hesitatingly reached his hand toward the bell.

"Mother," whispered the manly boy, "may I not ask him where he wants to get off and help him too?"

One glance at the proud, pale face, and the little mother answered:

"No, son; I don't believe he would like to be made feel dependent."

Then as quick as thought she said in a loud tone:

"See, son; the next corner is Seventh street, then Sixth and Broadway. The hotel is on Broadway. Don't let mother miss it."

Promptly the man's hand went to the bell. Seventh was evidently the street he wanted.

I fancy that when that boy has grown to be a man any expression of the fine charity that is now latent in his heart will be accompanied by tact in action and that in looking back over the years he will remember the lessons; that they were good ones; that his mother taught him.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Good Teeth.

Don't fail to ponder occasionally on these facts: That without good teeth there cannot be thorough mastication.

Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion.

Without perfect digestion there cannot be proper assimilation.

Without proper assimilation there cannot be nutrition.

Without nutrition there cannot be health.

Without health what is life worth?

Hence the paramount importance of good teeth.

Thus Spoke the Cynic.

"Curious thing about a man with a watch is that if you see him take it out and look at it and you ask him two seconds later what time it is he never remembers. He has to look at it again."

"Yes; I've noticed that he'll always do it—if his watch is a fine one."—Chicago Tribune.

Fully Competent.

"What we require," said the managing editor, "is the services of a man capable of taking full charge of our 'Query Box.' Are you capable of answering all kinds of questions?"

"Well, I rather think I ought to be," replied the applicant. "I'm the father of eleven children."

Stuffed With Food, Starved For Air.

You can live forty days without food, but you cannot live four minutes without air. These things being true, is it wise to stuff ourselves with food and starve ourselves for want of air?—Philistine.

A Timely Suggestion.

"Now that winter with its bad weather is with us I would advise every family to provide themselves against sudden attacks of coughs and colds by keeping at hand a good cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which is the best among the many preparations for these ailments that I have on my shelves," says Mr. L. C. Neaville, the well known and popular druggist of Pittsboro, Ind. "I recommend this remedy and guarantee it to be without an equal for coughs and colds, also as a preventitive and cure for croup." A NEW WHITE HOUSE

IN EFFECT THAT IS THE RESULT OF THE RECENT CHANGES.

Executive Mansion Restored to Style of Architecture In Which It Was Originally Designed—The New Office Building and Esplanade.

When the doors of the rejuvenated White House are thrown open to the public, they will disclose practically a new interior in the historic home of the nation's chief executives.

Some adverse comment has been made concerning the new building erected south of the executive mansion for the president's offices, the objection being made that neither in its outlines nor general effect is it in keeping with the White House proper, whose exterior aspect remains unchanged.

The experts say this comment is ill advised, for when the grounds are rearranged and everything connected with the building operations is removed the entire effect of the new and the old buildings will be most attractive and harmonious.

With the new interior of the executive mansion, however, not the smallest criticism will have weight. With happiest effect it has been sought to restore the executive mansion as nearly as possible to the semblance of the early Italian renaissance, in which style it was originally designed.

The grand entrance to the east by which the public and invited guests will approach for receptions will not be completed before February, but the historic old white front portico will be in readiness before the end of this month, at which time the splendid state dining room will be completely finished.

On entering by the front portico, which after February will only be used by the president's immediate family, the effect is in its truest sense classic and stately. A Pompeiian effect has been imparted by the removal of the old stained glass screen and substitution of six white marble pillars.

The floor will be of marble, with the walls and high ceiling in white in simple yet classical treatment.

On the large wall space to the right of the entrance will be from floor to ceiling a plate glass mirror, the duplicate to which will face it from the opposite side. Before that on the right will be the colossal statue of Washington by Houdon now in the capitol at Richmond, while before the mirror at the left will, it is expected, be the St. Gaudens bronze statue of Lincoln, at present in one of the public parks in Chicago.

This placing of the statues will give an endless effect of vista and statuary. Immediately facing the entrance the spaces between two of the farther columns on either side will be marble Pompeiian vases filled with tall palms.

THE WHITE HOUSE ESPLANADE.

For the space nearest to the state apartments there has been ordered from India a splendid brilliant red rug seventy-two feet long.

Down to the floorway both long western windows open out on to the 165 foot long esplanade between the mansion proper and the new offices. This, with a three foot high wall about it, will be an ideal place to which Mrs. Roosevelt is already looking forward to giving teas and afternoon receptions in the early spring and summer.

At the far end from the house a fountain will leap high in air, while the entire length of wall all about will serve for most artistic effects in palms and tall growing plants, through which most enchanting vistas will be had in all directions and especially overlooking the monument grounds.

It is intended to heighten this present effect by having the south grounds assume the old world Italian garden plan, in which high box brushes and hedges, stone seats and fountains will play a leading part. The immediate foreground will be a massing of brilliant flowers.

This was Thomas Jefferson's idea in first designing the terraces which are now being restored at either side of the White House.

By the removal of the executive offices from the White House the mansion reverts to the uses for which it was intended—the residence of the chief executive and the social entertainment of his guests.

ORDINANCE 737.

An ordinance to assess a special tax on the real estate bounding and abutting on Springdale street, east of Jennings avenue.
